COMMONWEALTH'S FIVE-DAY SESSION IN COLOMBO ENDS

'SHADOW OF APPROACHING STORM' IS POINTED OUT

By Steven David

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The five-day British Commonwealth conference ended today with delegates declaring unanimously that much had been accomplished though results might not be apparent immediately.

At the conference's only open session, Australian Foreign Minister Percy C. Spender declared: "We live under the shadow of approaching storm. Whether it will break upon us or pass by, we feel the urgency about our deliberations and that time has not been running in our favor."

The nearest approach to a concrete result came from an Australian proposal—a determination to help southeast Asia raise its living standards to counter communism.

The conference agreed to place before the eight governments represented a recommendation to establish a consultative committee to plan a program of self-aid and mutual help in southeast Asia. The Commonwealth countries are to assess the amount of credit and technical assistance they can make available for the development program. The consultative committee is to meet in Canberra, Australian capital, within a few months. The delegates were understood to hope for United States aid in such a program.

An Australian observer contended that Australia had "stolen the show" by producing the only real plan of

18 Dead, Property Damage Widespread From N. Y. To Pacific Northwest

'STAY HOME' WARNINGS ISSUED IN 3 BIG AREAS

(By Associated Press)

Rampaging winter struck new blows Saturday with tearing winds or blinding blizzards that have lashed the country almost from end to end.

The elements were wound up to such a violent peak that "stay home" warnings were issued for persons in New York state, the Pacific Northwest and some Rocky Mountain areas. At least 18 persons were killed and damage was widespread.

Five persons perished in the Pacific northwest's worst blizzard of the country. The storm, bringing bitter cold, hurled a paralyzing mantle of snow on Washington, Oregon and Northern California and howled eastward into Idaho and Utah.

Battering winds raked the eastern half of the country spreading a trail of damage from Iowa to New York. Some buildings were unroofed, trees and utility poles were toppled and glass windows were caved in.

Floodwaters in some midwestern rivers edged higher but much colder weather moving in was expected to slow the runoff of ground water temporarily.

Western, northern and central New York was hardest hit by the destructive winds. Gusts topped hurricane velocity of 75 miles an hour and reached as high as 95 miles an hour in some places. Indianapolis clocked a 60 mile an hour sustained wind, with gusts up to 100 miles an hour.

In a special bulletin for areas of New York state, the weather bureau warned residents it would be dangerous to be outdoors. With most highways blocked by snow in the Pacific northwest, motorists were advised not to travel except in emergencies. Highway patrols in Utah cautioned motorists to stay home until storms pass in that area.

Winds reached a sustained velocity of 72 miles an hour in Rochester, N. Y., holding for five minutes. The blow was the strongest in the city's

LEGAL QUESTION HINGES ON HISS PERJURY TRIAL

Jury To Determine Importance Of Mental Experts' Testimony

JURORS MIGHT RECEIVE SOMETIME THIS WEEK

By Charles Mercer

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The second Alger Hiss perjury trial may decide a unique legal question as well as the fate of the former high State department official.

For the first time, a jury—which is expected to receive the case next week—must decide what importance it should place on the testimony of mental experts.

The trial was marked this week by the appearance on the witness stand of a defense psychiatrist and a psychologist. Both characterized Hiss' chief accuser, Whittaker Chambers, as a "psychopathic personality."

Hiss was indicted on two perjury counts in December, 1948, after he denied passing secret state documents to Chambers, a self-styled courier for a prewar Soviet spy ring. The first Hiss trial ended in a jury disagreement.

The appearance of Dr. Carl Binger, a New York psychiatrist, and Dr. Henry Alexander Murray, Harvard University psychologist, marked the first time that expert psychiatric testimony has been permitted in the federal courts in an effort to impeach a witness.

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard said in permitting the two to testify that it was up to the jury of eight

SHRINERS BEGIN DRIVE FOR DIMES

Lead First Day Of Campaign To Record Breaking Collection Of $1,235

The North Louisiana Shriners Club, led by Fred Hoffman, took in $1,235 in the first day of the March of Dimes campaign, breaking the record set up last year in the emergency drive to obtain funds to fight the dread disease of polio.

The Shriners worked diligently all day yesterday, oftentimes in a light rainfall, asking for donations for the drive. They held down strategic positions on DeSiard street, and dressed in their red caps and tassels, approached motorists as they guided through heavy traffic, rang bells and made announcements from loud speakers.

The drive will continue in Ouachita parish and throughout the nation until the end of the month. A well organized street collection in charge of the civic and service clubs of the community has been planned and is now in operation.

Two Brothers Trapped

Rescuers Dig To Free Two Miners Entombed In Shaft

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Jan. 14.—(AP)—One of two brothers trapped in a mine cavein talked with weary rescuers early tonight and gave instructions as to how to find him.

John Becker, a veteran miner and member of the rescue party, said he heard the voice of Joseph Burda, 30, a miner entombed by a collapse of earth yesterday.

Becker said Burda heard the power shovel rescuers are using to scoop the earth away. The trapped miner asked that the shovel be placed above a chute some 40 to 50 feet from where the rescuers are digging a shaft parallel to the slope which is closed. Becker said the chute is about 60 feet from the surface.

No word has been heard of Burda's brother, Edward, 25, who was caught in the cavein.

After Becker relayed the information from Joseph, rescuers feverishly renewed their efforts. Earlier they had heard three dynamite blasts underground.

The first blast was heard shortly before noon today, a second less than an hour later and a third at about 3 p.m.

By that time the 'dozer had dug as deeply as was safe, and one of the rescuers said he thought they were "within a few feet" of the trapped men.

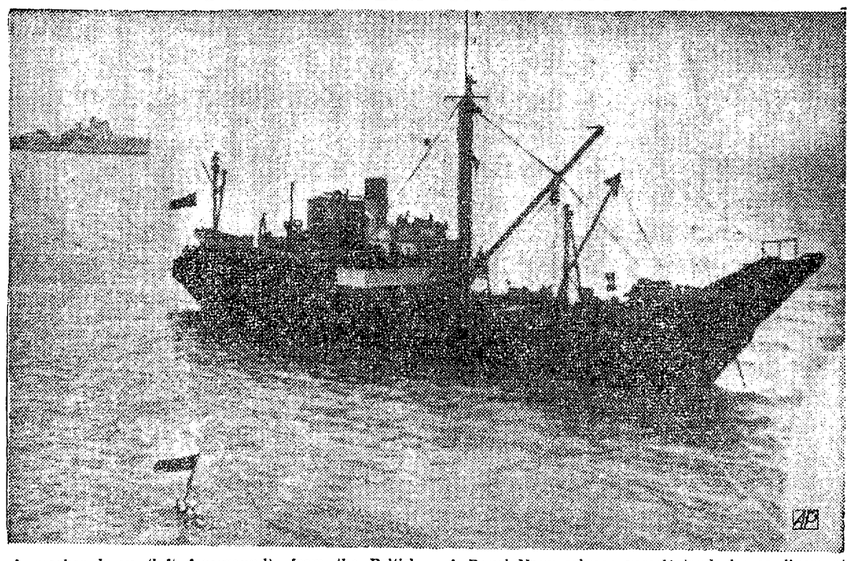

State mine inspector John Morgan of Frackville, Pa., estimated the brothers were trapped about 120 feet underground. At first he expressed doubt they they could reach them in less than several days.

But the bulldozer made the job much faster.

Morgan said he thought the men—or one, if only one escaped—had

WHERE SUBMARINE LIES ON BOTTOM OF THAMES

A marker buoy (left foreground), from the British submarine Truculent marks the area in the Thames Estuary east of London where the rammed undersea craft lies on the bottom 54 feet below the surface after sinking in a collision with the Swedish tanker Divina.

A Royal Navy salvage vessel stands by as divers attempt to find signs of life aboard the submarine. It is not known whether the buoy was jarred loose by the impact of the collision or released by trapped crewmen. (AP Wirephoto by radio from London).

ONLY DEAD STILL IN HULL OF SUB

64 Set As Official Death Toll By British Admiralty; Salvage Delayed

CHATHAM, Eng., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Frogmen confirmed today that only the dead remain in the smashed and silent hull of the submarine Truculent, but one seaman officially listed as a victim turned up alive.

He had been given leave of absence because of illness in his family.

The admiralty, revising its figures again, announced that only 64 men were lost with the submarine, which sank in the silty Thames estuary Thursday night after a colliison with the Swedish tanker Divina.

The revision was made in a final statement listing the 10 known dead and the 54 missing officers, seamen and dockyard workers. Fifteen were rescued. The name of the seamen who missed the trial run that ended in disaster was not made public. The admiralty did not wish people to bother him, even with congratulations, while there is sickness in his home. The admiralty first said 76 men were aboard, then 80.

Thickening fog settled tonight over the spot where several hundred sailors and salvage experts worked on preparations to raise the submarine.

The weather made navigation so dangerous the Navy decided not to bring ashore the rescue and salvage workers, due for relief after many hours on the scene.

While fog hindered movement of the dozen vessels clustered together over the Truculent, the water remained calm. Divers expected to work through the night.

"But it's no longer a rescue operation, it's just salvage now," said a naval officer.

Meanwhile the 643-ton Divina was released from the arrest under which it was held at the port of Sheerness.

A writ of release was obtained from a Sheerness court and an admiralty order that the vessel must not be moved, which had been nailed to its mast, was taken down.

An admiralty spokesman said the arrest of a vessel in such circumstances is a concern of local authori-

Winecoff Settlement Near After 3 Years

ATLANTA, Jan. 14. — (AP) — After more than three years of litigation, 149 damage suits for deaths and injuries in the 1946 Winecoff Hotel fire were virtually settled today.

Fulton Superior Court Judge Virlyn B. Moore accepted a receiver's report which indicated the damage judgments will be paid off at the rate of slightly less than seven cents on the dollar.

With damages fixed in non-jury proceedings in all of the 149 cases, the total awards came to $3,465,038. The receiver's report listed a total of $285,760.64 in assets. From this total the judge awarded $54,600 in attorneys' and receivers' fees leaving a total of $231,160.64 to be probated among the judgments.

One of the receivers said that checks would be ready for the plaintiffs in about 30 days. He said it would take approximately a month to prorate the cash awards from the damage judgments and to clear up small legal ends.

The Winecoff burned Dec. 7, 1946, claiming 119 lives and injuring scores of other occupants.

Miners Defy Lewis' Back To Work Order

Refuse To Return To Pits Monday On Three-Day-Week Basis; Spokesman For One Group Says 'Five Days Or Nothing'

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 14.—(AP)—An important bloc of striking United Mine Workers today defied tradition and voted down John L. Lewis' suggestion that they go back to work Monday.

Exact figures are not available but at least nine locals representing more than 11,000 bituminus diggers balked at their union leader's order to end a week-old strike.

"Five days or nothing," their spokesmen angrily declared.

Interpretations of the action differed. A few observers close to the coal situation regarded the move with some suspicion.

But to the majority it is simply a month's old rebellion in their contract fight that finally burst through the traditional shell of miner silence.

However, for the operators and a coal-starved public there is little satisfaction in the miners' move.

The nation's soft coal supply is dangerously low because of a series of strikes last year and the three-day-work week instituted by Lewis in December.

Reports from throughout the country indicate that only the protracted and unseasonable mild weather has prevented hardship in many areas.

Included among those who voted to continue the strike are employes of these mines:

West Virginia: Pursglove (Pittsburgh Consolidated Coal Co.), 215; Osage (Pittsburgh Consol) 325.

A Pittsburgh Consol official said two locals in Harrison County, W. Va., where his firm has mines had voted to return to the pits on Monday.

Decision generally affecting all diggers in northern West Virginia is expected tomorrow when 300 local U. M. W. officials meet at Grant Town.

Meetings of other locals in western

WILD OUACHITA THREATENS ARK.

Numerous Families Evacuate Lowland Areas Around Calion

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Flood dangers mounted in Arkansas today as four rivers, swollen by melting ice and heavy rains, kept rising.

The turbulent Ouachita river, already out of its banks at several points in south Arkansas, began creeping into Calion, a small lumber town near El Dorado, late today.

Numerous families living in the community's low section were evacuated before nightfall. Mayor Henry Epps said the water was rising so fast he expected flood waters to reach other sections of the town. The river was reported about four feet above the 27 foot flood stage.

Trouble spots developed on three other rivers earlier in the day.

The lower White surged over its banks at several spots in east Arkansas and forced many families from their homes.

At Judsonia, the Little Red was about five feet above flood level of 30 feet. It may go higher over the weekend.

In northeast Arkansas, grim-faced U. S. engineers and volunteer workers battled the St. Francis in attempts to prevent more havoc and misery.

Critical areas along the White river were at Des Arc, De Valls Bluff, and Cotton Plant.

Red Cross aid, including emergency stoves and tents, was rushed to the White river section today.

More than 200 families were routed

Midget Submarine Is Tested In Florida

MARATHON, Fla., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A midget submarine with tractor treads is being tested here for its possibilities as an explorer, rescuer and—perhaps—treasure hunter.

The $50,000 two-man sub was built by Halley H. Hamlin of Cortland, N. Y., a successful inventor. He was assisted by Orville sodders of Homer, N. Y., and Bill Edwards, former navy deep sea diver.

The tiny submersible can do things no other submarine can do. Only 12 feet long, it can sink to the bottom, creep around on its tanklike tractor treads, remain submerged for 64 hours with one man or 32 hours with full two-man crew, and make a 4 1/2 knots for four hours—enough to cover 20 mies with one battery charge.

Hamlin said he was particularly interested in developing a little sub that will save the lives of trapped crews in sunken submarines. The tiny undersea craft can be redesigned to take the place of the diving bell as a means of escape, he said.

State Department Orders All Personnel From China

135 American Foreign Service Officers Recalled; Make Provision For All U. S. Citizens In Communist Held Nation To Return

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—In contempt of American protests, the Chinese Communists today swarmed in and took over the United States consulate office in Peiping.

American patience snapped.

The state department immediately ordered all its official personnel out of Red China. It reportedly acted with President Truman's direct approval.

It blasted at the Communists' latest anti-American move as "a flagrant violation of our treaty rights and of the most elementary standards of international usage and conduct."

Angry U. S. lawmakers denounced the invasion and seizure of American property in the strongest terms. Republicans redoubled their criticism of the administration's handling of Far Eastern affairs. Several said this latest insult should rule out all possibility of U. S. recognition of the Chinese Communists regime.

Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.) declared bluntly:

"We should classify the Chinese Communists as outlaws and cease to do business with them."

Senator Knowland (R-Calif.), riled for months by the state department's handling of the tense Far Eastern situation, demanded the resignation of all administration officials responsible for American policy there.

He said he was thinking principally of W. Walton Butterworth, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs. Knowland added, however:

"If the policies of the Far Eastern division are approved by Secretary of State Acheson, the shoe fits him, too."

The state department broke the news of the Peiping consulate seizure in a lengthy announcement, documented with copies of protests filed in advance with Chinese Communist generals.

Orders for the seizure of some French and Dutch property in Peiping also were reported to have been issued by the Communists. Officials here did not know whether those orders had been carried out.

The United States is recalling 135 American foreign service officers and their dependents. Of those, 36 are in Peiping, where Consul General O. Edmund Clubb has been in charge.

The state department said the seizure of the consulate office in that Chinese Communist capital was carried out quietly and without violence. None of the Americans had been arrested; all were said to be safe.

The gravity of the Americans' situation began to become apparent Jan. 6 when the Communist military authorities issued a proclamation calling for seizure of former foreign military barracks in Peiping. Those barracks, long since converted into offices or civilian living quarters in the case of the United States, have been held by foreign governments under treaties running back a half century to the time of the Boxer rebellion.

The Chinese Communists contend those are "unequal" treaties and the proclamation said such pacts "have now been abolished."

Between January 6 and today the United States had repeatedly protested to the Communist authorities against their announced plan to take over the American property. At American request, the British government had also intervened in the case.

Communist authorities were told in advance that if they went through with the seizure the United States would withdraw all American official personnel from Communist China.

This personnel is divided among the cities of Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai, Tsingtao and Nanking. Nanking is the former Nationalist capital of

Former 'Assistant To President' Roosevelt Seeks Demo Nomination

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes announced tonight he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of South Carolina this year.

Byrnes, once known as "assistant president" to Franklin D. Roosevelt, has served in both houses of congress.

His statement said:

"I will be a candidate for governor. I will seek the nomination of the Democratic party of South Carolina.

"When I left the service of the national government in 1947 I fully intended not to return to actual participation in political affairs. I adherred to this intention until last spring when the trend of political events caused me to express my views of policies affecting the state and nation.

"During the last six months I have been urged by many people in all walks of life in the state to be a candidate for governor. The people of this state have been good to me, and I have decided to be a candidate, in the hope, if elected, I can be of service to them."

The primary will be held July 11. Byrnes is the third candidate to an-

N. Y. Bookies Head For Tall Timber As O'Dwyer Moves In

By Ed Creagh

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—It sure is lonesome along Broadway.

Parlay Pete, the eminent bookmaker is visiting friends in the south. He left no forwarding address.

Nickelnose Fred, who likewise accepts wagers, has moved out of New York. Needed better climate, Nickelnose said.

And a citizen known as Gee-Gee was last seen heading for Grand Central Station with a story about going to see an aunt in the mid-west, who is very, very sick.

Now those who are acquainted with Gee-Gee know that he has no aunt in the midwest, and in fact no relatives anywhere who will admit they are his relatives. But it wasn't considered polite this week to question a man too closely about where he was going.

For the heat was on, the world's largest police force was in turmoil, the anti-gambling forces were in full cry and the bookmakers and dice-game operators were taking to the tall timber—for a few days, anyway.

And on top of everything else, Mayor William O'Dwyer started a grade A public row of saying he saw no reason why it shouldn't be made as legal to place a bet as to buy a can of soup at the corner grocery.

The mayor asked why not let the state run it and tax it? This, said O'Dwyer, would save millions of dollars a year in local taxes, and it would also bar underworld types from organized gambling.

The great gambling crackdown started last week-end. It wasn't a matter of wholesale arrests. It was an announcement that 51 inspectors and deputy inspectors were being

SHRINERS BEGIN DRIVE FOR DIMES

The North Louisiana Shriners Club, led by Fred Hoffman, took in $1,235 in the first day of the March of Dimes campaign, breaking the record set up last year in the emergency drive to obtain funds to fight the dread disease of polio.

They held down strategic positions on DeSiard street, and dressed in their red caps and tassels, approached motorists as they guided through heavy traffic, rang bells and made announcements from loud speakers.

The drive will continue in Ouachita parish and throughout the nation until the end of the month. A well organized street collection in charge of the civic and service clubs of the community has been planned and is now in operation.

In a statement regarding the drive, Miss Freida Mickel, campaign director, stated that it is imperative that all know the seriousness of today's

Two Brothers Trapped

Rescuers Dig To Free Two Miners Entombed In Shaft

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Jan. 14.—(AP)—One of two brothers trapped in a mine cavein talked with weary rescuers early tonight and gave instructions as to how to find him.

John Becker, a veteran miner and member of the rescue party, said he heard the voice of Joseph Burda, 30, a miner entombed by a collapse of earth yesterday.

Becker said Burda heard the power shovel rescuers are using to scoop the earth away. The trapped miner asked that the shovel be placed above a chute some 40 to 50 feet from where the rescuers are digging a shaft parallel to the slope which is closed. Becker said the chute is about 60 feet from the surface.

No word has been heard of Burda's brother, Edward, 25, who was caught in the cavein.

After Becker relayed the information from Joseph, rescuers feverishly renewed their efforts. Earlier they had heard three dynamite blasts underground.

The first blast was heard shortly before noon today, a second less than an hour later and a third at about 3 p.m.

By that time the 'dozer had dug as deeply as was safe, and one of the rescuers said he thought they were "within a few feet" of the trapped men.

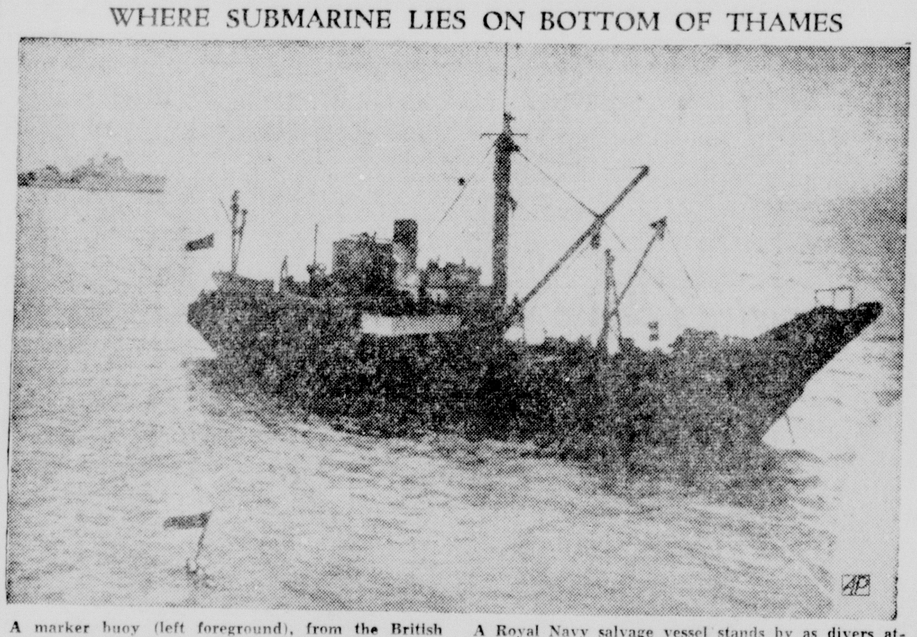

State mine inspector John Morgan of Frackville, Pa., estimated the brothers were trapped about 120 feet underground. At first he expressed doubt they they could reach them in less than several days.

But the bulldozer made the job much faster.

Morgan said he thought the men—or one, if only one escaped—had

WHERE SUBMARINE LIES ON BOTTOM OF THAMES

A marker buoy (left foreground), from the British submarine Truculent marks the area in the Thames Estuary east of London where the rammed undersea craft lies on the bottom 54 feet below the surface after sinking in a collision with the Swedish tanker Divina. A Royal Navy salvage vessel stands by as divers attempt to find signs of life aboard the submarine. It is not known whether the buoy was jarred loose by the impact of the collision or released by trapped crewmen. (AP Wirephoto by radio from London).

ONLY DEAD STILL IN HULL OF SUB

64 Set As Official Death Toll By British Admiralty; Salvage Delayed

CHATHAM, Eng., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Frogmen confirmed today that only the dead remain in the smashed and silent hull of the submarine Truculent, but one seaman officially listed as a victim turned up alive.

He had been given leave of absence because of illness in his family.

The admiralty, revising its figures again, announced that only 64 men were lost with the submarine, which sank in the silty Thames estuary Thursday night after a collision with the Swedish tanker Divina.

The revision was made in a final statement listing the 10 known dead and the 54 missing officers, seamen and dockyard workers. Fifteen were rescued. The name of the seamen who missed the trial run that ended in disaster was not made public. The admiralty did not wish people to bother him, even with congratulations, while there is sickness in his home. The admiralty first said 76 men were aboard, then 80.

Thickening fog settled tonight over the spot where several hundred sailors and salvage experts worked on preparations to raise the submarine.

The weather made navigation so dangerous the Navy decided not to bring ashore the rescue and salvage workers, due for relief after many hours on the scene.

While fog hindered movement of the dozen vessels clustered together over the Truculent, the water remained calm. Divers expected to work through the night.

"But it's no longer a rescue operation, it's just salvage now," said a naval officer.

Meanwhile the 643-ton Divina was released from the arrest under which it was held at the port of Sheerness.

A writ of release was obtained from a Sheerness court and an admiralty order that the vessel must not be moved, which had been nailed to its mast, was taken down.

An admiralty spokesman said the arrest of a vessel in such circumstances is a concern of local authori-

Winecoff Settlement Near After 3 Years

ATLANTA, Jan. 14. — (AP) — After more than three years of litigation, 149 damage suits for deaths and injuries in the 1946 Winecoff Hotel fire were virtually settled today.

Fulton Superior Court Judge Virlyn B. Moore accepted a receiver's report which indicated the damage judgments will be paid off at the rate of slightly less than seven cents on the dollar.

With damages fixed in non-jury proceedings in all of the 149 cases, the total awards came to $3,465,038. The receiver's report listed a total of $285,760.64 in assets. From this total the judge awarded $54,600 in attorneys' and receivers' fees leaving a total of $231,160.64 to be probated among the judgments.

One of the receivers said that checks would be ready for the plaintiffs in about 30 days. He said it would take approximately a month to prorate the cash awards from the damage judgments and to clear up small legal ends.

The Winecoff burned Dec. 7, 1946, claiming 119 lives and injuring scores of other occupants.

Miners Defy Lewis' Back To Work Order

Refuse To Return To Pits Monday On Three-Day-Week Basis; Spokesman For One Group Says 'Five Days Or Nothing'

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 14.—(AP)—An important bloc of striking United Mine Workers today defied tradition and voted down John L. Lewis' suggestion that they go back to work Monday.

Exact figures are not available but at least nine locals representing more than 11,000 bituminus diggers balked at their union leader's order to end a week-old strike.

"Five days or nothing," their spokesmen angrily declared.

Interpretations of the action differed. A few observers close to the coal situation regarded the move with some suspicion.

But to the majority it is simply a month's old rebellion in their contract fight that finally burst through the traditional shell of miner silence.

However, for the operators and a coal-starved public there is little satisfaction in the miners' move.

The nation's soft coal supply is dangerously low because of a series of strikes last year and the three-day-work week instituted by Lewis in December.

Reports from throughout the country indicate that only the protracted and unseasonable mild weather has prevented hardship in many areas.

Included among those who voted to continue the strike are employes of these mines:

West Virginia: Pursglove (Pittsburgh Consolidated Coal Co.), 215; Osage (Pittsburgh Consol) 325.

A Pittsburgh Consol official said two locals in Harrison County, W. Va., where his firm has mines had voted to return to the pits on Monday.

Decision generally affecting all diggers in northern West Virginia is expected tomorrow when 300 local U. M. W. officials meet at Grant Town.

Meetings of other locals in western

WILD OUACHITA THREATENS ARK.

Numerous Families Evacuate Lowland Areas Around Calion

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Flood dangers mounted in Arkansas today as four rivers, swollen by melting ice and heavy rains, kept rising.

The turbulent Ouachita river, already out of its banks at several points in south Arkansas, began creeping into Calion, a small lumber town near El Dorado, late today.

Numerous families living in the community's low section were evacuated before nightfall. Mayor Henry Epps said the water was rising so fast he expected flood waters to reach other sections of the town. The river was reported about four feet above the 27 foot flood stage.

Trouble spots developed on three other rivers earlier in the day.

The lower White surged over its banks at several spots in east Arkansas and forced many families from their homes.

At Judsonia, the Little Red was about five feet above flood level of 30 feet. It may go higher over the weekend.

In northeast Arkansas, grim-faced U. S. engineers and volunteer workers battled the St. Francis in attempts to prevent more havoc and misery.

Critical areas along the White river were at Des Arc, De Valls Bluff, and Cotton Plant.

Red Cross aid, including emergency stoves and tents, was rushed to the White river section today.

More than 200 families were routed

Midget Submarine Is Tested In Florida

MARATHON, Fla., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A midget submarine with tractor treads is being tested here for its possibilities as an explorer, rescuer and—perhaps—treasure hunter.

The $50,000 two-man sub was built by Halley H. Hamlin of Cortland, N. Y., a successful inventor. He was assisted by Orville sodders of Homer, N. Y., and Bill Edwards, former navy deep sea diver.

The tiny submersible can do things no other submarine can do. Only 12 feet long, it can sink to the bottom, creep around on its tanklike tractor treads, remain submerged for 64 hours with one man or 32 hours with full two-man crew, and make a 4 1/2 knots for four hours—enough to cover 20 mies with one battery charge.

Hamlin said he was particularly interested in developing a little sub that will save the lives of trapped crews in sunken submarines. The tiny undersea craft can be redesigned to take the place of the diving bell as a means of escape, he said.

State Department Orders All Personnel From China

135 American Foreign Service Officers Recalled; Make Provision For All U. S. Citizens In Communist Held Nation To Return

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—In contempt of American protests, the Chinese Communists today swarmed in and took over the United States consulate office in Peiping.

American patience snapped.

The state department immediately ordered all its official personnel out of Red China. It reportedly acted with President Truman's direct approval.

It blasted at the Communists' latest anti-American move as "a flagrant violation of our treaty rights and of the most elementary standards of international usage and conduct."

Angry U. S. lawmakers denounced the invasion and seizure of American property in the strongest terms. Republicans redoubled their criticism of the administration's handling of Far Eastern affairs. Several said this latest insult should rule out all possibility of U. S. recognition of the Chinese Communists regime.

Senator Kefauver (D-Tenn.) declared bluntly:

"We should classify the Chinese Communists as outlaws and cease to do business with them."

Senator Knowland (R-Calif.), riled for months by the state department's handling of the tense Far Eastern situation, demanded the resignation of all administration officials responsible for American policy there.

He said he was thinking principally of W. Walton Butterworth, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs. Knowland added, however:

"If the policies of the Far Eastern division are approved by Secretary of State Acheson, the shoe fits him, too."

The state department broke the news of the Peiping consulate seizure in a lengthy announcement, documented with copies of protests filed in advance with Chinese Communist generals.

Orders for the seizure of some French and Dutch property in Peiping also were reported to have been issued by the Communists. Officials here did not know whether those orders had been carried out.

The United States is recalling 135 American foreign service officers and their dependents. Of those, 36 are in Peiping, where Consul General O. Edmund Clubb has been in charge.

The state department said the seizure of the consulate office in that Chinese Communist capital was carried out quietly and without violence. None of the Americans had been arrested; all were said to be safe.

The gravity of the Americans' situation began to become apparent Jan. 6 when the Communist military authorities issued a proclamation calling for seizure of former foreign military barracks in Peiping. Those barracks, long since converted into offices or civilian living quarters in the case of the United States, have been held by foreign governments under treaties running back a half century to the time of the Boxer rebellion.

The Chinese Communists contend those are "unequal" treaties and the proclamation said such pacts "have now been abolished."

Between January 6 and today the United States had repeatedly protested to the Communist authorities against their announced plan to take over the American property. At American request, the British government had also intervened in the case.

Communist authorities were told in advance that if they went through with the seizure the United States would withdraw all American official personnel from Communist China.

This personnel is divided among the cities of Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai, Tsingtao and Nanking. Nanking is the former Nationalist capital of

BYRNES TO RUN FOR S. C. GOV.

Former 'Assistant To President' Roosevelt Seeks Demo Nomination

SPARTANBURG, S. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes announced tonight he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of South Carolina this year.

Byrnes, once known as "assistant president" to Franklin D. Roosevelt, has served in both houses of congre

His statement said:

"I will be a candidate for governor. I will seek the nomination of the Democratic party of South Carolina.

"When I left the service of the national government in 1947 I fully intended not to return to actual participation in political affairs. I adherred to this intention until last spring when the trend of political events caused me to express my views of policies affecting the state and nation.

"During the last six months I have been urged by many people in all walks of life in the state to be a candidiate for governor. The people of this state have been good to me, and I have decided to be a candidate, in the hope, if elected, I can be of service to them."

The primary will be held July 11. Byrnes is the third candidate to an-

BARGAIN DAYS ARRANGED HERE

Merchants To Slash Prices On Monday And Tuesday Sales

Residents of the Twin Cities and the surrounding trade area will have an unusual opportunity to make purchases at substantially reduced prices Monday and Tuesday when members of the Chamber of Commerce's retail merchants division conduct bargan days as the final event of their 1949 merchandizing program. Planned early in 1949, but carrying over to January 1950, the bargain days scheduled for Monday and Tuesday represent the last big event on the calendar prior to the formulation of the 1950 program.

On these two days, prices on a host of items will be drastically reduced to clear the shelves for the new stocks now arriving. Retailers throughout the community are preparing to make this one of the biggest sales events

Heat's On Boys

N. Y. Bookies Head For Tall Timber As O'Dwyer Moves In

By Ed Creagh

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—It sure is lonesome along Broadway.

Parlay Pete, the eminent bookmaker is visiting friends in the south. He left no forwarding address.

Nickelnose Fred, who likewise accepts wagers, has moved out of New York. Needed better climate, Nickelnose said.

And a citizen known as Gee-Gee was last seen heading for Grand Central Station with a story about going to see an aunt in the mid-west, who is very, very sick.

Now those who are acquainted with Gee-Gee know that he has no aunt in the midwest, and in fact no relatives anywhere who will admit they are his relatives. But it wasn't considered polite this week to question a man too closely about where he was going.

For the heat was on, the world's largest police force was in turmoil, the anti-gambling forces were in full cry and the bookmakers and dice-game operators were taking to the tall timber—for a few days, anyway.

And on top of everything else, Mayor William O'Dwyer started a grade A public row of saying he saw no reason why it shouldn't be made as legal to place a bet as to buy a can of soup at the corner grocery.

The mayor asked why not let the state run it and tax it? This, said O'Dwyer, would save millions of dollars a year in local taxes, and it would also bar underworld types from organized gambling.

The great gambling crackdown started last week-end. It wasn't a matter of wholesale arrests. It was an announcement that 51 inspectors and deputy inspectors were being

Truman's Rosy Plan

President Truman apparently tries to spell out "a 50-year plan for the United States" in his latest message to congress. He says that the first 50 years of this 20th century were the hardest—what with two world wars and everything. But the next 50 years—oh boy and oh baby—are going to be just dandy, as the man outlines it.

There isn't anything the Republicans can cook up that will compete with this. They might as well quit trying. The president's message is as full of prophecy, uplift and noble intentions as any collection of New Year's resolutions ever assembled. The script reads like a certain Sunday night radio oracle's predictions of things to come. And if the president's predictions also turn out to be 83.1416 per cent accurate, what a great, wide, wonderful world it's going to be that your children's children will live in.

Maybe Mr. Truman thinks he's going to run for president in 2000 A. D., too, and that this is his first campaign speech for the election.

This message will probably be criticized by the president's opponents as being utterly fantastic dream stuff. But the man could be right. And at this turning point in the 20th century, when there is so much to be scared and gloomy about, it is nice to know that the chief executive can look at the world through his rose-colored bifocals and find that everything is jake.

Mr. Stalin and the Moscow planners never offered the comrades anything nearly as good as what Mr. Truman promises. The pie he puts in the sky would really be worth waiting for, if it could be had by the year 2000.

In international affairs, there will be world peace. The atom will be under international control. The United Nations will be a going concern and will have forces to preserve international law and order. World commerce will be regulated under the new International Trade Organization. Other nations will share America's prosperity through an expanded point four program of technical assistance to underdeveloped countries. Communism will be suppressed, not by force of arms, but by an appeal to the minds and hearts of men.

All these blessings showered down on others will be multiplied by three or four at home. The president predicts there will be a fairer distribution of wealth. Business will have greater incentives to produce.

The farmers will have their income supported by the Brannan plan or some such. Labor will produce more and get a greater reward. There will be increased freedom from poverty and drudgery—presumably through more pay for less work.

The standard of living will rise. Middle-income and low-income families will be able to get cheaper housing. Unemployment insurance rates will be higher. Old-age insurance and other social security benefits will be greater.

There will be pensions. There will be more aid for education and medical insurance for all. More displaced persons will be admitted and civil rights equality will prevail.

Meanwhile, business monopolies will be cured. Small business will get a better break and there will be more business. The Taft-Hartley act will be repealed. Taxes will be rejiggered so that the inequities will be reduced.

The rivers will all be reorganized by law and will produce more power, even in New England. There will be a National Science Foundation to get more power out of the atom and take minerals out of sea water.

But just as there is always one blemish on every peach, there is one thing that the president does not explain in his forecast for the millennium year of 2000 A. D. That is how the country is going to get rid of its national debt of $255,000,000,000. In fact, the president doesn't even mention the national debt once in his whole message.

This is strange, because this national debt is the most overpowering monstrosity on the economic landscape. Any realistic appraisal of the state of the Union today should take the national debt into consideration and say something about it.

If it can be assumed that the national debt, like the $255,000,000,000 national product, is to be four times greater in the year 2000 than it is today—why then the national debt will be something over a cool trillion dollars. That, presumably, is about what it would take to pay for all these luxuries.

And if there's anybody around who wants to live for another 50 years just for the sake of seeing what a $1,000,000,000,000 national debt looks like, he's welcome to it.

Bologna is 10 cents a pound cheaper than it was a year ago, it was revealed on the day President Truman delivered his "State of the Union" message to congress.

Now that the annual argument about whether children should be told the truth about Santa Claus has again resulted in a draw, what about telling it to the taxpayers?

Average American family saved $75 in 1949, but if the money is retained for any appreciable length of time it will hardly buy a ton of coal.

Certain astronomers claim this actually is the year 1954. If it's necessary to lose four years, why not make it retroactive?

Medical journal says 25 per cent of women are overweight. These, of course, are round figures.

Speaking of going underground, there are all those eggs in a Kansas cave and the gold at Fort Knox.

Work has no effect on the length of life, a scientist claims. Perhaps to the man who works life just seems longer.

Washington announces family savings average $75 a year, and Truman thinks new taxes could absorb this amount.

DOWN SOUTH

"LEST WE FORGET"

As the twentieth century reaches the half way point, the one question mark that looms above all others is the kind of government we shall choose for ourselves for the years ahead. For there is no question but that we stand at the crossroads in this decision.

Benjamin Franklin said to the people as he came out of Constitution Hall back in the early days of our nation, "You now have a republic, if you can keep it." That we are nearer than ever before in our history to the time when we must decide whether we shall keep our Republic is very clear to anyone who will view the facts.

Lord Macauley wrote from London in 1857 to a friend in New York predicting that our form of government would fall of its own weight in the course of time. He wrote, "Either some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of government with a strong hand, or your republic will be as fearfully plundered and laid waste by barbarians in the twentieth century as the Roman empire was in the fifth; with this difference, that the Huns and Vandals who ravaged the Roman empire came from without, and that your Huns and Vandals will have been engendered within your country by your own institutions."

This prediction of 93 years ago has been supplemented in recent months by such sound statesmen as former President Hoover, General Eisenhower, and former Secretary of State Byrnes. They, and many others, have warned us that our greatest dangers are from within and not from without, that the creeping paralysis of socialism will take us unawares through the backdoor. They make it very clear that when the people shift all responsibility for their welfare to the government they are repudiating the fundamental principle of freedom on which our nation is founded.

Yet the very thing that Lord Macauley feared happens when, as Secretary Byrnes said recently, "the people have been misled into regarding the treasury as a Christmas tree with the president and the members of congress playing the role of Santa Claus." For this is a republic, and the majority of the people rule. So, when we have 19,300,000 persons drawing regular checks from the federal government, and an additional 6,400,000 persons receiving regular payments from state and local governments, we have a total of 25,700,000 now receiving public checks—or almost half as many as the total number of persons employed in this country. When the government plays Santa Claus, who, in a Republic, is going to play Santa Claus to the government?

No wonder that Benjamin Franklin indicated a doubt that we would be able to keep our republic. No wonder Lord Macauley flatly predicted we would lose our republic. No wonder there are those among us now who can see that the hour of decision is drawing nigh. For it seem to be a fixed trait of human nature to ignore all precept of history and all present example. The Pilgrims at Plymouth, 330 years ago, tried community ownership and nearly starved to death; they turned to individual enterprise and "God gave them plentie." Marie Antoinette, of France, tried a "spending for prosperity" scheme 257 years ago; the national debt of France soared, the monarchy collapsed, and Marie lost her head. The Romans had the highest civilization of their time and traded it for government "benefits"; there were more persons receiving tax money than paying taxes when Jesus Christ rebuked His tormentors in the Roman province of Palestine with "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's." In our day and time, New Zealand and Australia and now Great Britain have proved to us that it make no difference whether people believe in socialism or not, it just will not work. They have shown us that it violates certain fundamental laws of economics and morals that simply will not be violated.

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget!"

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK—Governor Dewey recently pardoned a life-term criminal because the man had voluntarily risked his life by exchanging blood with a little girl who was suffering from leukemia. The man was found guilty of murder in the first degree, 18 years ago, and was sentenced to death, but his sentence was commuted to life. He was, according to the jury, guilty of furnishing the guns used in a robbery which resulted in the death of a garageman. Under the law, such an accessory is as guilty as the actual killers.

Dewey followed a well-established custom among governors. The prisoner was not obliged to risk his life as he did, and a pardon was thought to be a suitable reward. As the laws now stand, I think substantial justice was done.

However, this is an appropriate time to restate the doctrine I have long preached, and shall continue to advocate, with regard to criminals of a certain class and their debt to humanity.

I believe that a man who deliberately kills any human being maliciously has forfeited his right to live. The existing laws agree with me so far.

But the custom now is to kill the man who killed the man. This is all right, but not very.

I would have uniform laws in all states regarding persons convicted of murder in the first degree, which means deliberate and malicious murder. This convicted person should be given his choice of immediate death by eletrocution or life imprisionment. But he must understand that life imprisionment carries with it the right of the state to use him as an experimental agent in medical science, for the purpose of saving human life.

Thus the murderer would be given an opportunity to pay back the life he took, in a manner of speaking, by saving another life, or many lives.

I think most murderers would choose to do that, if they are sensible persons they must want to save a life to pay, in a fashion, for the life they took.

The whole system, of course, would have to be safeguarded by supervision of the American Medical Association, the Rockefeller Foundation, or some such responsible body.

If this system were in effect I believe that the common cold could be wholly abolished in 20 years, cancer in twice that length of time, and most heart ailments in varying periods of time. Such a system, in use throughout the United States, might raise the average span of useful life to more than a century.

But I do not expect any politician to advocate the idea, ever.

Jim Stewart, Wichita insurance man with whom I went to school, sends me a blueprint of his new home. It looks much too big for a bachelor, as Jim was the last time I heard from him. Must be something in the wind . . . Bill Weiss, with whom I have been on some interesting assignments, sends cheery words from Detroit . . . Cartoonist Lank Leonard, Chace Conley, Bill Kelly of the American Magazine. Artist Gloria Noble, and Norman Kent, who owns more neckties than any other person I know, send good news and Cordial wishes from New York.

This mail also includes a note from Laird Archer, of the near East Foundation, Athens, Greece, saying that peace at long last prevails there. Laird and I roomed together when I was in school, and we both wore patches on our pants. Laird had the advantage as he could sew. I had to send my pants home to mother to be patched. She did a better job than Laird, I may add.

People join the church from various motives, and many attend the services and support the church financially, who have never joined it at all, or professed any vital experience of conversion, such as transformed the early Christians.

It would be easy to dwell upon the adverse aspects of the church to sound a very pessimistic note, but what impresses me is the number and extent of the true fellowship of believers, the Christians whose life is one of prayer, of meditation upon the Scriptures, of communion with Christ and with one another, living lives of consecrated service, manifesting good works and love of their fellowmen.

It is the continuing evidence of Christ's presence and power, the deepest, finest, strongest thing in all the world. Would that there were more in that great company of sincere Christians! But let us never forget how great it is, or what that Christian fellowship means to a world in need, more in need than it is ever willing to acknowledge.

In Washington With

BASCOM N. TIMMONS

President Truman will soon send congress a legislative proposal for federal assistance to aid high school graduates not financially able to attend college to do so.

Also, the president is interested in more and more colleges—with the goal having one within commuting distance of almost everyone, so the cost of higher learning would be lessened as well as the learning made more accessible.

The president told of his plans in his budget message to congress, but the matter drew little attention at the time because of the abundance of more costly recommendations in the message.

A freshman member of the house, Representative Foster Furcole (D-Mass.) first suggested a federal scholarship plan of loans to those not able to attend college in early 1949. The president called Furcole to the White House a few weeks later to talk over the idea.

While the president has no specific program described in his budget message for aiding with federal money those who require financial help to attend college, Furcole had suggested that loans be given which would be repayable to the government in four or more annual installments, beginning the year following college graduation. Furcole proposed such federal scholarship loans on both the undergraduate and graduate level.

The president included a $1,000,000 recommendation in his new budget to set up the organization for a program of aiding college students. The president said the program should begin in the 1952 fiscal year which will begin on July 1, 1951.

Here is what the president said:

"Large numbers of young people and adults wish to continue their education beyond high school in order to prepare for entrance to professional schools, to receive additional technical or vocational training or to round out their general education. For many of our people, post-secondary education on a part-time or full-time basis, provided in institutions located within commuting distance of home, would meet their needs at low cost.

"Several of the states are now developing community institutions for this purpose. I have asked the Federal Security Administrator to make a comprehensive study of this development in order to determine whether the federal government might appropriately take action to encourage the states and localities to establish and expand 'community colleges.'

"Primarily because of low family incomes and of the high costs involved, more than half of our young people who could benefit from a college education are now unable to attend. This failure to develop to the fullest extent the capacities of our young people is a matter of national concern. As a step toward correcting this situation, I shall transmit to the congress a legislative proposal to authorize a limited federal program to assist capable youth who could not otherwise do so to pursue their desired fields of study at the institutions of their choice.

"This budget includes one million dollars as a tentative estimate of appropriations needed in the fiscal year 1951 to establish the required organization and to initiate the program. Assistance to students would begin in the fiscal year 1952."

The American flag will probably continue to have only forty-eight stars for another two or three years, at least. Although the house of representatives passed a bill last year granting statehood to the Territory of Hawaii, there is little chance that the senate will adopt the measure at this session. Meanwhile, proposals to make Alaska a state will be deferred until action is eventually taken on the Hawaiian bid.

Hawaii seemed to be well on its way to statehood until the shipping strike occurred in 1949, which not only tied up shipping to and from the island, but disclosed the inroads that Communist sympathizers have made on the ilsands. As a result, the senate seems inclined to sit back and wait awhile to see whether Hawaii can strengthen out its own situation before coming into the Union as a state.

Americans, who own approximately 60 per cent of all the telephones in the world, average about one telephone call every day. This average, of course, includes all of the babies and small children, who still haven't mastered the great American habit.

While figures for 1949 have not yet been compiled, the American Telephone and Telegram Company recently figured that Americans had over 50 billion telephone conversations in 1948, or an average of 346.3 per person. Since this was 29 more calls a person than in 1947, it is apparent that the average rose above one each day last year.

A year agoo, when the official count was made, there were 26.1 telephones in the United States for every 100 persons. In contrast, for the world as a whole, there are only 2.8 telephones for every 100 people.

George E. Sokolsky:

THESE DAYS

PIE-IN-THE-SKY

The I. W. W.'s used to sing a song:
"In the sweet bye and bye,
There'll be pie in the sky
Bye and bye.
Work and pray, live on hay,
You'll get pie, in the sky,
When you die. . . ."

The prophetic genius who wrote this doggerel back in the first decade of the Twentieth century must have foreseen Harry Truman's budget and his various messages. For our Harry has taken to promising heaven on earth for the year 2000, which is a long way off and beyond his presidential, to say nothing of his life, expectancy. Harry Truman is not likely to be around in the year 2000, when he could be 116 years old, to know how many dollars each American will earn in a year. And what kind of dollars? Ten cent dollars? Or penny dollars?

Both Stalin and Hitler substituted for the heavenly afterlife of the theologians, an afterlife upon earth based on rubber dollars. Pay taxes now, make sacrifices now, go without now, but sometime in the dim and distant future, when none of us are around any more to know of it, everything will be astonishingly fine.

Hitler fixed it that the herrenvolk would rule all the world, enslave all human beings, get the best there is, and all the inferior peoples would be their slaves. Stalin goes even further; some time in the far off future, all the peoples on earth will be so perfect that government itself will be unnecessary and will disappear. Meanwhile, he offers an absolute autocracy, a total dictatorship with the promise that liberty is forsworn now in order that it will exist in the future. Give up today so that your great-grandchildren can get what you gave up.

Harry Truman is not as idealistic as either Hitler or Stalin. He is a naturalist. He can only figure in dollars. In effect he says: Fork out $42,000,000 now; increase both taxes and the burden of debt now and sometime along in the year 2000, that is half a century from now, everything will have work money. Whereas Hitler promised racial superiority and overlordship and the satisfaction of the lust for power and for a Nietzschean superman complex, and Stalin promises liberty of such perfection that every man is a god. Harry Truman promises more cash.

The fact of the matter is that Harry Truman knows no more about the year 2000 than you or I do. Actually, he can tell very little, in the present circumstances, about the year 1951. And hidden in his budget is a great fear that he knows nothing at all about it. For look at these figures:

	Cost	Per Cent
National defense..	$13,500,000,000	31.9
Veterans programs	6,100,000,000	14.3
Interest on debt..	5,600,000,000	13.3
International bid..	4,700,000,000
Total for past, present and future wars	29,900,000,000	70.6

More than 70 per cent of the total expenditures of our government, taken from the citizens, out of their earnings, goes to the cost of past, present and future wars, hot and cold, by shooting or by diplomacy and bribery.

The actual cost of administering the government is $1,300,000,000, which is only three per cent of the budget. The last real peace year was 1938, and the total federal expenditures, excluding debt retirements, amounted to $7,200,000,000. The highest expenditure during the whole World War I period was $18,500,000,000 in 1919. The highest expenditure during the World War II period was $100,400,000,000 in 1945.

It can be argued that we are now neither at war nor at peace; that our differences with Soviet Russia have prevented us from liquidating the war. On the other hand, it is equally true that one of the most potent Marist weapons is to destroy the economy of a nation by excessive taxes and labor disturbances and thus so to weaken a country that it is economically, socially and morally incapable of defending itself.

William E. Gilroy, D. D.:

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Upon the foundation of Jesus Christ the early Christian church was built by two things—conversion and fellowship.

The first great in-gathering was on the Day of Pentecost, 50 days after the Passover, when Peter preached with such power and boldness that many were moved to cry out in repentance, "What shall we do?" About three thousand were then converted and baptized. This company of believers was soon increased, for we are told that the Lord added to the church daily such as were being saved (Acts 2-47).

But someone has said that no one goes to heaven alone, and the first immediate manifestation of this new life in conversion was an intense clinging of Christians to one another in a fellowship so deep and strong that at first they held all things in common.

The early Christian communism did not last long, just as most schemes of Christian communism have failed since. If the Christians had all been as noble, unselfish, and pure-minded as Barnabas, it might have been successful; but a liar and self-seeker like Ananias can make havoc in a noble experiment. In any case Christianity places a strong value upon the individual soul, and upon the rightful independence of each life.

Paul understood this well, when, urging that Christians should bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ, he also said that every man should bear his own burden (Galatians 6:2, 5).

That was good sound democracy. The strength of democracy, of a church, of a Christian fellowship, is built upon the integrity and strength of the individual units.

But the strength of the early Christian church was in the way the individual Christians, with a new sense of the worth of their own souls, loved one another. It became a byword, marking them from the world in which they lived, "See how these Christians love one another."

One speaks thus of the "early Christian church"; can one say as much for the Christian church of today? Yes, I think, and no. It depends upon one's point of view. The Christian church of today is a vast community of many churches, comprising many lands, and many people of all sorts. It is an historic institution, as well as a fellowship of the sincerely devout and consecrated.

And a large minority questions whether we should ever recognize this Russian-supported regime.

Such a policy can be carried out more effectively by nations that have accredited diplomatic representatives in China. The United States, of course, cannot recognize China until the dispute over treatment of our former representatives is settled."

Salt Lake City (Utah) Tribune (Ind.): "Recognition . . . is no longer moral approval of a government. The United States has recognized regimes in South America in recent years . . . without even pretending to be friendly . . . Such recognition is merely bowing to a reality that a government is in control . . . Indianapolis (Ind.) Star (Ind.-Rep.): "Both Britain and the United States have abandoned the traditional policy of automatically recognizing stable government . . . Louisville (Ky.) Times (Ind.-Dem.): "It may be in the realm of fantasy, but it is just barely possible that by recognition Britain is keeping alive whatever shreds of regard the Chinese Reds may have for the west. If on some sunny day Mao should decide to become another Tito—and so far as we know there is no real basis for such a hope now—the fact of British recognition might encourage him in that altogether commendable project."

OUR CHILDREN

BIRTHDAY GIFTS

What to give older children those in their later teens, for birthday and graduation gifts, often baffles friends and relatives. Usually the gift turns out to be another bit of jewelry, more records, more books, and the young person adds them to his store and goes on as he was before.

These young people would be happier, and they would have an opportunity to find a new interest which might add to their abilities as well as to their pleasures if they were given something out of the usual run of such gifts. A camera is a fine gift for any young person. It allows him to use creative ability, it widens his interests and enriches his experiences with people and things. It opens many usefulness and growth.

A good camera does not cost too much for interested relatives to buy. If a few of them pooled their gift money the cost would be slight to each, and the young person given something very much worth while.

Of course the gift should be suited to the recipient. There are odd boys and girls who do not want cameras. There are other things they can use and enjoy, and profit from in many ways. A typewriter is one of the finest gifts a young person can get. It is also one of the most useful, practical, helpful tools he can use to enrich and expand his life's experiences. Again, the family can pool their resources if necessary to buy such a gift.

Then there are the gifts that start collections of articles that are or will be of use to the children. Giving a girl a piece of good china or glass on each anniversary or special occasion so that in days to come she will have a fine set of china, silver or glass as the case may be, is very much worth while. Such collections become heirlooms by and by, enriched with gift bonds which will come in very handy for college expenses, for a start in business, for a nest-egg for marriage.

Little children enjoy toys. As they grow older they enjoy toys less and things they can use, more. When they approach teen-age they feel themselves more adult and things that seem to accept the idea of their maturity are welcome gifts. They not only add to the child's pride of posses-

Truman's Rosy Plan

President Truman apparently tries to spell out "a 50-year plan for the United States" in his latest message to congress. He says that the first 50 years of this 20th century were the hardest—what with two world wars and everything. But the next 50 years—oh boy and oh baby—are going to be just dandy, as the man outlines it.

There isn't anything the Republicans can cook up that will compete with this. They might as well quit trying. The president's message is as full of prophecy, uplift and noble intentions as any collection of New Year's resolutions ever assembled. The script reads like a certain Sunday night radio oracle's predictions of things to come. And if the president's predictions also turn out to be 83.1416 per cent accurate, what a great, wide, wonderful world it's going to be that your children's children will live in.

Maybe Mr. Truman thinks he's going to run for president in 2000 A. D., too, and that this is his first campaign speech for the election.

This message will probably be criticized by the president's opponents as being utterly fantastic dream stuff. But the man could be right. And at this turning point in the 20th century, when there is so much to be scared and gloomy about, it is nice to know that the chief executive can look at the world through his rose-colored bifocals and find that everything is jake.

Mr. Stalin and the Moscow planners never offered the comrades anything nearly as good as what Mr. Truman promises. The pie he puts in the sky would really be worth waiting for, if it could be had by the year 2000.

In international affairs, there will be world peace. The atom will be under international control. The United Nations will be a going concern and will have forces to preserve international law and order. World commerce will be regulated under the new International Trade Organization. Other nations will share America's prosperity through an expanded point four program of technical assistance to underdeveloped countries. Communism will be suppressed, not by force of arms, but by an appeal to the minds and hearts of men.

All these blessings showered down on others will be multiplied by three or four at home. The president predicts there will be a fairer distribution of wealth. Business will have greater incentives to produce.

The farmers will have their income supported by the Brannan plan or some such. Labor will produce more and get a greater reward. There will be increased freedom from poverty and drudgery—presumably through more pay for less work.

The standard of living will rise. Middle-income and low-income families will be able to get cheaper housing. Unemployment insurance rates will be higher. Old-age insurance and other social security benefits will be greater.

There will be pensions. There will be more aid for education and medical insurance for all. More displaced persons will be admitted and civil rights equality will prevail.

Meanwhile, business monopolies will be cured. Small business will get a better break and there will be more business. The Taft-Hartley act will be repealed. Taxes will be rejiggered so that the inequities will be reduced.

The rivers will all be reorganized by law and will produce more power, even in New England. There will be a National Science Foundation to get more power out of the atom and take minerals out of sea water.

But just as there is always one blemish on every peach, there is one thing that the president does not explain in his forecast for the millennium year of 2000 A. D. That is how the country is going to get rid of its national debt of $255,000,000,000. In fact, the president doesn't even mention the national debt once in his whole message.

This is strange, because this national debt is the most overpowering monstrosity on the economic landscape. Any realistic appraisal of the state of the Union today should take the national debt into consideration and say something about it.

If it can be assumed that the national debt, like the $255,000,000,000 national product, is to be four times greater in the year 2000 than it is today—why then the national debt will be something over a cool trillion dollars. That, presumably, is about what it would take to pay for all these luxuries.

And if there's anybody around who wants to live for another 50 years just for the sake of seeing what a $1,000,000,000,000 national debt looks like, he's welcome to it.

Bologna is 10 cents a pound cheaper than it was a year ago, it was revealed on the day President Truman delivered his "State of the Union" message to congress.

Now that the annual argument about whether children should be told the truth about Santa Claus has again resulted in a draw, what about telling it to the taxpayers?

Average American family saved $75 in 1949, but if the money is retained for any appreciable length of time it will hardly buy a ton of coal.

Certain astronomers claim this actually is the year 1954. If it's necessary to lose four years, why not make it retroactive?

Medical journal says 25 per cent of women are overweight. These, of course, are round figures.

Speaking of going underground, there are all those eggs in a Kansas cave and the gold at Fort Knox.

Work has no effect on the length of life, a scientist claims. Perhaps to the man who works life just seems longer.

Washington announces family savings average $75 a year, and Truman thinks new taxes could absorb this amount.

DOWN SOUTH

"LEST WE FORGET"

As the twentieth century reaches the half way point, the one question mark that looms above all others is the kind of government we shall choose for ourselves for the years ahead. For there is no question but that we stand at the crossroads in this decision.

Benjamin Franklin said to the people as he came out of Constitution Hall back in the early days of our nation, "You now have a republic, if you can keep it." That we are nearer than ever before in our history to the time when we must decide whether we shall keep our Republic is very clear to anyone who will view the facts.

Lord Macauley wrote from London in 1857 to a friend in New York predicting that our form of government would fall of its own weight in the course of time. He wrote, "Either some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of government with a strong hand, or your republic will be as fearfully plundered and laid waste by barbarians in the twentieth century as the Roman empire was in the fifth; with this difference, that the Huns and Vandals who ravaged the Roman empire came from without, and that your Huns and Vandals will have been engendered within your country by your own institutions."

This prediction of 93 years ago has been supplemented in recent months by such sound statesmen as former President Hoover, General Eisenhower, and former Secretary of State Byrnes. They, and many others, have warned us that our greatest dangers are from within and not from without, that the creeping paralysis of socialism will take us unawares through the backdoor. They make it very clear that when the people shift all responsibility for their welfare to the government they are repudiating the fundamental principle of freedom on which our nation is founded.

Yet the very thing that Lord Macauley feared happens when, as Secretary Byrnes said recently, "the people have been misled into regarding the treasury as a Christmas tree with the president and the members of congress playing the role of Santa Claus." For this is a republic, and the majority of the people rule. So, when we have 19,300,000 persons drawing regular checks from the federal government, and an additional 6,400,000 persons receiving regular payments from state and local governments, we have a total of 25,700,000 now receiving public checks—or almost half as many as the total number of persons employed in this country. When the government plays Santa Claus, who, in a Republic, is going to play Santa Claus to the government?

No wonder that Benjamin Franklin indicated a doubt that we would be able to keep our republic. No wonder Lord Macauley flatly predicted we would lose our republic. No wonder there are those among us now who can see that the hour of decision is drawing nigh. For it seem to be a fixed trait of human nature to ignore all precept of history and all present example. The Pilgrims at Plymouth, 330 years ago, tried community ownership and nearly starved to death; they turned to individual enterprise and "God gave them plentie." Marie Antoinette, of France, tried a "spending for prosperity" scheme 257 years ago; the national debt of France soared, the monarchy collapsed, and Marie lost her head. The Romans had the highest civilization of their time and traded it for government "benefits"; there were more persons receiving tax money than paying taxes when Jesus Christ rebuked His tormentors in the Roman province of Palestine with "Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's." In our day and time, New Zealand and Australia and now Great Britain have proved to us that it make no difference whether people believe in socialism or not, it just will not work. They have shown us that it violates certain fundamental laws of economics and morals that simply will not be violated.

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget!"

In Washington With

BASCOM N. TIMMONS

President Truman will soon send congress a legislative proposal for federal assistance to aid high school graduates not financially able to attend college to do so.

Also, the president is interested in more and more colleges—with the goal having one within commuting distance of almost everyone, so the cost of higher learning would be lessened as well as the learning made more accessible.

The president told of his plans in his budget message to congress, but the matter drew little attention at the time because of the abundance of more costly recommendations in the message.

A freshman member of the house, Representative Foster Furcole (D-Mass.) first suggested a federal scholarship plan of loans to those not able to attend college in early 1949. The president called Furcole to the White House a few weeks later to talk over the idea.

While the president has no specific program described in his budget message for aiding with federal money those who require financial help to attend college, Furcole had suggested that loans be given which would be repayable to the government in four or more annual installments, beginning the year following college graduation. Furcole proposed such federal scholarship loans on both the undergraduate and graduate level.

The president included a $1,000,000 recommendation in his new budget to set up the organization for a program of aiding college students. The president said the program should begin in the 1952 fiscal year which will begin on July 1, 1951.

Here is what the president said:

"Large numbers of young people and adults wish to continue their education beyond high school in order to prepare for entrance to professional schools, to receive additional technical or vocational training or to round out their general education. For many of our people, post-secondary education on a part-time or full-time basis, provided in institutions located within commuting distance of home, would meet their needs at low cost.

"Several of the states are now developing community institutions for this purpose. I have asked the Federal Security Administrator to make a comprehensive study of this development in order to determine whether the federal government might appropriately take action to encourage the states and localities to establish and expand 'community colleges.'

"Primarily because of low family incomes and of the high costs involved, more than half of our young people who could benefit from a college education are now unable to attend. This failure to develop to the fullest extent the capacities of our young people is a matter of national concern. As a step toward correcting this situation, I shall transmit to the congress a legislative proposal to authorize a limited federal program to assist capable youth who could not otherwise do so to pursue their desired fields of study at the institutitons of their choice.

"This budget includes one million dollars as a tentativve estimate of appropriations needed in the fiscal year 1951 to establish the required organization and to initiate the program. Assistance to students would begin in the fiscal year 1952."

The American flag will probably continue to have only forty-eight stars for another two or three years, at least. Although the house of representativves passed a bill last year granting statehood to the Territory of Hawaii, there is little chance that the senate will adopt the measure at this session. Meanwhile, proposals to make Alaska a state will be deferred until action is eventually taken on the Hawaiian bid.

Hawaii seemed to be well on its way to statehood until the shipping strike occurred in 1949, which not only tied up shipping to and from the island, but disclosed the inroads that Communist sympathizers have made on the ilsands. As a result, the senate seems inclined to sit back and wait awhile to see whether Hawaii can strengthen out its own situation before coming into the Union as a state.

Americans, who own approximately 60 per cent of all the telephones in the world, average about one telephone call every day. This average, of course, includes all of the babies and small children, who still haven't mastered the great American habit.

While figures for 1949 have not yet been compiled, the American Telephone and Telegram Company recently figured that Americans had over 50 billion telephone conversations in 1948, or an average of 346.3 per person. Since this was 29 more calls a person than in 1947, it is apparent that the average rose above one each day last year.

A year agoo, when the official count was made, there were 26.1 telephones in the United States for every 100 persons. In contrast, for the world as a whole, there are only 2.8 telephones for every 100 people.

THESE DAYS

PIE-IN-THE-SKY

The I. W. W.'s used to sing a song:

"In the sweet bye and bye,
There'll be pie in the sky
Bye and bye.
Work and pray, live on hay,
You'll get pie, in the sky,
When you die. . . ."

The prophetic genius who wrote this doggerel back in the first decade of the Twentieth century must have foreseen Harry Truman's budget and his various messages. For our Harry has taken to promising heaven on earth for the year 2000, which is a long way off and beyond his presidential, to say nothing of his life, expectancy. Harry Truman is not likely to be around in the year 2000, when he could be 116 years old, to know how many dollars each American will earn in a year. And what kind of dollars? Ten cent dollars? Or penny dollars?

Both Stalin and Hitler substituted for the heavenly afterlife of the theologians, an afterlife upon earth based on rubber dollars. Pay taxes now, make sacrifices now, go without now, but sometime in the dim and distant future, when none of us are around any more to know of it, everything will be astonishingly fine.

Hitler fixed it that the herrenvolk would rule all the world, enslave all human beings, get the best there is, and all the inferior peoples would be their slaves. Stalin goes even further: some time in the far off future, all the peoples on earth will be so perfect that government itself will be unnecessary and will disappear. Meanwhile, he offers an absolute autocracy, a total dictatorship with the promise that liberty is forsworn now in order that it will exist in the future. Give up today so that your great-grandchildren can get what you gave up.

Harry Truman is not as idealistic as either Hitler or Stalin. He is a naturalist. He can only figure in dollars. In effect he says: Fork out $42,000,000 now; increase both taxes and the burden of debt now and sometime along in the year 2000, that is half a century from now, everything will have work money. Whereas Hitler promised racial superiority and overlordship and the satisfaction of the lust for power and for a Nietzschean superman complex, and Stalin promises liberty of such perfection that every man is a god. Harry Truman promises more cash.

The fact of the matter is that Harry Truman knows no more about the year 2000 than you or I do. Actually, he can tell very little, in the present circumstances, about the year 1951. And hidden in his budget is a great fear that he knows nothing at all about it. For look at these figures:

	Cost	Per Cent
National defense..	$13,500,000,000	31.9
Veterans programs	6,100,000,000	14.3
Interest on debt..	5,600,000,000	13.3
International bid..	4,700,000,000
Total for past, present and future wars	29,900,000,000	70.6

More than 70 per cent of the total expenditures of our government, taken from the citizens, out of their earnings, goes to the cost of past, present and future wars, hot and cold, by shooting or by diplomacy and bribery.

The actual cost of administering the government is $1,300,000,000, which is only three per cent of the budget. The last real peace year was 1938, and the total federal expenditures, excluding debt retirements, amounted to $7,200,000,000. The highest expenditure during the whole World War I period was $18,500,000,000 in 1919. The highest expenditure during the World War II period was $100,400,000,000 in 1945.

It can be argued that we are now neither at war nor at peace; that our differences with Soviet Russia have prevented us from liquidating the war. On the other hand, it is equally true that one of the most potent Marist weapons is to destroy the economy of a nation by excessive taxes and labor disturbances and thus so to weaken a country that it is economically, socially and morally incapable of defending itself.

William E. Gilroy, D. D.:

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Upon the foundation of Jesus Christ the early Christian church was built by two things—conversion and fellowship.

The first great in-gathering was on the Day of Pentecost, 50 days after the Passover, when Peter preached with such power and boldness that many were moved to cry out in repentance, "What shall we do?" About three thousand were then converted and baptized. This company of believers was soon increased, for we are told that the Lord added to the church daily such as were being saved (Acts 2-47).

But someone has said that no one goes to heaven alone, and the first immediate manifestation of this new life in conversion was an intense clinging of Christians to one another in a fellowship so deep and strong that at first they held all things in common.

The early Christian communism did not last long, just as most schemes of Christian communism have failed since. If the Christians had all been as noble, unselfish, and pure-minded as Barnabas, it might have been successful; but a liar and self-seeker like Ananias can make havoc in a noble experiment. In any case Christianity places a strong value upon the individual soul, and upon the rightful independence of each life.

Paul understood this well, when, urging that Christians should bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ, he also said that every man should bear his own burden (Galatians 6:2, 5).

That was good sound democracy. The strength of democracy, of a church, of a Christian fellowship, is built upon the integrity and strength of the individual units.

But the strength of the early Christian church was in the way the individual Christians, with a new sense of the worth of their own souls, loved one another. It became a byword, marking them from the world in which they lived, "See how these Christians love one another."

One speaks thus of the "early Christian church"; can one say as much for the Christian church of today? Yes, I think, and no. It depends upon one's point of view. The Christian church of today is a vast community of many churches, comprising many lands, and many people of all sorts. It is an historic institution, as well as a fellowship of the sincerely devout and consecrated.

OUR CHILDREN

BIRTHDAY GIFTS

What to give older children those in their later teens, for birthday and graduation gifts, often baffles friends and relatives. Usually the gift turns out to be another bit of jewelry, more records, more books, and the young person adds them to his store and goes on as he was before.

These young people would be happier,and they would have an opportunity to find a new interest which might add to their abilities as well as to their pleasures if they were given something out of the usual run of such gifts. A camera is a fine gift for any young person. It allows him to use creative ability, it widens his interests and enriches his experiences with people and things. It opens many usefulness and growth.

A good camera does not cost too much for interested relatives to buy. If a few of them pooled their gift money the cost would be slight to each, and the young person given something very much worth while.

Of course the gift should be suited to the recipient. There are odd boys and girls who do not want cameras. There are other things they can use and enjoy, and profit from in many ways. A typewriter is one of the finest gifts a young person can get. It is also one of the most useful, practical, helpful tools he can use to enrich and expand his life's experiences. Again, the family can pool their resources if necessary to buy such a gift.

Then there are the gifts that start collections of articles that are or will be of use to the children. Giving a girl a piece of good china or glass on each anniversary or special occasion so that in days to come she will have a fine set of china, silver or glass as the case may be, is very much worth while. Such collections become heirlooms by and by, enriched with gift bonds which will come in very handy for college expenses, for a start in business, for a nest-egg for marriage.

Little children enjoy toys. As they grow older they enjoy toys less and things they can use, more. When they approach teen-age they feel themselves more adult and things that seem to accept the idea of their maturity are welcome gifts. They not only add to the child's pride of posses-

BIBLE THOUGHTS

For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.—Proverbs 1:16.

Never let any man imagine that he can pursue a good end by civil means, without sinning against his own soul! Any other issue is doubtful; the evil effect on himself is certain.—Southey.

Charles B. Driscoll

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK—Governor Dewey recently pardoned a life-term criminal because the man had voluntarily risked his life by exchanging blood with a little girl who was suffering from leukemia. The man was found guilty of murder in the first degree, 18 years ago, and was sentenced to death, but his sentence was commuted to life. He was, according to the jury, guilty of furnishing the guns used in a robbery which resulted in the death of a garageman. Under the law, such an accessory is as guilty as the actual killers.

Dewey followed a well-established custom among governors. The prisoner was not obliged to risk his life as he did, and a pardon was thought to be a suitable reward. As the laws now stand, I think substantial justice was done.

However, this is an appropriate time to restate the doctrine I have long preached, and shall continue to advocate, with regard to criminals of a certain class and their debt to humanity.

I believe that a man who deliberately kills any human being maliciously has forfeited his right to live. The existing laws agree with me so far.

But the custom now is to kill the man who killed the man. This is all right, but not very.

I would have uniform laws in all states regarding persons convicted of murder in the first degree, which means deliberate and malicious murder. This convicted person should be given his choice of immediate death by eletrocution or life imprisionment. But he must understand that life imprisionment carries with it the right of the state to use him as an experimental agent in medical science, for the purpose of saving human life.

Thus the murderer would be given an opportunity to pay back the life he took, in a manner of speaking, by saving another life, or many lives.

I think most murderers would choose to do that, if they are sensible persons they must want to save a life to pay, in a fashion, for the life they took.

The whole system, of course, would have to be safeguarded by supervision of the American Medical Association, the Rockefeller Foundation, or some such responsible body.

If this system were in effect I believe that the common cold could be wholly abolished in 20 years, cancer in twice that length of time, and most heart ailments in varying periods of time. Such a system, in use throughout the United States, might raise the average span of useful life to more than a century.

But I do not expect any politician to advocate the idea, ever.

Jim Stewart, Wichita insurance man with whom I went to school, sends me a blueprint of his new home. It looks much too big for a bachelor, as Jim was the last time I heard from him. Must be something in the wind . . . Bill Weiss, with whom I have been on some interesting assignments, sends cheery words from Detroit . . . Cartoonist Lank Leonard, Chace Conley, Bill Kelly of the American Magazine. Artist Gloria Noble, and Norman Kent, who owns more neckties than any other person I know, send good news and Cordial wishes from New York.

This mail also includes a note from Laird Archer, of the near East Foundation, Athens, Greece, saying that peace at long last prevails there. Laird and I roomed together when I was in school, and we both wore patches on our pants. Laird had the advantage as he could sew. I had to send my pants home to mother to be patched. She did a better job than Laird, I may add.

People join the church from various motives, and many attend the services and support the church financially, who have never joined it at all, or professed any vital experience of conversion, such as transformed the early Christians.

It would be easy to dwell upon the adverse aspects of the church to sound a very pessimistic note, but what impresses me is the number and extent of the true fellowship of believers, the Christians whose life is one of prayer, of meditation upon the Scriptures, of communion with Christ and with one another, living lives of consecrated service, manifesting good works and love of their fellowmen.

It is the continuing evidence of Christ's presence and power, the deepest, finest, strongest thing in all the world. Would that there were more in that great company of sincere Christians! But let us never forget how great it is, or what that Christian fellowship means to a world in need, more in need than it is ever willing to acknowledge.

PREVIEW NIGHTS: Pic of the week: 20th Century-Fox's "When Willie Comes Marching Home" (Dan Dailey-Corinne Calvet-Colleen Townsend-William Demarest). Comedy with a World War II backdrop, and it's funny enough to leave you with aching sides. . . . GOOD: Universal-International's "South Sea Sinner" (Shelley Winters-Macdonald Carey-Helena Carter). Consider, if you please, a little paragraph printed in a recent issue of a movie trade paper. It read: "The management of New York's Mayfair theater took advantage of the great demand for tickets for 'Sands of Iwo Jima' and boosted the matinee price yesterday to the holiday top of $1.20." How do you like that one, all you fans who have been nicked "regular" admission fees, again and again, for pictures so far below par that the theater men should have been ashamed to book them?

The other day, I commented on the televising of wrestling matches and the possible effect of such programs on impressionable youngsters, opining that it might be difficult to sell kids "good sportsmanship" after they've seen the dirty doings that go on in the wrestling ring. Ever since my remarks were printed, I've been deluged with letters from parents, setting forth "cases in point." One, received this morning, tells about a seven year old in Los Angeles and the injury he suffered during a wrestling bout with a slightly older boy who lives next dmoor. The other kid, being a television fan, knew just what to do. He locked his hands together and let go a "rabbit punch," in the style of our best professional performers. It nearly broke the seven-year-old's neck.

I've heard of a lot of silly "beefs" registered by temperamental stars, but never of one more idiotic than the tizzy reportedly thrown by Shelley Winters when she discovered that a fan magazine was using, as its cover illustration, a picture of her with her co-stars in "A Place In The Sun" instead of one of her alone. The co-stars happen to be Montgomery Clift and Elizabeth Taylor, probably the two most popular young players in show business today. Miss Winters, it seems to me, should be inordinately flattered to be seen in such good company.

My lowest bow to Katharine Hepburn for declining to cooperate by posing for pictures when the National Hosiery Association voted her legs the most shapely on the stage. Seems to me that an actress of her caliber could be excused for considering herself insulted.

MACKENZIE'S COLUMN

(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Well, here it's Saturday again and I'm due to produce another of those week-end adventure stories which have been requested.

This one has to do with an experience I had a generation ago in the wild region of the historic Khyber Pass on the frontier between Afghanistan and what we now know as Pakistan but then was part of India. I was reminded of it by a Pakistan dispatch saying the dispute between the two nations over ownership of this inhospitable territory, which is inhabited by fierce tribesmen, had again become acute.

So gather around the camp-fire, folks, and I'll spin the yarn.

World War I was going full tilt in 1916 when I first visited India. Naturally my travels took me to the Khyber Pass through which various ancient conquerors invaded the Indian sub-continent. As usual, relations between India and Afghanistan were delicate.

At the time of my visit the barbaric Mohmand tribesmen were making themselves obnoxious by raiding British territory for pillage and murder. These are the fellows, by the way, who can steal a blanket from beneath a sleeping man without waking him. What, you don't believe it? Then listen:

The tribesman creeps into the tent of the sleeper. The thief first tickles his victim's back with a feather. The sleeper always rolls over in the direction of the tickle, to get rid of it. Thereupon the native slips around to the other side and folds the vacated portion of the bottom blanket lengthwise, putting the edge against the sleeper's back.

Then the feather is used again. The sleeper rolls back toward his tormentor—and rolls clear off the blanket, which quickly disappears. Q. E. D. Simple, isn't it?

But to return to our adventure, things got so bad that the British decided to intern a whole colony of Mohmands. That was a man-size military operation, for it involved roundreds of tribesmen in open country. These fellows for the most part were armed with wicked looking swords and antiquated rifles, but they were magnificent fighters and weren't afraid to die.

The operation was carried out as a sort of rabbit drive. The Kabul river at that point divides and its two branches form the sides of a huge triangle. The military decided to round up the natives and then drive them toward the apex of this triangle profiting by the fact that the Mohmands wouldn't cross water because of superstition. Once in the triangle they couldn't get away.

The British turned out about 6,000 foot soldiers and cavalry for the drive. We started at daybreak and were going hammer and tongs all day. Your servant rode with the cavalry. The natives scattered like wild animals and hiding in all manner of places from which they had to be dug out by the troops who employed bayonets freely as persuaders. Naturally there was some tough fighting, but casualties weren't too severe.

Gradually the Mohmands were pressed back toward the apex of that water-triangle until they were trapped. Then they threw down their arms and surrendered. More than 600 of them were marched off and interned. Their rifles and razor-like swords were distributed as souvenirs among the troops.

Sure there were plenty of thrills and many tense moments. Wild cats are nasty fellows when they're cornered. However, my biggest thrill had to do with the performance of the cavalry horse I rode.

He and I never had met before and so his tricks and talents were an unknown quantity to me. He was an old war-horse and soon demonstrated that he was a willful devil who took his own way if he could get it. One of his outstanding characteristics was that he insisted on trying to lead the procession and I soon found myself amongst the foremost, for he had a mouth like a pig and was hard to hold.

The terrain was cut by great irrigation ditches and we hadn't been under way long when we encountered one. It was very wide and very deep. As we approached I could see several horses down in the ditch on their backs, with their unhappy riders splashing about in the muddy water.

My horse was going hell-bent-for-leather and nothing could stop him. So I gritted my teeth and did the next best thing. As we came up to the ditch I got set and gave him the high-sign. He took that jump like an angel and landed running on the far side. Oh boy! What a horse! What a day!

Gen. Erskine Given Iwo Flag At Ceremony Here

One of the highlights of the visit of Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine here this week was the presentation of the Iwo Jima flag to his custody at the Junior Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

The flag was brought here by General Erskine to be displayed in connection with the showing of the motion picture, "Sands of Iwo Jima." Following the local showing, the flag was taken by General Erskine to the U. S. Marine Corps Museum at Quantico, Va.

In making the presentation to General Erskine, Dr. J. Q. Graves, an uncle of the Iwo hero, said as follows:

"Mr. Chairman, Major General Graves B. Erskine, and members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"I deem it a great honor and distinct privilege to convey on behalf of the marine corps of Caldwell and Ouachita parishes this historic flag, which is so dear to the hearts of the American people, to you, Major General Graves B. Erskine.

"General Erskine, this flag is a symbol of all that America stands for. It is America wrapped up in sentiment that will last as long as there are free people.

"With bowed heads, we stand in awe and admiration when we are in its presence. A feeling of humility overwhelms us when we are cognizant of its great significance, for we cherish it as a sacred emblem.

"Amid shot and shell, while the bloodiest battle of all wars was being waged on the lonely, rock bound island of Iwo Jima, five brave heroes raised its head on the top of the highest mountain on that island. Two of these noble heroes paid with their lives for the privilege of participating in its raising. When she unfolded its beauty, glory and splendor in the gentle breezes of the south Pacific, tired and hard fighting soldiers found renewed courage and hope.

"When the living heroes left the island, it was with sad hearts, for many of the comrades in arms will lie beneath the south Pacific moon forever. Those noble heroes did not accompany the flag back to America, but the flag brought with it messages from each of them. The messages from these men were for everlasting peace.

"General Erskine, I now convey this flag to you with the full knowledge that you will see it safely in the museum at Quantico, Virginia, where it will forever rest.

"All America joins the Marines in love, hope and admiration of what this great flag stands for."

Mrs. Cann moved and said motion passed; stating that each parish should turn in its recommendations concerning teacher certification at the next regular meeting of this body.

A resolution was passed asking that the fifth district newsletter be continued.

BACKS ATTACK ON SOCIAL MEDICINE

Dean Of Tulane Medics Prescribes Planning For Adequate Service

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Community planning for adequate medical service was urged tonight by Dr. Maxwell E. Lapham, Dean of the Tulane University School of Medicine, as a means of forestalling "the bugaboo of socialized medicine."

Dr. Lapham spoke at a dinner which closed the annual founders' day forum of the Eighth District Medical Society. A number of faculty members from the Tulane and Louisiana State University Schools of Medicine had addressed the society earlier in the day.

"I think it behooves every community to establish some kind of health council," Dean Lapham said, "consisting of representatives of interested lay and medical people to attempt to determine just what the needs are, to give overall medical service.

"It seems to me that it is high time that communities give some thought to such planning, and if satisfactory solutions can be reached then the bugaboo of socialized medicine should be allayed.

"It seems to me that it is the responsibility of the community to determine how many hospital beds are needed and how these beds can be provided; how many indigent patients there are; how indigent patients can be cared for. And some attempt should be made to see that universal medical service is rendered in a community.

"If this sort of planning were begun in all communities of the country I believe there would be no need for interference by the government."

In Louisiana, Dean Lapham said, "considerable effort has been made to appraise the needs in communities to provide satisfactory medical service," but "in a great many states no such planning has been done."

Dan Lapham's subject was "the role of the medical school in community medical service."

He listed many ways in which the Tulane School of Medicine extends its facilities over parts of Louisiana and Mississippi. These included postgraduate courses for practicing physicians, consultative and laboratory services, clinics, staffing of hospitals, and various types of training.

A two-year experiment in six Mississippi counties, he related, showed the school "has been able to render a wide range of services which are not previously possible."

In addition to services for hospitals in New Orleans, he said, Tulane provides consultation service and training for the Charity Hospital at Pineville, and L. S. U. is doing similar work at the Lafayette Charity Hospital.

"We have been asked to extend this medical school participation in medical service and training to other charity hospitals in the state," he continued, "and as soon as sufficient additional faculty can be provided we are not only willing but anxious to carry out other programs.

"I believe I can speak for both the schools of medicine in saying we are ready to give assistance to the medical profession and to medical institutions in any way that we possibly can."

The Nation Today

JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Secretary of State Acheson talked this week at a luncheon in the National Press Club.

This was as "smooth a performance as has ever been witnessed at the National Press Club," the Washington Post said a few hours later.

It was also very somber in its implications although this may have been lost sight of in the attention which was given to one part of his talk.

This was when he said the Russians are grabbing off parts of China and that one day the Chinese people, getting wise to what has happened, will be furious at Russia.

And he repeated what President Truman had said earlier this month: That this government isn't going to bail out Chiang Kai-Shek's ruined regime in Formosa where he's taken his last standing against the Communists who've overrun the rest of China.

The next question in the minds of congressmen and others is:

Where, then, will the U. S. take a firm stand in Asia and tell the Communists: Beyond this point you can't pass?

For them, Acheson had no single or reassuring answer. He did say this country will stand fast in Japan and the Philippines. But for the mainland of Asia, what he said in effect was this:

The U. S. will have to call its shots as it sees them. So no one can predict now what the U. S. will do an any given situation.

Why not?

Because, Acheson said, the U. S. can be effective in any country threatened by communism only if:

The people in that country want to resist communism, have the will to resist, and have loyalty to the government which the Communists wish to overthrow.

And Acheson pointed out that Asiatic peoples are particularly susceptible to Communist penetration because of their economic conditions and for various other reasons.

Said Acheson: "We can help only where we are wanted and only where the conditions of help are sensible and possible."

In years gone western powers operated in Asia with a strong hand. That was when the Asiatics were docile, unorganized, and militarily defenseless.

But Acheson recognizes a new day in Asia. He said:

"What we see is that this . . . new day which is dawning may go on to a glorious noon or it may darken and it may drizzle out.

"But that decision lies within the countries of Asia and within the power of the Asian people.

"It is not a decision which a friend or even an enemy from the outside can decide for them."

This press club talk of Acheson's may be looked back upon as an historic expression of American policy in Asia.

Minister Says He Was Beaten After Preaching To Negroes

ATLANTA, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A battered and bloodstained little minister of Italian birth today reported he had been seized and beaten by masked men.

The short, round preacher, clutching a briefcase inscribed "Jesus Saves," identified himself as Michael Picardi, pastor of the Temple Emanuel Church in Columbus, Ohio.

Picardi said six or seven men, wearign handkerchiefs for masks and armed with shotguns, dragged him from the pulpit of a small Negro church at Cairo, Ga., last night.

These men, he continued, loaded him into an automobile, drove away from the church and ordered him to disrobe.

Then, said Picardi, they flogged him with a metal tipped belt and struck him with a gun butt across the head. Nearly all the blows rained upon the 59-year-old man drew blood.

His adbductors, Picardi related, accused him of staying with Negroes and asked him if he were a white man and, if so, why didn't he preach in white men's churches.

"They say," Picardi observed mildly, "why don't you preach in a white man's church? The gospel say you gotta preach to all people. I don't know anything about the south, but the federal law says everyone is free to believe as he pleases."

Picardi, as he entered the office of the Associated Press this afternoon, was wearing black trousers, a grey sweater and a blue pinstriped coat spattered with blood.

His forehead was bandaged and his buttocks had been beaten until he had to sit gingerly on the edge of a chair.

With him Picardi brought a doctor's certificate that he had been treated for a traumatic injury to the forehead, buttocks and legs.

F. B. I. Agent John C. Bills in Atlanta said he had a report of the incident and that the minister's account is being referred to the justice department.

At Cairo, Sheriff C. H. Strickland said he had received no report of the flogging.

The sherif added that he had talked with Picardi Wednesday when he received a report that the minister was living with Negroes. "I told him," said Strickland, "that it wasn't customary for white people to stay with Negroes."

That, Strickland reported, was the last he saw of the victim. Picardi denied that he had been staying with Negroes. He said he had been sleeping in his car.

Thomasville Police Chief Noah Stegall said he found Picardi, bruised and bloody at a filling station.

"We tried to get him to wash up," Stegall told, "but he refused. He said he wanted to show everybody how they treat people down here."

Picardi said the entire beating took place in a moving automobile.

All the time he was in the car, Picardi said "they kept cursing me. The man on the front seat said 'hell, we're gonna see that you people of the north know there is a Dixie line.'"

Picardi reported that he was building a church in Columbus and that he needed $30,000 for construction. He said he was traveling around the nation to raise funds. His church has $10,000 toward that goal, he added.

Magna Carta was signed in 1215.

Man Killed When Hit By Speeding Automobile

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A speeding automobile struck and killed a 55-year-old seaman early today as he attempted to cross a street in the business district.

Police said a man they identified as James Humphrey, Route 6, Hattiesburg, Miss., was booked with negligent homicide.

They identified the victim as William Brady, a native of Brighton, Mass., who lived at 711 Camp St., a seaman's home here.

Witnesses said Brady's body was hurled 84 feet by the impact.

Seconds after the accident two men gave chase in a taxi but lost the death car as it raced around a circular intersection and out of sight.

Humphrey was arrested later as he stopped for a traffic light. Police said he denied the charge.

HOTTEST ENGINE NEWS of 1950

That's the word spreading about Buick's brand-new F-263 valve-in-head engine, already proving itself in the hands of new SUPER owners

CALL it if you will the biggest power-story of the year. Call it another triumph in Buick's long history of coming up with car performance beyond compare.

But, sir, when you step into the sleek-lined traveler pictured here—hang on to your hat.

For you'll be riding behind a power plant that is not only new but a major sensation of the 1950 season.

You'll be commanding the very latest word in valve-in-head power—the newest accomplishment of the organization with the country's longest stretch of experience in this engine design.

Here every fist-size fuel charge now delivers a buskier wallop. Shorter, lighter connecting rods mean that pistons flash with faster and livelier action.

Heavier crankshafts, floated on bigger, more rugged bearings, take this greater load and transmit its stepped-up surge to the drive shaft and rear wheels.

And you, behind the wheel, wreathe your face in smiles at the lift you find! At the trigger-quick take-off—the mile-eating cruising stride—your easy disdain for the passing gas pumps.

You and your SUPER are really stepping out—and Buick's good name as "a sweetheart on the road" gains still more lustre.

Nor is road-thrill the only blessing this new power plant brings. Simpler design makes service easier, so upkeep diminishes as a problem. Hydraulic valve-lifters keep valves properly seated for efficient operation—and for quiet unbroken by tappet noise.

And you can have this power either with Buick's easy-shifting Synchro-Mesh transmission or the silken luxury of Dynaflow Drive.*

Either way, this SUPER is certainly something to see. To this top-notch new power it adds style and room, comfort and a wide outlook, soft easy stride and handier new over-all length.

In Hollywood With

JIMMIE FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 14.—Look for a redoubled effort this spring, on the part of all branches of the movie industry, to bring about repeal of the federal admissions tax . . . Rumors persist that Charlie Chaplin and Oona O Neill, whose "May-and-December" marriage made headlines in 1943, are on the verge of divorce. . . . Bull Montana, famous tough mugg of the silent screen, is in a Los Angeles hospital following a severe heart attack. . . . Time out for Johnny Weissmuller, who suffered four broken ribs in a too playful wrestling match with his father-in-law on New Year's eve.

Add John Wayne to your list of screen stars with oil interests; he's taking a gamble with Oklahoma's former governor, Robert S. Kerr. . . . Horace Schmidlapp (widower of the late Carole Landis) and Socialite Actress Pat Smart will swap "I do's" in Cuba this month. . . . On the rocks: the ten-year-old marriage of Cowboy Star Jim Bannon and his wife, Bea Benadaret. . . . According to her mother, Sonja Henie's current skating tour will probably be her last; she would like to make two more pictures, then hang up her blades and concentrate on her marriage.

Chili (Polka-dot Girl) Williams is on the mend following a severe bout with virus pneumonia. . . . Cary Grant's bride, Betsy Drake, is contemplating a suit against New York Columnist Radie Harris, who recently reported that she (Miss Drake) had been married to an actor named Stewart Hoover; Betsy says it's not true. . . . Lon McCallister is hospitalized for allergy tests to determine the cause of an all-over rash that has defied previous treatment.

PREVIEW NIGHTS: Pic of the week: 20th Century-Fox's "When Willie Comes Marching Home" (Dan Dailey-Corinne Calvet-Colleen Townsend-William Demarest). Comedy with a World War II backdrop, and it's funny enough to leave you with aching sides. . . . GOOD: Universal-International's "South Sea Sinner" (Shelley Winters-Macdonald Carey-Helena Carter). Fast action in the South Seas that should please adult thrill-cravers. . . . Columbia's "The Nevadan" (Randolph Scott-Dorothy Malone-Forrest Tucker). Western melodrama with a better than average plot. . . . FAIR: Eagle-Lion's "Never Fear" (Sally Forrest-Keefe Brasselle-Hugh O'Brien). Hit-and-miss drama that's good when it's good and terrible when it's bad. . . . Warner Brothers' "Montana" (Errol Flynn-Alexis Smith). Too slow-moving and uneventful to utilize the capabilities of an excellent cast. . . . BEST PERFORMANCE: Dan Dailey in "When Willie Comes Marching Home."

Consider, if you please, a little paragraph printed in a recent issue of a movie trade paper. It read: "The management of New York's Mayfair theater took advantage of the great demand for tickets for 'Sands of Iwo Jima' and boosted the matinee price yesterday to the holiday top of $1.20." How do you like that one, all you fans who have been nicked "regular" admission fees, again and again, for pictures so far below par that the theater men should have been ashamed to book them?

The other day, I commented on the televising of wrestling matches and the possible effect of such programs on impressionable youngsters, opining that it might be difficult to sell kids "good sportsmanship" after they've seen the dirty doings that go on in the wrestling ring. Ever since my remarks were printed, I've been deluged with letters from parents, setting forth "cases in point." One, received this morning, tells about a seven year old in Los Angeles and the injury he suffered during a wrestling bout with a slightly older boy who lives next dmoor. The other kid, being a television fan, knew just what to do. He locked his hands together and let go a "rabbit punch," in the style of our best professional performers. It nearly broke the seven-year-old's neck.

I've heard of a lot of silly "beefs" registered by temperamental stars, but never of one more idiotic than the tizzy reportedly thrown by Shelley Winters when she discovered that a fan magazine was using, as its cover illustration, a picture of her with her co-stars in "A Place In The Sun" instead of one of her alone. The co-stars happen to be Montgomery Clift and Elizabeth Taylor, probably the two most popular young players in show business today. Miss Winters, it seems to me, should be inordinately flattered to be seen in such good company.

My lowest bow to Katharine Hepburn for declining to cooperate by posing for pictures when the National Hosiery Association voted her legs the most shapely on the stage. Seems to me that an actress of her caliber could be excused for considering herself insulted.

IWO FLAG GIVEN INTO GENERAL'S CUSTODY

Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine receives the famous Iwo Jima flag for return to the Marine Museum at Quantico, Va. The ceremony took place at the weekly Junior Chamber of Commerce luncheon. Shown are Al Newburn, head of the Marine Corps League's reception committee for General Erskine; Dr. J. Q. Graves, the general's uncle, who made the presentation; General Erskine, and Sam Rubin, who was host to the general at a cocktail party here and who donated plaques to members of the Marine Corps League. Gen. Erskine Given Iwo Flag At Ceremony Here

The flag was brought here by General Erskine to be displayed in connection with the showing of the motion picture, "Sands of Iwo Jima." Following the local showing, the flag was taken by General Erskine to the U. S. Marine Corps Museum at Quantico, Va.

In making the presentation to General Erskine, Dr. J. Q. Graves, an uncle of the Iwo hero, said as follows:

"Mr. Chairman, Major General Graves B. Erskine, and members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

"I deem it a great honor and distinct privilege to convey on behalf of the marine corps of Caldwell and Ouachita parishes this historic flag, which is so dear to the hearts of the American people, to you, Major General Graves B. Erskine.

"General Erskine, this flag is a symbol of all that America stands for. It is America wrapped up in sentiment that will last as long as there are free people.

"With bowed heads, we stand in awe and admiration when we are in its presence. A feeling of humility overwhelms us when we are cognizant of its great significance, for we cherish it as a sacred emblem.

"Amid shot and shell, while the bloodiest battle of all wars was being waged on the lonely, rock bound island of Iwo Jima, five brave heroes raised its head on the top of the highest mountain on that island. Two of these noble heroes paid with their lives for the privilege of participating in its raising. When she unfolded its beauty, glory and splendor in the gentle breezes of the south Pacific, tired and hard fighting soldiers found renewed courage and hope.

"When the living heroes left the island, it was with sad hearts, for many of the comrades in arms will lie beneath the south Pacific moon forever. Those noble heroes did not accompany the flag back to America, but the flag brought with it messages from each of them. The messages from these men were for everlasting peace.

"General Erskine, I now convey this flag to you with the full knowledge that you will see it safely in the museum at Quantico, Virginia, where it will forever rest.

"All America joins the Marines in love, hope and admiration of what this great flag stands for."

BACKS ATTACK ON SOCIAL MEDICINE

Dean Of Tulane Medics Prescribes Planning For Adequate Service

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Community planning for adequate medical service was urged tonight by Dr. Maxwell E. Lapham, Dean of the Tulane University School of Medicine, as a means of forestalling "the bugaboo of socialized medicine."

Dr. Lapham spoke at a dinner which closed the annual founders' day forum of the Eighth District Medical Society. A number of faculty members from the Tulane and Louisiana State University Schools of Medicine had addressed the society earlier in the day.

"I think it behooves every community to establish some kind of health council," Dean Lapham said, "consisting of representatives of interested lay and medical people to attempt to determine just what the needs are, to give overall medical service.

"It seems to me that it is high time that communities give some thought to such planning, and if satisfactory solutions can be reached then the bugaboo of socialized medicine should be allayed.

"It seems to me that it is the responsibility of the community to determine how many hospital beds are needed and how these beds can be provided; how many indigent patients there are; how indigent patients can be cared for. And some attempt should be made to see that universal medical service is rendered in a community.

"If this sort of planning were begun in all communities of the country I believe there would be no need for interference by the government."

In Louisiana, Dean Lapham said, "considerable effort has been made to appraise the needs in communities to provide satisfactory medical service," but "in a great many states no such planning has been done."

Dan Lapham's subject was "the role of the medical school in community medical service."

He listed many ways in which the Tulane School of Medicine extends its facilities over parts of Louisiana and Mississippi. These included postgraduate courses for practicing physicians, consultative and laboratory services, clinics, staffing of hospitals, and various types of training.

A two-year experiment in six Mississippi counties, he related, showed the school "has been able to render a wide range of services which are not previously possible."

In addition to services for hospitals in New Orleans, he said, Tulane provides consultation service and training for the Charity Hospital at Pineville, and L. S. U. is doing similar work at the Lafayette Charity Hospital.

"We have been asked to extend this medical school participation in medical service and training to other charity hospitals in the state," he continued, "and as soon as sufficient additional faculty can be provided we are not only willing but anxious to carry out other programs.

"I believe I can speak for both the schools of medicine in saying we are ready to give assistance to the medical profession and to medical institutions in any way that we possibly can."

Minister Says He Was Beaten After Preaching To Negroes

ATLANTA, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A battered and bloodstained little minister of Italian birth today reported he had been seized and beaten by masked men.

The short, round preacher, clutching a briefcase inscribed "Jesus Saves," identified himself as Michael Picardi, pastor of the Temple Emanuel Church in Columbus, Ohio.

Picardi said six or seven men, wearign handkerchiefs for masks and armed with shotguns, dragged him from the pulpit of a small Negro church at Cairo, Ga., last night.

These men, he continued, loaded him into an automobile, drove away from the church and ordered him to disrobe.

Then, said Picardi, they flogged him with a metal tipped belt and struck him with a gun butt across the head. Nearly all the blows rained upon the 59-year-old man drew blood.

His adbductors, Picardi related, accused him of staying with Negroes and asked him if he were a white man and, if so, why didn't he preach in white men's churches.

"They say," Picardi observed mildly, "why don't you preach in a white man's church? The gospel say you gotta preach to all people. I don't know anything about the south, but the federal law says everyone is free to believe as he pleases."

Picardi, as he entered the office of the Associated Press this afternoon, was wearing black trousers, a grey sweater and a blue pinstriped coat spattered with blood.

His forehead was bandaged and his buttocks had been beaten until he had to sit gingerly on the edge of a chair.

With him Picardi brought a doctor's certificate that he had been treated for a traumatic injury to the forehead, buttocks and legs.

F. B. I. Agent John C. Bills in Atlanta said he had a report of the incident and that the minister's account is being referred to the justice department.

At Cairo, Sheriff C. H. Strickland said he had received no report of the flogging.

The sherif added that he had talked with Picardi Wednesday when he received a report that the minister was living with Negroes. "I told him," said Strickland, "that it wasn't customary for white people to stay with Negroes."

That, Strickland reported, was the last he saw of the victim. Picardi denied that he had been staying with Negroes. He said he had been sleeping in his car.

Thomasville Police Chief Noah Stegall said he found Picardi, bruised and bloody at a filling station.

"We tried to get him to wash up," Stegall told, "but he refused. He said he wanted to show everybody how they treat people down here."

Picardi said the entire beating took place in a moving automobile.

All the time he was in the car, Picardi said "they kept cursing me. The man on the front seat said 'hell, we're gonna see that you people of the north know there is a Dixie line.'"

Picardi reported that he was building a church in Columbus and that he needed $30,000 for construction. He said he was traveling around the nation to raise funds. His church has $10,000 toward that goal, he added.

Magna Carta was signed in 1215.

MACKENZIE'S COLUMN

(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst)

Well, here it's Saturday again and I'm due to produce another of those week-end adventure stories which have been requested.

This one has to do with an experience I had a generation ago in the wild region of the historic Khyber Pass on the frontier between Afghanistan and what we now know as Pakistan but then was part of India. I was reminded of it by a Pakistan dispatch saying the dispute between the two nations over ownership of this inhospitable territory, which is inhabited by fierce tribesmen, had again become acute.

So gather around the camp-fire, folks, and I'll spin the yarn.

World War I was going full tilt in 1916 when I first visited India. Naturally my travels took me to the Khyber Pass through which various ancient conquerors invaded the Indian sub-continent. As usual, relations between India and Afghanistan were delicate.

At the time of my visit the barbaric Mohmand tribesmen were making themselves obnoxious by raiding British territory for pillage and murder. These are the fellows, by the way, who can steal a blanket from beneath a sleeping man without waking him. What, you don't believe it? Then listen:

The tribesman creeps into the tent of the sleeper. The thief first tickles his victim's back with a feather. The sleeper always rolls over in the direction of the tickle, to get rid of it. Thereupon the native slips around to the other side and folds the vacated portion of the bottom blanket lengthwise, putting the edge against the sleeper's back.

Then the feather is used again. The sleeper rolls back toward his tormentor—and rolls clear off the blanket, which quickly disappears. Q. E. D. Simple, isn't it?

But to return to our adventure, things got so bad that the British decided to intern a whole colony of Mohmands. That was a man-size military operation, for it involved roundreds of tribesmen in open country. These fellows for the most part were armed with wicked looking swords and antiquated rifles, but they were magnificent fighters and weren't afraid to die.

The operation was carried out as a sort of rabbit drive. The Kabul river at that point divides and its two branches form the sides of a huge triangle. The military decided to round up the natives and then drive them toward the apex of this triangle profiting by the fact that the Mohmands wouldn't cross water because of superstition. Once in the triangle they couldn't get away.

The British turned out about 6,000 foot soldiers and cavalry for the drive. We started at daybreak and were going hammer and tongs all day. Your servant rode with the cavalry. The natives scattered like wild animals and hiding in all manner of places from which they had to be dug out by the troops who employed bayonets freely as persuaders. Naturally there was some tough fighting, but casualties weren't too severe.

Gradually the Mohmands were pressed back toward the apex of that water-triangle until they were trapped. Then they threw down their arms and surrendered. More than 600 of them were marched off and interned. Their rifles and razor-like swords were distributed as souvenirs among the troops.

Sure there were plenty of thrills and many tense moments. Wild cats are nasty fellows when they're cornered. However, my biggest thrill had to do with the performance of the cavalry horse I rode.

He and I never had met before and so his tricks and talents were an unknown quantity to me. He was an old war-horse and soon demonstrated that he was a willful devil who took his own way if he could get it. One of his outstanding characteristics was that he insisted on trying to lead the procession and I soon found myself amongst the foremost, for he had a mouth like a pig and was hard to hold.

The terrain was cut by great irrigation ditches and we hadn't been under way long when we encountered one. It was very wide and very deep. As we approached I could see several horses down in the ditch on their backs, with their unhappy riders splashing about in the muddy water.

My horse was going hell-bent-for-leather and nothing could stop him. So I gritted my teeth and did the next best thing. As we came up to the ditch I got set and gave him the high-sign. He took that jump like an angel and landed running on the far side. Oh boy! What a horse! What a day!

The Nation Today

JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Secretary of State Acheson talked this week at a luncheon in the National Press Club.

This was as "smooth a performance as has ever been witnessed at the National Press Club," the Washington Post said a few hours later.

It was also very somber in its implications although this may have been lost sight of in the attention which was given to one part of his talk.

This was when he said the Russians are grabbing off parts of China and that one day the Chinese people, getting wise to what has happened, will be furious at Russia.

And he repeated what President Truman had said earlier this month:

That this government isn't going to bail out Chiang Kai-Shek's ruined regime in Formosa where he's taken his last standing against the Communists who've overrun the rest of China.

The next question in the minds of congressmen and others is:

Where, then, will the U. S. take a firm stand in Asia and tell the Communists: Beyond this point you can't pass?

For them, Acheson had no single or reassuring answer. He did say this country will stand fast in Japan and the Philippines. But for the mainland of Asia, what he said in effect was this:

The U. S. will have to call its shots as it sees them. So no one can predict now what the U. S. will do an any given situation.

Why not?

Because, Acheson said, the U. S. can be effective in any country threatened by communism only if:

The people in that country want to resist communism, have the will to resist, and have loyalty to the government which the Communists wish to overthrow.

And Acheson pointed out that Asiatic peoples are particularly susceptible to Communist penetration because of their economic conditions and for various other reasons.

Said Acheson: "We can help only where we are wanted and only where the conditions of help are sensible and possible."

In years gone western powers operated in Asia with a strong hand. That was when the Asiatics were docile, unorganized, and militarily defenseless.

But Acheson recognizes a new day in Asia. He said:

"What we see is that this . . . new day which is dawning may go on to a glorious noon or it may darken and it may drizzle out.

"But that decision lies within the countries of Asia and within the power of the Asian people.

"It is not a decision which a friend or even an enemy from the outside can decide for them."

This press club talk of Acheson's may be looked back upon as an historic expression of American policy in Asia.

His busy life has reached out into many activities. As owner and operator of Pinehurst Farms in Orange, and of Red Top Ranch in West Texas, he has been able to make many successful experiments in the field of cattle breeding and soil and pasture improvement. His interest along this line of research has been actuated by a sincere desire to help the Texas farmer and rancher improve his herds and farms. Since 1914, Mr. Brown has introduced into Southeast Texas the short horn cattle, the Brahma and the Swiss. Resultant from this experiment has emerged an outstanding herd called the "Bra-Swiss," a breed suited to the climate and soil of Texas.

Mr. Brown is a councilor of Texas A. and M. Research Foundation, and a contributor to and supporter of the grass research projects of the University of Texas. Resultant from this scientific interest, he has made many contributions to the improvement of pasture grasses suited to the Sabine area.

He is a very active director of the Houston fat stock show and livestock exposition. The top price he pays at the auctions do much to help youthful exhibitors. In fact, in 1947, Mr. Brown paid the highest price ever paid at this show for the Grand Champion Steer, and thereby assured a college education for a sixteen year old 4-H Club boy.

For nineteen years Mr. Brown owned a world famed stable of fine American saddle horses and hackney ponies, for which he received many trophies and ribbons. The stable was a vital part of his agricultural development program.

Although not so widely known, Mr. Brown's interests in philanthrophy and charity are equal to his scientific interests in the improvement of ranching. He has made gifts that run into many figures, but he never speaks about these, as he desires no publicity for his sympathy with human suffering or his warmhearted interests in the welfare of others.

From 1915 to 1947 he was chairman of the Orange county Red Cross disaster committee. Some of his plans during the last war were so efficient that they were used as national models. He, in his own Beechcraft plane, was one of the first to arrive with nurses and medicines at Texas City during the disaster. He is now chairman of the Red Cross advisory board.

Mr. Brown's industrial interests are as wide as his business acumen is deep. He is an outstanding Texas banker and is president of the Orange National Bank, president of Higman Towing Company, vice-president and co-owner with his brother in the Brown Paper Mill which became an outgrowth of the Yellow Pine Paper Mill of Orange, which ranks as the first to make Kraft paper from yellow pine, his Orange mill was started by his father, Dr. E. W. Brown, in 1904.

Mr. Brown's forbears have been outstanding East Texas citizens for over a half century. His grandfather, Henry Jacob Lutcher, was one of the most illustrious pioneer lumbermen in the south.

Edgar Brown owned and operated Levingston Shipbuilding Company from 1933 to 1945. While he was president, the company was the first in Texas to receive the army-navy "E". A kind man with a very warm heart, eager to take time off from his many interests to participate in civic betterment and humanitarian projects—this is the proud record of E. W. Brown, Jr.

Interested with their father in his many interests are his four sons, Edgar Brown, Jr., (third); Slade Brown, John Brown and Charles Brown (second).

ANTICIPATE 1951 CROP CONTROLLING

Provisions For Future Curbs Included In Present Budget Plans

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Agriculture department anticipates the possibility of rigid production controls in 1951 on such crops as cotton, wheat, tobacco, sugar, peanuts, corn and rice.

Provisions for such curbs appear in budget planning.

Appropriations requested for the department by President Truman in his budget report this week would cover costs of operating control programs for these crops in 1951 if they were found to be needed.

Department officials emphasize, however, that the fact that the agency has taken the precaution to set up a budget for control measures does not necessarily mean controls will actually be imposed or needed.

Rigid controls comprise mainly marketing quotas for individual growers. Those selling in excess of quotas are subject to stiff penalties. Quotas are in effect this year only for cotton, tobacco and peanuts.

The decision whether quotas will be needed next year must await outturn of this year's crops and an appraisal of market prospects for the 1951 crops.

Controls on sugar would be limited to producers of sugar cane and sugar beets in this country and sugar cane in Puerto Rico.

Domestic producers have not been growing enough sugar to supply the amount they are entitled to market under sugar control legislation. The domestic beet area has a minimum annual quota 1,800,000 tons. Production in 1949 is estimated to be 15 per cent short of this amount.

The United States Beet Sugar Association contends that the price of sugar is not high enough to encourage domestic producers to grow the full amount allowed them under a control program.

In the case of Puerto Rico, the department announced some time ago that it may be necessary to put quotas on individual producers there this year. A hearing on the matter will be held in Puerto Rico soon.

'Seventeenth Summer' Coming February 8

The Neville speech department brings a hit from Maureen Daly's famous novel, the "Seventeenth Summer." From the way various high schools in the country are producing this play it can only be concluded that it is one of the all time greats of the amateur stage.

STORY: Angie is filled with excitment, for Jack Duluth, the town's most desirable man, has asked her to be the first to go sailing in his new boat. Angie and Jack have a wonderful time, and they begin to care for each other. But Angie has a bitter rival in Jack's former girl friend who is determined to get him back, so when they have a tiff she uses this as a wedge to pry them apart, and misunderstandings and disappointments multiply until Angie is crushed. Jack doesn't phone, and Angie waits and her seventeenth summer is almost over and still Jack doesn't call. Then in an exciting finale that is going to thrill the audience, this play comes to a superb end. Surrounding Angie is one of the most personable, entertaining and thoroughly likable cast of characters that will ever step from the printer page to the boards of your theatre.

In it are all the joy and pathos of youth caught up in an enchanting comedy of complete understanding.

Brannan Plan Called Socialism At Its Best

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A national farm leader said today that Secretary of Agriculture Brannan's plan for supporting farm prices could lead to a friendly sort of Socialism at best.

And Allan B. Kline, president of the National Farm Bureau Federation, said it would lead to a dictatorship at worst.

The Vinton, Iowa, man spoke at the closing session of the Southern Farm Forum here.

Kline said the government would try to maintain the farmers' profit and consumers' low cost by taking over labor and then transportation.

Tom Linder, Georgia's commissioner of agriculture, presented a plan that would make the selling price of cotton exactly the same as 100 per cent of parity.

"I mean, of course, actual parity based on present conditions and not some fake parity as we have been having, based on conditions that ceased to exist in 1914." Linder said.

His plan has received the support of Louisiana Commissioner of Agriculture W. E. Anderson.

Dr. Pitkin, Touro Staff Member, Dies

He was vice-president of the New Orleans Chapter of the American Academy of General Practice and from 1920-37 was a faculty member of the Tulane department of surgery.

Survivors include his widow, the former Ruth Elizabeth Brown; and a brother, J. Waldo Pitkin.

OVER 54 MILLION TO STATE IN '49

Federal Security Makes Report Of Aid In All Lines Rendered

The people of Louisiana have benefited during the past year to the extent of $54,431,475, which represents the national government's share in their state and local investment in health, education, and social welfare, according to a summary released today by J. H. Bond, regional director of the federal security agency with headquarters in Dallas. The figure of $54,431,475, Mr. Bond said, includes payments under the federal old-age and survivors insurance program and is based on preliminary data on Louisiana's participation in the various FSA programs. The operation of these programs is described in the forthcoming FSA annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1949 to be issued by Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

"Even this substantial investment," Regional Director Bond pointed out, "does not tell the whole story in terms either of people or of money, since it does not take account of certain nation-wide FSA services which benefit every citizen of Louisiana. These services are food and drug regulation, services to the state's education system, supervision of federal credit unions, and public health services operated directly by the public health service, such as quarantine and epidemic control.

"A total of 229,859 men, women and children in Louisiana benefited directly from federal funds added to Louisiana's investment in health, education, welfare, vocational rehabilitation and social security. These citizens received individual benefits or services during the past year through federal security agency programs operating in their own communities, most of them with the cooperation of both state and national governments."

"These direct beneficiaries," he explained, "include: children who get health care, or who are dependent or in danger of becoming delinquent, the needy blind; disabled men and women being rehabilitated into jobs; old people receiving assistance; and those receiving federal social security benefits, including both retired workers and the families of insured workers who have died."

"As for the investment of $54,431,475 itself," Mr. Bond continued, "our accounting represents only the federal share in the partnership. To complete the picture, Louisiana would have to add its own state and local funds which its citizens also use for these purposes. Only four of the major programs under the federal security agency are administered entirely by the federal government. These are: old-age and survivors insurance, food and drug regulation, federal credit unions, and federal employes' compensation."

Regional Director Bond's summary of federal security agency activities in Louisiana shows the following breakdown for the fiscal year 1948-1949:

Social Security Administration

Of a total of $23,149,300 of federal money paid to the states in the fiscal year 1948-49 for health and welfare services to mothers and children, Louisiana received approximately $598,900 to help build up its maternal and child health, crippled children's and child welfare programs.

These programs are administered by state agencies under plans approved by the children's bureau, social security administrator.

Under the social security act, federal funds are also made available to help states finance approved plans for public assistance. Federal grants to Louisiana for assistance to dependent children, the needy aged and the blind were as follows for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1949: aid to dependent children, $7,325,000; old-age assistance, $37,099,000; and aid to the needy blind, $451,000.

The number of Louisiana recipients under the three state-federal assistance programs in June 1949 were: aid to dependent children, 63104 in 24,323 families; old-age assistance, 118,239; and aid to the needy blind, 1,673.

By June 30, 1949 28,318 residents of Louisiana were receiving monthly payments under the federal system of old-age and survivors insurance at a rate of $474,177. This program provides a monthly income for workers in private industry and commerce and their families when the worker retires at age 65 or later and for his family when he dies. Monthly benefits certified for payment to retired workers, their wives, and their dependent children in Louisiana during the fiscal year 1948-49 amounted to $3,121,000. Monthly benefits to survivors of insured workers totaled $2,409,000. These payments went to children, widowed mothers, aged widows, and aged parents of deceased workers. In addition, lump-sum payments totaling $297,000 were made to survivors who were not immediately eligible for monthly benefits.

Under another program of the social security administration, there were on June 30, 1949, 86 federal credit unions in Louisiana with 34,161 members. Federal credit unions are cooperative associations promoting systematic savings and making small consumer-type loans to members. The 86 federal credit unions in Louisiana had total savings of $4,631,575 of which $3,456,956 represented outstanding loans. Formed by groups of industrial employes, teachers, government workers, religious organizations, lodges and residential groups, these associations are chartered, supervised and eamined by the bureau of federal credit unions. As of June 30, 1949, there were 4,301 federal credit unions in the United States with 1.7 million members.

Public Health Service

General health funds amounting to $233,000 were paid out of the federal treasury to help Louisiana build up and maintain its local health departments, control communicable diseases, improve sanitation, and carry on health education, demonstrations, personnel training, and other general public health services including industrial hygiene, and cancer control.

Louisiana received $155,000 to carry out effective measures for the prevention, treatment, and control of tuberculosis in the state. An important part of tuberculosis work, the making of mass X-ray surveys to discover the disease in its early, remediable stages, was made possible through grants-in-aid. The state was further assisted by consultation service, loan of personnel, demonstrations of photofluorographic units in the field, and the development of clinic and nursing services.

Federal funds expended for control of veneral disease in Louisiana amounted to $475,000 in the fiscal year 1949. Nine thousand, four hundred and ten patients were admitted for treatment in the state's rapid treatment centers which benefited by these federal grants.

Under the hospital survey and construction act of 1946, Louisiana received $595,000 during the year for surveying its needs for hospitals and health centers and for the construction of hospitals. This represents only funds actually paid over during the fiscal year by the federal government, not the total amount allotted to the state under the hospital survey and construction act.

Consultation services and technical aid to the state in various phases of its hospital program was also furnished by the public health service.

In the fields of cancer and mental health, grants in the amount of $62,000 were made for cancer control, and $46,000 for mental health activities.

In addition to grants given directly to the state, 16 research grants representing a total of $234,000 were made to universities, hospitals, and other research institutions in Louisiana. Teaching traineeships and fellowships awarded in the state amounted to $101,000. This money was for research in the causes and methods of prevention of the diseases of man, including cancer, infectious diseases, diseases of old age, malnutrition, and the effects of various industrial substances, processes, and environments.

Office Of Vocational Rehabilitation

Through the state-federal partnership system for vocational rehabilitation of civilians, 2,954 disabled men and women of Louisiana at the end of the year were receiving services to restore, preserve or develop their ability to make a living. During the year, another 1,265 disabled men and women were successfully prepared for and placed in employment through these services—medical, surgical, psychiatric and hospital care; artificial limbs and other aids; individual counsel and guidance; training for suitable jobs; placement on the right job and follow-up to make sure they made good. Of this latter group, 1,044 were unemployed when rehabilitation services were started, and 190 had never been able to work. Virtually all of the others were in imminent danger of losing their jobs through disability.

Prior to the start of rehabilitation services, the rehabilitated group had earned income of approximately $258,960 a year. When rehabilitation was completed, the group was earning at the rate of $1,971,190 a year in virtually every type of occupation. The earned income rate of the entire group was increased by 661 per cent.

It is costing up to $1,400 a year under public assistance to aid a dependent disabled person and his family; the program was conducted at a cost of $445 per rehabilitated case, a non-recurring cost.

The federal government through the office of vocational rehabilitation put up 73.0 per cent of the cost of operating the program in Louisiana during the fiscal year, amounting to $421,903 and supplementing $156,244 of state and local funds.

Office Of Education

During the fiscal year 1948-1949 Louisiana received $530,694 to assist it in financing state and local programs of vocational education and $96,978 for its land-grand college program through authorization of the office of education. This agency of the federal government helps in many ways to promote the cause of education throughout the United States. Its specialists conduct research aimed at the solution of problems facing teachers and school administrators at all levels of education. Interpretations of research findings and information useful to educators and the public are made available through publications, correspondence, personal consultation, and conference. Cooperation with local, state and national education officials and organizations, both public and private, is a continuing function of the office of education.

Food And Drug Administration

The food and drug administration, which cooperates with state and local communities in protecting consumers against adulterated and misbranded foods and drugs, reported that 1,840 violative interstate shipments throughout the nation were removed from consumer use by federal seizure in the fiscal year 1948-49. A total of 350 criminal actions were brought in federal courts against firms and individuals charged with violating the federal food, drug and cosmetic act. The courts were requested to enjoin 17 firms from shipping illegal items in interstate commerce. Imported shipments of foods, drugs and cosmetics refused entry because they did not comply with U. S. requirements numbered 6,372.

The food and drug administration has 16 fully equipped field laboratories manned by expert chemists and inspectors, 3 subdistricts with laboratory facilities, 3 sea-food inspection points, and resident inspectors stationed at 38 other strategic cities throughout the country. This system maintains consumer protection over foods, drugs and cosmetics shipped in interstate commerce and also goods held in warehouses and retail stores after interstate shipment.

A field laboratory of the food and drug administration is located in New Orleans. The food and drug administration also has a resident inspector in Shreveport and sea-food inspectors in Houma and Golden Meadow, La.

Bureau Of Employe's Compensation

The bureau of employe's compensation of the federal security agency expended $14 million during the fiscal year 1949 in order to provide medical, disability, and death benefits for federal employes injured due to work accidents. Medical and compensation benefits were provided for 118,000 injured federal employes or their families. An additional $8.5 million, exclusive of medical costs, was expended by private employers or their insurance carriers in 135,000 injury cases closed under other compensation acts administered by the bureau.

Compensation benefits and services provided by the federal government were made available to 4,896 injured employes in the state of Louisiana during the year 1949. Of this number, 1,219 workers were employes of the federal government and 3,677 workers were employed by private industry subject to federal workmen's compensation jurisdiction. Compensation payments to injured federal employes in the state of Louisiana amounted to $180,000 during 1949.

Mr. bond said: "The benefits and services received through the federal security agency's programs by the people of Louisiana during the past year demonstrate the effectiveness of state and federal teamwork. The Dallas regional office serves Louisiana's agencies in this joint endeavor. It also facilitates administration of the wholly federal programs."

Baptist Union Defends Action Inside Italy

ROME, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Baptist Union of Italy said today that statements ascribing political motives to protestant activities in Italy had a precedent under fascism.

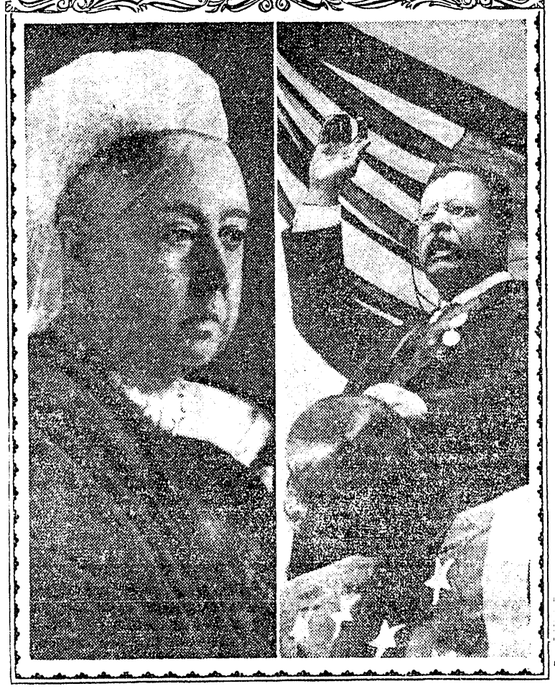

The union, which includes 50 churches, two schools and an orphanage, referred to a comment this week by an Italian interior ministry spokesman that protestant work in Italy "often aids Communism."

The interior ministry spokesman did not mention any churches by name.

Manfredi Ronchi, secretary of the union, said that "during fascism protestant work (in Italy) execlusively religious as always, was viewed by (Catholic) ecclesiastical and civilian authorities as being anti-nation * * * today, to impress the profoundly Democratic American mentality, there is an effort to give the impression that protestant activity is pro-Communist.

"The attempt to place religious questions upon a political ground and to justify episodes of intolerance from a political view is not new."

HALF-CENTURY HIGHLIGHTS

TURN OF THE CENTURY In 1900 found the 63-year reign of England's Queen Victoria within a year of its end. Her strait-laced personality's standards of manners and morals made an impress so deep that after her death in 1901 a whole generation of Britons and Americans lived in the slow-slackening grip of the "Victorian Age." In the U. S., 1901 saw the emergence of a contrasting personality when Theodore Roosevelt became president. Dynamic proponent of "the strenuous life," he inaugurated an exciting period of overseas expansion through "manifest destiny," dealing the cards as America played its first hand in the game of modern power-politics. At home, he kept the U. S. in an uproar with his "trust busting" attacks on Wall Street "plutocrats."

CHARLES PRICE CIVIC LEADER

Newcomer To Monroe To Serve As Publicity Chairman Of Red Cross

By Ginny Jones
(Red Cross Reporter)

Charles Price, commercial manager for a local radio station, brings to the office of publicity chairman for the Ouachita chapter of the Red Cross, a background of extensive training and many advantages which the average layman is without. Mr. Price accepted the office with the organization about six months ago.

A newcomer to Monroe at that time Mr. Price showed remarkable sense of civic duty by immediately plunging into work which is for the good of the whole community, and since that time has been a valuable volunteer worker for Red Cross.

Years ago Mr. Price was in business that called for traveling much of the time in his native state of Indiana, and during that time witnessed a flood which inundated the whole state to some etent. It was there his first interest in Red Cross was arounsed witnessing the vast amount of assistance rendered those affected. This aid Mr. Price told, was in the form of replacement of furniture, homes, clothing, etc.

When asked how he came to be working in Red Cross Mr. Price answered "Shortly after we moved to Monroe Clifford Pearce asked me would I handle the publicity, since I was already in that field, and was in a position to give some time as well as talent to a good cause. I accepted."

Asked how long he had work for Red Cross the answer was a surprise in the face of the good work Mr. Price is doing, "Only six months," he answered, "this is my first experience actually affiliated with the organization."

At the question of why he continued in Red Cross Mr. Price gave what is fast becoming the standard answer "Because I find it a wonderful opportunity to serve my fellowman and Red Cross is a good organization to back."

Continuing with, "People are happiest where they find the best things of life, and it is a pleasure to endeavor to make life happy wherever I am."

In explaining his particular phase of the work Price stated, "The national headquarters send out regularly printed matter which is intended to keep the general public abreast of the activities of the Red Cross, these include posters and articles, and we have been most fortunate in having the business houses and hotels furnish display space for our posters, and the co-operation given us by the newspapers and radios who have so generously assisted us in putting this matter before the listening and reading public."

INGRID'S DIVORCE DELAYS MARRIAGE

Rossellini's Annulment Of Former Marriage Upheld By Court

TURPIN, Italy, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Film star Ingrid Bergman and film Director last legal hurdle today on their road Roberto Rossellini cleared the next to to marriage.

An Italian court here recognized the validity of an Austrian annulment of Rossellini's previous marriage.

The Swedish star of Joan of Arc now must obtain her own divorce from Hollywood Surgeon Peter Lindstrom. Negotiations for custody of their 11-year-old daughter, Pia, have been going on for several weeks.

The annulment was obtained by Mrs. Rossellini under a friendly arrangement. The Rome newspaper Il Paese Sera quoted her as telling a friend: "I believe Ingrid can make Roberto happy. As for me, I'm 33 years old and life can still smile at me."

Ingrid, in seclusion since finishing a picture with Rossellini on the volcanic island of Stromboli, is 32.

To be valid in Italy, the Rossellini annulment needed recognition by an Italian court. The state opposed the proceedings here, arguing that the case case should properly have been heard in Rome. The two married at Civitavecchia, near Rome, in 1936.

The court ruled that it was competent because Rosellini has property in Turin. It also dismissed arguments by the state that recognition of the Austrian-type decree was contrary to Italian legal procedure.

The decree ordered Rossellini to return to Mrs. Rossellini furniture and other household effects that were part of her dowry. He was also asked to give her an unspecified sum of money.

The principals did not appear in court.

Rossellini kept in touch by telephone from Rome with his lawyer, Mario Luzzati. Il Paese Sera said that, when Rossellini was told of the court's decision, he turned the phone over to Miss Bergman, who thanked the lawyer in Swedish and in Italian and then blew him a kiss.

WINDSTORM HITS NEW YORK STATE

One Killed, At Least Nine Others Reported Suffering Injuries

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A windstorm of hurricane proportions battered New York state today, killing one person, injuring at least nine others and causing damage in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The western, central and northern parts of the state were hardest hit. Gusts reached as high as 95 miles an hour.

The destructive blow—the second to hit the state this week—wrecked buildings, uprooted trees, felled power and telephone lines and smashed windows.

An 80-mile-an-hour wind blew a Greyhound bus off a highway near the Canadian border village of Malone. One passenger, John G. Bradt of Ithaca, was injured.

Three radio stations in Buffalo were knocked off the air when their power lines were felled into the outlying town of Hamburg.

Many small boats on the windswept waters of Lake Erie were wrecked. The gales forced residents of the lakeshore community of Woodlawn to evacuate their homes.

The winds diminished in force late in the day.

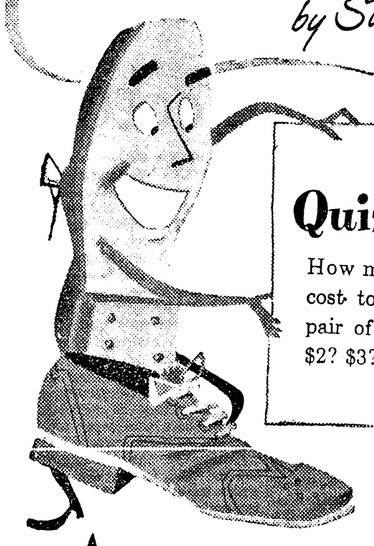

Gusts up to 78 miles an hour struck LaGuardia Field near New York this afternoon, but planes held to schedule.

Gusts reaching 95 miles an hour were clocked at Rochester and Buffalo, 85 to 90 miles at Niagara Falls and 85 at Watertown. All were well above hurricane force of 75 miles an hour.

At Rochester, a sustained blow of 72 miles an hour for five minutes was a new record. The previous one was 66 miles an hour for one minute in February, 1946.

Bet You Don't Know This About Advertising

Quiz No. 3

How much does it cost to advertise a pair of shoes? Is it $2? $3? $5?

Answer: Less than 7¢ of each dollar you pay covers both the manufacturer's and retailer's advertising.

That's only half the story. Advertising lowers your cost two ways:

Cuts the selling costs. And by helping make mass production possible, lowers the production costs, too.

So advertising saves you many times that 7¢ per dollar.

Brown Industries Official Rated As Man Of Month

Outstanding Exponent Of Business And Philanthropy Cited For Brilliant Career

MAN OF MONTH

E. W. BROWN JR.

Outstanding exponent of industrialism, ranching, banking and philanthropy, intermingled with many forward looking programs for vast southern development, E. W. Brown, Jr., of Orange, Tex., has been selected as "Man of the Month" by the East Texas Chamber of Commerce. This high honor, accepted in his usual modest manner, does not fail to be of deepest interest not only in his native state, but also in the Twin Cities where Mr. Brown, one of the founders and principal stockholders of the Brown Paper Mill., Co., Inc., has pioneered in the development of this company and the affiliated plants, operated by his sons, Brown Container Co., Inc., and Brown Paper Industries, Inc. These concerns employ hundreds of men and are the backbone of Monroe and West Monroe industry.

Mr. Brown has been an outstanding proponent of Sabine river development for over 30 years, serving as first honorary member of the Sabine River Watershed Association. Waterways activities have always intrigued Mr. Brown and he has been tireless in his efforts. He served as director of Inland Waterways, director of the Intracoastal Canal Association and former active chairman of the city wharf and dock commission of Orange.

His busy life has reached out into many activities. As owner and operator of Pinehurst Farms in Orange, and of Red Top Ranch in West Texas, he has been able to make many successful experiments in the field of cattle breeding and soil and pasture improvement. His interest along this line of research has been actuated by a sincere desire to help the Texas farmer and rancher improve his herds and farms. Since 1914, Mr. Brown has introduced into Southeast Texas the short horn cattle, the Brahma and the Swiss. Resultant from this experiment has emerged an outstanding herd called the "Bra-Swiss," a breed suited to the climate and soil of Texas.

Mr. Brown is a councilor of Texas A. and M. Research Foundation, and a contributor to and supporter of the grass research projects of the University of Texas. Resultant from this scientific interest, he has made many contributions to the improvement of pasture grasses suited to the Sabine area.

He is a very active director of the Houston fat stock show and livestock exposition. The top price he pays at the auctions do much to help youthful exhibitors. In fact, in 1947, Mr. Brown paid the highest price ever paid at this show for the Grand Champion Steer, and thereby assured a college education for a sixteen year old 4-H Club boy.

For nineteen years Mr. Brown owned a world famed stable of fine American saddle horses and hackney ponies, for which he received many trophies and ribbons. The stable was a vital part of his agricultural development program.

Although not so widely known, Mr. Brown's interests in philanthrophy and charity are equal to his scientific interests in the improvement of ranching. He has made gifts that run into many figures, but he never speaks about these, as he desires no publicity for his sympathy with human suffering or his warmhearted interests in the welfare of others.

From 1915 to 1947 he was chairman of the Orange county Red Cross disaster committee. Some of his plans during the last war were so efficient that they were used as national models. He, in his own Beechcraft plane, was one of the first to arrive with nurses and medicines at Texas City during the disaster. He is now chairman of the Red Cross advisory board.

Mr. Brown's industrial interests are as wide as his business acumen is deep. He is an outstanding Texas banker and is president of the Orange National Bank, president of Higman Towing Company, vice-president and co-owner with his brother in the Brown Paper Mill which became an outgrowth of the Yellow Pine Paper Mill of Orange, which ranks as the first to make Kraft paper from yellow pine. his Orange mill was started by his father, Dr. E. W. Brown, in 1904.

Mr. Brown's forbears have been outstanding East Texas citizens for over a half century. His grandfather, Henry Jacob Lutcher, was one of the most illustrious pioneer lumbermen in the south.

Edgar Brown owned and operated Levingston Shipbuilding Company from 1933 to 1945. While he was president, the company was the first in Texas to receive the army-navy "E". A kind man with a very warm heart, eager to take time off from his many interests to participate in civic betterment and humanitarian projects—this is the proud record of E. W. Brown, Jr.

Interested with their father in his many interests are his four sons, Edgar Brown, Jr., (third); Slade Brown, John Brown and Charles Brown (second).

ANTICIPATE 1951 CROP CONTROLLING

Provisions For Future Curbs Included In Present Budget Plans

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Agriculture department anticipates the possibility of rigid production controls in 1951 on such crops as cotton, wheat, tobacco, sugar, peanuts, corn and rice.

Provisions for such curbs appear in budget planning.

Appropriations requested for the department by President Truman in his budget report this week would cover costs of operating control programs for these crops in 1951 if they were found to be needed.

Department officials emphasize, however, that the fact that the agency has taken the precaution to set up a budget for control measures does not necessarily mean controls will actually be imposed or needed.

Rigid controls comprise mainly marketing quotas for individual growers. Those selling in excess of quotas are subject to stiff penalties. Quotas are in effect this year only for cotton, tobacco and peanuts.

The decision whether quotas will be needed next year must await outturn of this year's crops and an appraisal of market prospects for the 1951 crops.

Controls on sugar would be limited to producers of sugar cane and sugar beets in this country and sugar cane in Puerto Rico.

Domestic producers have not been growing enough sugar to supply the amount they are entitled to market under sugar control legislation. The domestic beet area has a minimum annual quota 1,800,000 tons. Production in 1949 is estimated to be 15 per cent short of this amount.

The United States Beet Sugar Association contends that the price of sugar is not high enough to encourage domestic producers to grow the full amount allowed them under a control program.

In the case of Puerto Rico, the department announced some time ago that it may be necessary to put quotas on individual producers there this year. A hearing on the matter will be held in Puerto Rico soon.

'Seventeenth Summer' Coming February 8

The Neville speech department brings a hit from Maureen Daly's famous novel, the "Seventeenth Summer." From the way various high schools in the country are producing this play it can only be concluded that it is one of the all time greats of the amateur stage.

STORY: Angie is filled with excitment, for Jack Duluth, the town's most desirable man, has asked her to be the first to go sailing in his new boat. Angie and Jack have a wonderful time, and they begin to care for each other. But Angie has a bitter rival in Jack's former girl friend who is determined to get him back, so when they have a tiff she uses this as a wedge to pry them apart, and misunderstandings and disappointments multiply until Angie is crushed. Jack doesn't phone, and Angie waits and her seventeenth summer is almost over,and still Jack doesn't call. Then in an exciting finale that is going to thrill the audience, this play comes to a superb end. Surrounding Angie is one of the most personable, entertaining and thoroughly likable cast of characters that will ever step from the printer page to the boards of your theatre.

In it are all the joy and pathos of youth caught up in an enchanting comedy of complete understanding.

Make a date now to see this new heart warming play about youth Feb. 8, 1950, 8:00 p.m. at the Neville auditorium.

Brannan Plan Called Socialism At Its Best

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A national farm leader said today that Secretary of Agriculture Brannan's plan for supporting farm prices could lead to a friendly sort of Socialism at best.

And Allan B. Kline, president of the National Farm Bureau Federation, said it would lead to a dictatorship at worst.

The Vinton, Iowa, man spoke at the closing session of the Southern Farm Forum here.

Kline said the government would try to maintain the farmers' profit and consumers' low cost by taking over labor and then transportation.

Tom Linder, Georgia's commissioner of agriculture, presented a plan that would make the selling price of cotton exactly the same as 100 per cent of parity.

"I mean, of course, actual parity based on present conditions and not some fake parity as we have been having, based on conditions that ceased to exist in 1914," Linder said.

His plan has received the support of Louisiana Commissioner of Agriculture W. E. Anderson.

OVER 54 MILLION TO STATE IN '49

Federal Security Makes Report Of Aid In All Lines Rendered

The people of Louisiana have benefited during the past year to the extent of $54,431,475, which represents the national government's share in their state and local investment in health, education, and social welfare, according to a summary released today by J. H. Bond, regional director of the federal security agency with headquarters in Dallas. The figure of $54,431,475, Mr. Bond said, includes payments under the federal old-age and survivors insurance program and is based on preliminary data on Louisiana's participation in the various FSA programs. The operation of these programs is described in the forthcoming FSA annual report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1949 to be issued by Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

"Even this substantial investment," Regional Director Bond pointed out, "does not tell the whole story in terms either of people or of money, since it does not take account of certain nation-wide FSA services which benefit every citizen of Louisiana. These services are food and drug regulation, services to the state's education system, supervision of federal credit unions, and public health services operated directly by the public health service, such as quarantine and epidemic control.

"A total of 229,859 men, women and children in Louisiana benefited directly from federal funds added to Louisiana's investment in health, education, welfare, vocational rehabilitation and social security. These citizens received individual benefits or services during the past year through federal security agency programs operating in their own communities, most of them with the cooperation of both state and national governments."

"These direct beneficiaries," he explained, "include: children who get health care, or who are dependent or in danger of becoming delinquent, the needy blind; disabled men and women being rehabilitated into jobs; old people receiving assistance; and those receiving federal social security benefits, including both retired workers and the families of insured workers who have died."

"As for the investment of $54,431,475 itself," Mr. Bond continued, "our accounting represents only the federal share in the partnership. To complete the picture, Louisiana would have to add its own state and local funds which its citizens also use for these purposes. Only four of the major programs under the federal security agency are administered entirely by the federal government. These are: old-age and survivors insurance, food and drug regulation, federal credit unions, and federal employes' compensation."

Regional Director Bond's summary of federal security agency activities in Louisiana shows the following breakdown for the fiscal year 1948-1949:

Social Security Administration

Of a total of $23,149,300 of federal money paid to the states in the fiscal year 1948-49 for health and welfare services to mothers and children, Louisiana received approximately $598,900 to help build up its maternal and child health, crippled children's and child welfare programs.

These programs are administered by state agencies under plans approved by the children's bureau, social security administrator.

Under the social security act, federal funds are also made available to help states finance approved plans for public assistance. Federal grants to Louisiana for assistance to dependent children, the needy aged and the blind were as follows for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1949; aid to dependent children, $7,325,000; old-age assistance, $37,099,000; and aid to the needy blind, $451,000.

The number of Louisiana recipients under the three state-federal assistance programs in June 1949 were: aid to dependent children, 63104 in 24,323 families; old-age assistance, 118,239; and aid to the needy blind, 1,673.

By June 30, 1949 28,318 residents of Louisiana were receiving monthly payments under the federal system of old-age and survivors insurance at a rate of $474,177. This program provides a monthly income for workers in private industry and commerce and their families when the worker retires at age 65 or later and for his family when he dies. Monthly benefits certified for payment to retired workers, their wives, and their dependent children in Louisiana during the fiscal year 1948-49 amounted to $3,121,000. Monthly benefits to survivors of insured workers totaled $2,409,000. These payments went to children, widowed mothers, aged widows, and aged parents of deceased workers. In addition, lumpsum payments totaling $297,000 were made to survivors who were not immediately eligible for monthly benefits.

Under another program of the social security administration, there were on June 30, 1949, 86 federal credit unions in Louisiana with 34,161 members. Federal credit unions are cooperative associations promoting systematic savings and making small consumer-type loans to members. The 86 federal credit unions in Louisiana had total savings of $4,631,375 of which $3,456,956 represented outstanding loans. Formed by groups of industrial employes, teachers, government workers, religious organizations, lodges and residential groups, these associations are chartered, supervised and eamined by the bureau of federal credit unions. As of June 30, 1949, there were 4,301 federal credit unions in the United States with 1.7 million members.

Public Health Service

General health funds amounting to $233,000 were paid out of the federal treasury to help Louisiana build up and maintain its local health departments, control communicable diseases, improve sanitation, and carry on health education, demonstrations, personnel training, and other general public health services including industrial hygiene, and cancer control.

Louisiana received $155,000 to carry out effective measures for the prevention, treatment, and control of tuberculosis in the state. An important part of tuberculosis work, the making of mass X-ray surveys to discover the disease in its early, remediable stages, was made possible through grants-in-aid. The state was further assisted by consultation service, loan of personnel, demonstrations of photofluorographic units in the field, and the development of clinic and nursing services.

Federal funds expended for control of veneral disease in Louisiana amounted to $475,000 in the fiscal year 1949. Nine thousand, four hundred and ten patients were admitted for treatment in the state's rapid treatment centers which benefited by these federal grants.

Under the hospital survey and construction act of 1946, Louisiana received $595,000 during the year for surveying its needs for hospitals and health centers and for the construction of hospitals. This represents only funds actually paid over during the fiscal year by the federal government, not the total amount allotted to the state under the hospital survey and construction act.

Consultation services and technical aid to the state in various phases of its hospital program was also furnished by the public health service.

In the fields of cancer and mental health, grants in the amount of $62,000 were made for cancer control, and $46,000 for mental health activities.

In addition to grants given directly to the state, 16 research grants representing a total of $234,000 were made to universities, hospitals, and other research institutions in Louisiana. Teaching traineeships and fellowships awarded in the state amounted to $101,000. This money was for research in the causes and methods of prevention of the diseases of man, including cancer, infectious diseases, diseases of old age, malnutrition, and the effects of various industrial substances, processes, and environments.

Office Of Vocational Rehabilitation

Through the state-federal partnership system for vocational rehabilitation of civilians, 2,954 disabled men and women of Louisiana at the end of the year were receiving services to restore, preserve or develop their ability to make a living. During the year, another 1,265 disabled men and women were successfully prepared for and placed in employment through these services—medical, surgical, psychiatric and hospital care; artificial limbs and other aids; individual counsel and guidance; training for suitable jobs; placement on the right job and follow-up to make sure they made good. Of this latter group, 1,044 were unemployed when rehabilitation services were started, and 190 had never been able to work. Virtually all of the others were in imminent danger of losing their jobs through disability.

Prior to the start of rehabilitation services, the rehabilitated group had earned income of approximately $258,960 a year. When rehabilitation was completed, the group was earning at the rate of $1,971,190 a year in virtually every type of occupation. The earned income rate of the entire group was increased by 661 per cent.

It is costing up to $1,400 a year under public assistance to aid a dependent disabled person and his family; the program was conducted at a cost of $445 per rehabilitated case, a non-recurring cost.

The federal government through the office of vocational rehabilitation put up 73.0 per cent of the cost of operating the program in Louisiana during the fiscal year, amounting to $421,903 and supplementing $156,244 of state and local funds.

Office Of Education

During the fiscal year 1948-1949 Louisiana received $530,694 to assist it in financing state and local programs of vocational education and $96,978 for its land-grand college program through authorization of the office of education. This agency of the federal government helps in many ways to promote the cause of education throughout the United States. Its specialists conduct research aimed at the solution of problems facing teachers and school administrators at all levels of education. Interpretations of research findings and information useful to educators and the public are made available through publications, correspondence, personal consultation, and conference. Cooperation with local, state and national education officials and organizations, both public and private, is a continuing function of the office of education.

Food And Drug Administration

The food and drug administration, which cooperates with state and local communities in protecting consumers against adulterated and misbranded foods and drugs, reported that 1,840 violative interstate shipments throughout the nation were removed from consumer use by federal seizure in the fiscal year 1948-49. A total of 350 criminal actions were brought in federal courts against firms and individuals charged with violating the federal food, drug and cosmetic act. The courts were requested to enjoin 17 firms from shipping illegal items in interstate commerce. Imported shipments of foods, drugs and cosmetics refused entry because they did not comply with U. S. requirements numbered 6,372.

The food and drug administration has 16 fully equipped field laboratories manned by expert chemists and inspectors, 3 subdistricts with laboratory facilities, 3 sea-food inspection points, and resident inspectors stationed at 38 other strategic cities throughout the country. This system maintains consumer protection over foods, drugs and cosmetics shipped in interstate commerce and also goods held in warehouses and retail stores after interstate shipment.

A field laboratory of the food and drug administration is located in New Orleans. The food and drug administration also has a resident inspector in Shreveport and sea-food inspectors in Houma and Golden Meadow, La.

Bureau Of Employe's Compensation

The bureau of employe's compensation of the federal security agency expended $14 million during the fiscal year 1949 in order to provide medical, disability, and death benefits for federal employes injured due to work accidents. Medical and compensation benefits were provided for 118,000 injured federal employes or their families. An additional $8.5 million, exclusive of medical costs, was expended by private employers or their insurance carriers in 135,000 injury cases closed under other compensation acts administered by the bureau.

Compensation benefits and services provided by the federal government, were made available to 4,896 injured employes in the state of Louisiana during the year 1949. Of this number, 1,219 workers were employes of the federal government and 3,677 workers were employed by private industry subject to federal workmen's compensation jurisdiction. Compensation payments to injured federal employes in the state of Louisiana amounted to $180,000 during 1949.

Mr. bond said: "The benefits and services received through the federal security agency's programs by the people of Louisiana during the past year demonstrate the effectiveness of state and federal teamwork. The Dallas regional office serves Louisiana's agencies in this joint endeavor. It also facilitates administration of the wholly federal programs."

Baptist Union Defends Action Inside Italy

ROME, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Baptist Union of Italy said today that statements ascribing political motives to protestant activities in Italy had a precedent under fascism.

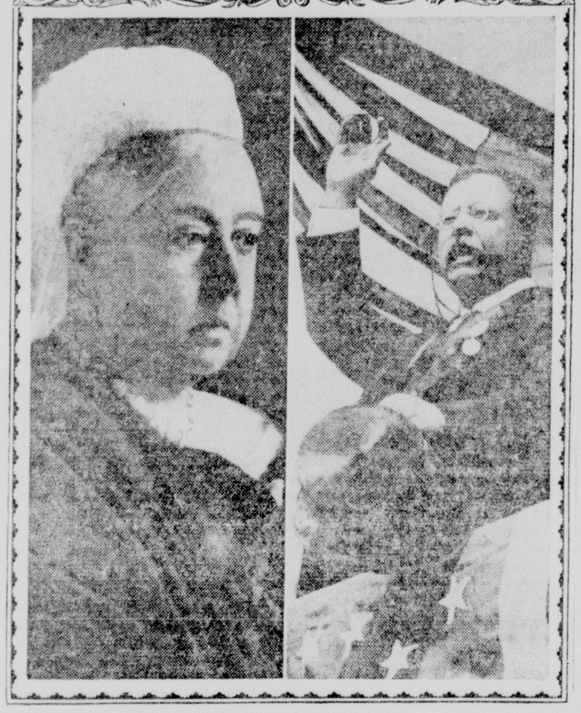

The union, which includes 50 churches, two schools and an orphanage, referred to a comment this week by an Italian interior ministry spokesman that protestant work in Italy "often aids Communism."

The interior ministry spokesman did not mention any churches by name.

Manfredi Ronchi, secretary of the union, said that "during fascism protestant work (in Italy) execlusively religious as always, was viewed by (Catholic) ecclesiastical and civilian authorities as being anti-nation * * * today, to impress the profoundly Democratic American mentality, there is an effort to give the impression that protestant activity is pro-Communist.

"The attempt to place religious questions upon a political ground and to justify episodes of intolerance from a political view is not new."

HALF-CENTURY HIGHLIGHTS

TURN OF THE CENTURY in 1900 found the 63-year reign of England's Queen Victoria within a year of its end. Her strait-laced personality's standards of manners and morals made an impress so deep that after her death in 1901 a whole generation of Britons and Americans lived in the slow-slackening grip of the "Victorian Age." In the U. S., 1901 saw the emergence of a contrasting personality when Theodore Roosevelt became president. Dynamic proponent of "the strenuous life," he inaugurated an exciting period of overseas expansion through "manifest destiny," dealing the cards as America played its first hand in the game of modern power-politics. At home, he kept the U. S. in an uproar with his "trust busting" attacks on Wall Street "plutocrats."

CHARLES PRICE CIVIC LEADER

Newcomer To Monroe To Serve As Publicity Chairman Of Red Cross

By Ginny Jones
(Red Cross Reporter)

Charles Price, commercial manager for a local radio station, brings to the office of publicity chairman for the Ouachita chapter of the Red Cross, a background of extensive training and many advantages which the average layman is without. Mr. Price accepted the office with the organization about six months ago.

A newcomer to Monroe at that time Mr. Price showed remarkable sense of civic duty by immediately plunging into work which is for the good of the whole community, and since that time has been a valuable volunteer worker for Red Cross.

Years ago Mr. Price was in business that called for traveling much of the time in his native state of Indiana, and during that time witnessed a flood which inundated the whole state to some etent. It was there his first interest in Red Cross was arounsed witnessing the vast amount of assistance rendered those affected. This aid Mr. Price told, was in the form of replacement of furniture, homes, clothing, etc.

When asked how he came to be working in Red Cross Mr. Price answered "Shortly after we moved to Monroe Clifford Pearce asked me would I handle the publicity, since I was already in that field, and was in a position to give some time as well as talent to a good cause. I accepted."

Asked how long he had work for Red Cross the answer was a surprise in the face of the good work Mr. Price is doing. "Only six months," he answered, "this is my first experience actually affiliated with the organization."

At the question of why he continued in Red Cross Mr. Price gave what is fast becoming the standard answer "Because I find it a wonderful opportunity to serve my fellowman and Red Cross is a good organization to back."

Continuing with, "People are happiest where they find the best things of life, and it is a pleasure to endeavor to make life happy wherever I am."

In explaining his particular phase of the work Price stated, "The national headquarters send out regularly printed matter which is intended to keep the general public abreast of the activities of the Red Cross, these include posters and articles, and we have been most fortunate in having the business houses and hotels furnish display space for our posters, and the co-operation given us by the newspapers and radios who have so generously assisted us in putting this matter before the listening and reading public."

INGRID'S DIVORCE DELAYS MARRIAGE

Rossellini's Annulment Of Former Marriage Upheld By Court

TURPIN, Italy, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Film star Ingrid Bergman and film Director last legal hurdle today on their road Roberto Rossellini cleared the next to to marriage.

An Italian court here recognized the validity of an Austrian annulment of Rossellini's previous marriage.

The Swedish star of Joan of Arc now must obtain her own divorce from Hollywood Surgeon Peter Lindstrom. Negotiations for custody of their 11-year-old daughter, Pia, have been going on for several weeks.

The annulment was obtained by Mrs. Rossellini under a friendly arrangement. The Rome newspaper Il Paese Sera quoted her as telling a friend: "I believe Ingrid can make Roberto happy. As for me, I'm 33 years old and life can still smile at me."

Ingrid, in seclusion since finishing a picture with Rossellini on the volcanic island of Stromboli, is 32.

To be valid in Italy, the Rossellini annulment needed recognition by an Italian court. The state opposed the proceedings here, arguing that the case case should properly have been heard in Rome. The two married at Civitavecchia, near Rome, in 1936.

The court ruled that it was competent because Rosellini has property in Turin. It also dismissed arguments by the state that recognition of the Austrian-type decree was contrary to Italian legal procedure.

The decree ordered Rossellini to return to Mrs. Rossellini furniture and other household effects that were part of her dowry. He was also asked to give her an unspecified sum of money.

The principals did not appear in court.

Rossellini kept in touch by telephone from Rome with his lawyer, Mario Luzzati. Il Paese Sera said that, when Rossellini was told of the court's decision, he turned the phone over to Miss Bergman, who thanked the lawyer in Swedish and in Italian and then blew him a kiss.

WINDSTORM HITS NEW YORK STATE

One Killed, At Least Nine Others Reported Suffering Injuries

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A windstorm of hurricane proportions battered New York state today, killing one person, injuring at least nine others and causing damage in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The western, central and northern parts of the state were hardest hit. Gusts reached as high as 95 miles an hour.

The destructive blow—the second to hit the state this week—wrecked buildings, uprooted trees, felled power and telephone lines and smashed windows.

An 80-mile-an-hour wind blew a Greyhound bus off a highway near the Canadian border village of Malone. One passenger, John G. Bradt of Ithaca, was injured.

Three radio stations in Buffalo were knocked off the air when their power lines were felled into the outlying town of Hamburg.

Many small boats on the windswept waters of Lake Erie were wrecked. The gales forced residents of the lakeshore community of Woodlawn to evacuate their homes.

The winds diminished in force late in the day.

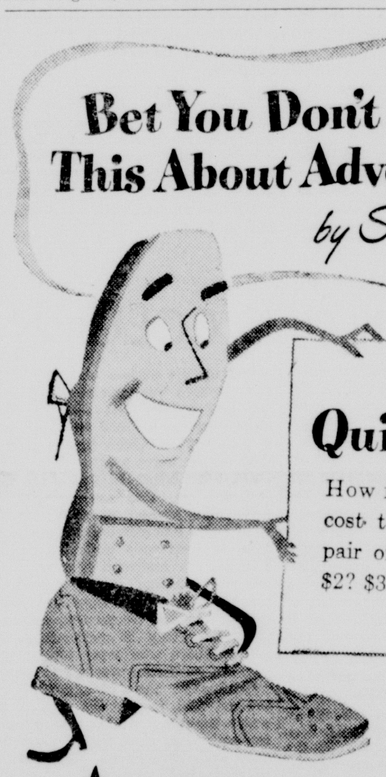

Gusts up to 78 miles an hour struck LaGuardia Field near New York this afternoon, but planes held to schedule.

Gusts reaching 95 miles an hour were clocked at Rochester and Buffalo, 85 to 90 miles at Niagara Falls and 85 at Watertown. All were well above hurricane force of 75 miles an hour.

At Rochester, a sustained blow of 72 miles an hour for five minutes was a new record. The previous one was 66 miles an hour for one minute in February, 1946.

Bet You Don't Know This About Advertising

Quiz No. 3

How much does it cost to advertise a pair of shoes? Is it $2? $3? $5?

Answer: Less than 7¢ of each dollar you pay covers both the manufacturer's and retailer's advertising.

That's only half the story. Advertising lowers your cost two ways:

Cuts the selling costs. And by helping make mass production possible, lowers the production costs, too.

So advertising saves you many times that 7¢ per dollar.

RUSK STATEMENT PARTLY REVEALED

He Says The 'Great Revolutionary Movement Can Be Perverted'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The state department today released excerpts from a statement by Deputy Undersecretary Dean Rusk in which he said that "great revolutionary movements can be perverted—as in China."

"But in China we see a coming conflict between Chinese nationalism and Russian imperialism masquerading in the guise of international communism," he said. Addressing a regional conference of the world affairs council in Philadelphia yesterday, he added:

"This conflict is fundamental and we should do nothing on our part to blur it over or to minimize its importance."

In a Philadelphia dispatch yesterday, the Associated Press quoted Rusk as saying the Chinese Communist revolution is "not Russian in essence" and does not aim at dictatorship.

Asserting this was not a correct understanding of his remarks, a state department officials gave out this excerpt of the passage in question:

"When we turn to the situation in the Far East the question arises as to whether our principal objective in that area is stability. I doubt that we Americans would wish to freeze the situation is Asia as we now find it. The issue is not stability but the direction of revolution.

"For at least a half century Asia has been the scene of great revolutions. A Nationalist revolution seeking self-government and self-determination; a political revolution seeking a greater democratization of the exercise of public power; economic and social revolutions against the burdensome institutions which have been partly responsible for the poverty and misery of the vast populations of Asia.

"When we look at the purposes of these revolutions we find them familiar. They are familiar because they are, in a sense, our own revolution. Their ideologies are fundamentally the ideologies of the British, French and American revolutions—the Liberal Democratic revolutions of the 17th and 18th Centuries.

"These Asiatic revolutionary movements have not been Communist or Russian inspired; their objective has not been dictatorship or authoritarianism.

"We have found that these great revolutionary movements can be perverted—as in China."

Little Theatre Curtain Call

The past week of rain and sunless days has been enough to dampen the spirit of less imaginative people than Director Stocker Fontelieu's cast of Little Theatre's second comedy of the season "Her Husband's Wife." And then there was Friday the 13th, thrown in for extra measure, but from all reports, Diretor Fontelieu is joined in his enthusiasm for the action and dialogue that they have been working on for the past week of rehearsal, by all involved.

Frankly, we think choosing a cast for your play is the first prerequisite to a good show and Director Fontelieu possesses that uncanny ability of putting his finger on the right person for the right role. Sometimes, and this happens often, in community theatre one has a hard time securing the actor or actress of choice because of varied and sundry reasons. One of the more prominent headaches of casting for Little Theatre plays is the fact that the intended Thespian characters have to work for a living.

The percentage of incident in Little Theatre play production has to this date hit an average high and even though he close this first week of rehearsal on a very placid note, we give you odds that "Her Husband's Wife" will calk up its portion of accident and incident before it faces the footlights in early February.

SKETCH NOTES—A correction on our nosey enthusiasm for what's so interesting in New Orleans, Director Fontelieu who trys to get to New Orleans at least once a month was taking this week end because for the rest of the month he will be tied up with rehearsals and production of "Her Husband's Wife" and he will also pick up some special lighting equipment for the play while he is down there . . . Mac Ward who drove down with Stocker was taking advantage of a week's vacation from KMLB to pick up his automobile on loan to a Tulane student and may drive his mother to Georgia to see his sister who is reported ill . . . Lady Stahl of N. J. C. received a very unusual card this week in French, wishing her joys for the New Year, from one of her former editors of the Pow-Wow, Seymour Glazer, son of Little Theatre board member Maurice Glazer. The card Indo-China, where he is vice-counsul came all the way from Saigon, French of the United States. Lady recalled that besides his editorship of Pow-Wow, Seymour was also daily editor of the L. S. U. Reville and from there went with the staff of News Week. He spent a great deal of time in China while serving with the Navy in World War II. He returned to News Week but soon afterward gave up this position to devote his full to research for material for short stories and a novel. When he went to the state department last year, his interest in China caused him to request service there . . . Herb McGrath, who appeared as a detective in Friday evenings performance of the three act comedy, "Snafu," N. J. C. prduction, is a nephew of Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine. He has his future cut out for him as an officer in the Marine Corps. . . . Mrs. Laura Dell Szabo, of the N. J. C. faculty, a vivacious new recruit to Little Theatre whom we have intentions of luring before the footlights, is in St. Joseph for the week end where she is guest of Mrs. George Bagley at her plantation home on Lake Bruin. Featured event a round of reunion parties for several of her former classmates.

SPECIAL EVENT — and blessed event. Joe Saragusa whom we reported this week as signing with N. B. C., is the proud father of a son, born Thursday, January 13. Joe will join N. B. C. as announcer John Rutledge upon graduation from L. S. U.

Catholics Accused Of Suspecting Protestants

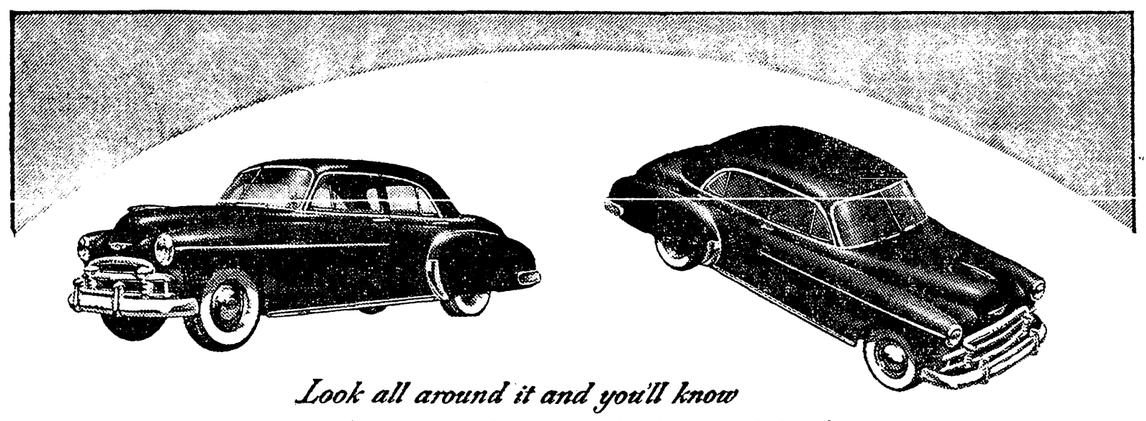

ROME, Sunday, Jan. 15.—(AP)—An American evangelist of the church of Christ said today the Roman Catholic Church, in its fight against Communist, tries to link all other religious groups with the Communist party.

This was the reply of Cline R. Paden of Brownfield, Tex., superintendent of the Church of Christ orphanage at Frascati, to the statement by the Vatican's Osservatore Romano that the activities of his group have become "purely Communist."

"This outright attack on American relief and religious missions, including the Church of Christ," Paden said, "is obviously untrue."

"Conversely," Paden said, "the Communist press in Italy has steadily attacked the Church of Christ as capitalist supporters of the E. R. P. (Marshall Plan) until recently when they used as politically in their fight against Catholic Church."

Further replying to the Catholic newspaper, Paden said the Church of Christ, with a U. S. membership of 2,000,000, has supported the present mission in Italy for a year and has distributed thousands of bundles of clothes and relief.

RUSK STATEMENT PARTLY REVEALED

He Says The 'Great Revolutionary Movement Can Be Perverted'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The state department today released excerpts from a statement by Deputy Undersecretary Dean Rusk in which he said that "great revolutionary movements can be perverted—as in China."

"But in China we see a coming conflict between Chinese nationalism and Russian imperialism masquerading in the guise of international communism," he said. Addressing a regional conference of the world affairs council in Philadelphia yesterday, he added:

"This conflict is fundamental and we should do nothing on our part to blur it over or to minimize its importance."

In a Philadelphia dispatch yesterday, the Associated Press quoted Rusk as saying the Chinese Communist revolution is "not Russian in essence" and does not aim at dictatorship.

Asserting this was not a correct understanding of his remarks, a state department officials gave out this excerpt of the passage in question:

"When we turn to the situation in the Far East the question arises as to whether our principal objective in that area is stability. I doubt that we Americans would wish to freeze the situation is Asia as we now find it. The issue is not stability but the direction of revolution.

"For at least a half century Asia has been the scene of great revolutions. A Nationalist revolution seeking self-government and self-determination; a political revolution seeking a greater democratization of the exercise of public power; economic and social revolutions against the burdensome institutions which have been partly responsible for the poverty and misery of the vast populations of Asia.

"When we look at the purposes of these revolutions we find them familiar. They are familiar because they are, in a sense, our own revolution. Their ideologies are fundamentally the ideologies of the British, French and American revolutions—the Liberal Democratic revolutions of the 17th and 18th Centuries.

"These Asiatic revolutionary movements have not been Communist or Russian inspired; their objective has not been dictatorship or authoritarianism.

"We have found that these great revolutionary movements can be perverted—as in China."

Little Theatre Curtain Call

The past week of rain and sunless days has been enough to dampen the spirit of less imaginative people than Director Stocker Fontelieu's cast of Little Theatre's second comedy of the season "Her Husband's Wife." And then there was Friday the 13th, thrown in for extra measure, but from all reports, Diretor Fontelieu is joined in his enthusiasm for the action and dialogue that they have been working on for the past week of rehearsal, by all involved.

Frankly, we think choosing a cast for your play is the first prerequisite to a good show and Director Fontelieu possesses that uncanny ability of putting his finger on the right person for the right role. Sometimes, and this happens often, in community theatre one has a hard time securing the actor or actress of choice because of varied and sundry reasons. One of the more prominent headaches of casting for Little Theatre plays is the fact that the intended Thespian characters have to work for a living.

The percentage of incident in Little Theatre play production has to this date hit an average high and even though he close this first week of rehearsal on a very placid note, we give you odds that "Her Husband's Wife" will calk up its portion of accident and incident before it faces the footlights in early February.

SKETCH NOTES—A correction on our nosey enthusiasm for what's so interesting in New Orleans, Director Fontelieu who trys to get to New Orleans at least once a month was taking this week end because for the rest of the month he will be tied up with rehearsals and production of "Her Husband's Wife" and he will also pick up some special lighting equipment for the play while he is down there . . . Mac Ward who drove down with Stocker was taking advantage of a week's vacation from KMLB to pick up his automobile on loan to a Tulane student and may drive his mother to Georgia to see his sister who is reported ill . . . Lady Stahl of N. J. C. received a very unusual card this week in French, wishing her joys for the New Year, from one of her former editors of the Pow-Wow, Seymour Glazer, son of Little Theatre board member Maurice Glazer. The card Indo-China, where he is vice-counsul came all the way from Saigon, French of the United States. Lady recalled that besides his editorship of Pow-Wow, Seymour was also daily editor of the L. S. U. Reville and from there went with the staff of News Week. He spent a great deal of time in China while serving with the Navy in World War II. He returned to News Week but soon afterward gave up this position to devote his full to research for material for short stories and a novel. When he went to the state department last year, his interest in China caused him to request service there . . . Herb McGrath, who appeared as a detective in Friday evenings performance of the three act comedy, "Snafu," N. J. C. prduction, is a nephew of Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine. He has his future cut out for him as an officer in the Marine Corps. . . . Mrs. Laura Dell Szabo, of the N. J. C. faculty, a vivacious new recruit to Little Theatre whom we have intentions of luring before the footlights, is in St. Joseph for the week end where she is guest of Mrs. George Bagley at her plantation home on Lake Bruin. Featured event a round of reunion parties for several of her former classmates.

SPECIAL EVENT — and blessed event. Joe Saragusa whom we reported this week as signing with N. B. C., is the proud father of a son, born Thursday, January 13. Joe will join N. B. C. as announcer John Rutledge upon graduation from L. S. U.

One-Third Of Spain's Army To Be Demobilized

MADRID, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Reliable sources said today Generalissimo Francisco Franco will demobilize one-third of Spain's army on Feb. 1. Economy was given as the reason for the reduction.

War ministry informants said the army would be reorganized to incorporate "new tactical methods" learned from World War II.

These informants said there would also be a number of high command changes including the transfer of Lt. Gen. Jose Enrique Varela Iglesias from his post as high commissioner in Spanish Morocco to Madrid. He is politically the most important army general, next to Franco.

Spain at present has an army of about 300,000 troops of which nearly 100,000 are in Spanish Morocco.

Under a record breaking high budget of 18,040,872,075 pesetas ($1,640,000,000) recently approved by the Cortes (parliament) 35 per cent of revenues are earmarked for military expenditures.

RESCUERS DIG

scrambled into a passageway only about 40 feet underground.

A third brother escaped the cavein. Kasmir Burda, 32, was caught in the rush of earth, but managed to leap free, jumping clear out of his boots.

Despite an injured leg and a severe case of shock, Kasmir pitched into the rescue work for a time. Later he went home under a doctor's care.

Two other brothers, Frank and John, also helped the rescue workers claw through the rain-sogged earth in an attempt to reach the trapped men.

The area surrounding the mine cavein was so muddy it was difficult to drive an automobile into the area.

The ground was softened by recent heavy rains. Clearing skies today did little but help buoy the spirits of the rescue workers.

They toiled in teams of three, slanting in along mounds of earth to the heart of the caved in area.

Morgan said one of the major problems is supplying the trapped men with oxygen so that they can breathe. In the pit where they were entombed, there was no air supply.

Steam shovels were put to use pushing a two-inch pipe straight down into the caved in slope to pump air through it to the area beyond the cavein.

Edwards is unmarried. Joseph has a wife and a small son, Joseph, Jr., she stayed away from the pit, anxiously awaiting the word of rescue for which she prayed.

as a basis for the final determination of the successful candidate's identity.

The banquet will interest for, aside from the surprise naming of the man of the year for the Twin Cities, there will be the address by Michael Mors, manager of International House in New Orleans, a speaker of great ability, who will discuss how inter-American trade is being furthered between the groups in this hemisphere.

Age sometimes is an asset, when it is not too great, then it may be a handicap. This has proved true in West Monroe, where the denizens have been quite eager to name Tom E. Hicks as "Man of the Year" in the Jaycee contest. His chief proponents were Civic League Ladies but they ran up into a formidable snag. He has gone far forward past the 35-year age limit so is counted out of the contest. But the league members still feel that his record is quite notable. He is a member of the Ouachita parish police jury; president of the Tensas basin levee board; member of Ouachita Safety Council; member of the Kiwanis Club; president of West Monroe Gravity Drainage district; Fifth district committeeman for the Police Jury Association of Louisiana; chairman of the Ouachita parish Red Cross disaster committee and president of the Ouachita Valley Fair.

Too bad Tom you can't clip off a few of those years!

Police Officer Ralph Graves is passing out the cigars. Its a boy and is he happy! Reporter Margaret Gambrell, though, felt left in the cold. Cigars are out of her line.

Brunswig Sholars, well known young man who only recently left here for the far west, is heard from again as he has become a member of the law firm of Schofield and Hanson, in San Francisco. But let the San Carlos (Calif.) Enquirer tell the story:

"Brunswig Sholars, member of the California and the Louisiana Bar Associations, has become a member of the law firm of Schofield and Hanson, in the Flood building, Sna Francisco. Mr. Sholars, with his wife and two children, reside in San Carlos.

"He is a descendant of a long line of lawyers. He first entered practice in Monroe, La., in 1943. In World War II he was an army captain, field artillery with 13 citations including the silver star, bronze star, three purple hearts, five presidential citations and saw service in 19 divisions.

"On release from hospitalization in 1945 he became post advocate at Camp Butler, North Carolina. His wife is a former army nurse."

Herb Bailey, daddy of an only daughter now less than a month old, is making fatherly provision for her future. He has her well insured so that when she is of college age she will be properly financed. And to make a good thing even better, he deposits a nice little sum each month in the bank to her credit. This, he says, will be financing if she wants to spend a year or so in Europe when she has completed her college course. This plan surely is a good one and many fathers would do well to follow a similar course now when money is so easily available.

Right in the middle of the street, In front of the residence of Sheriff Bailey Grant, 207 South Second street, West Monroe, there lay one morning last week a huge possum flattened out by some passing auto. It was viewed by many persons before it was removed. This neighborhood is quite a select one for closeby are the following neighbor's of the high sheriff. At 202 South Second resides State Senator John F. McCormick and Robert (Bob) Kilgore, city court marshal, lives at 206 South Second street. If anything further is needed for good measure, Ralph Scoop White, vice-president of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor and also Louisiana League Reporter publisher, lives at 210 Ludwig avenue, only a stone's throw distant.

Monroe is delighted to possess a budding young novelist in her midst, Hillyer Speed Lamkin, descendant of the famed Lee family.

Mr. Lamkin's book, "Tiger in the Garden" is given announcement in this month's "Retail Bookseller," which classes it as "a mature story with lots of real interest. Good!" It will be placed on sale in Monroe at the Children's Bookshop starting February 7.

ties in whose jurisdiction litigation might occur.

Before the Divina was released, the Navy tugged from her prow the jagged 18-foot segment of the Truculent's hull which had been caught on the Swedish ship.

Experts examined it carefully, trying to determine how many of the submarine's compartments were damaged by the cutting impact of a keel designed to break up ice floes.

Apparently there was no legal obstacle to hinder the departure of the Divina on its interrupted journey to Ipswich with a cargo of petroleum. But no preparations were made to sail tonight. Instructions from the Swedish owners were awaited.

Out in the Thames channel, eight miles from the nearest shore, frogmen—expert swimmers with breathing apparatus—managed to wiggle into the compartment which had been ripped open.

They brought back reports giving no hope that any of the 54 missing men are alive.

No bodies lay in the compartment they penetrated, but the frogmen could not move much because orf tangled gear and they did not try to open bulkhead doors.

After the first session of a preliminary inquiry here, naval authorities believed they were arriving at a pretty clear picture of what happened.

Survivors said that at the time of the collision several of the crew were in the coning tower and on the bridge. The rest were dispersed through the vessel. About half the crew was in quarters flooded by the inrush of water.

Those who could, ran into the undamaged section. Bulkhead doors were sealed and preparations began immediately for escape from the engine room hatch.

There still was a great deal of uncertainty about the number who got clear, but it was certainly more than the 15 survivors. The tide was flowing toward the open sea at about three miles an hour.

One of the survivors John Stevenson, owed his life to a little red flashlight sewed to his clothing. He switched it on as he floated. It's tiny gleam brought help.

Salvage experts said that raising the Truculent will be a more difficult task than was at first supposed. It lies "across the tide," so the current strikes it broadside.

It was believed that four lifting craft, instead of the two on the scene, will be needed and that the operation may take some months.

U. S. CONSULATE

China and the staff there includes some junior embassy officers.

The British government, with this complete break in all semi-official contact between the United States and Red China, has agreed to look after American interests and property there.

The state department said arrangements for the actual withdrawal of American officials and their families will be made as quickly as possible.

"Any facilities for evacuation from China which are arranged for our official personnel will be made available for all American citizens who desire to depart," the state department announcement said.

It was not believed here, however, that many of the 3,000 businessmen, missionaries and other Americans still in China would need the implied device to get out.

Explaining the order for withdrawal of American diplomatic personnel, Assistant Secretary Butterworth told a news conference:

"No one can keep representatives in a foreign country if the foreign country doesn't wish them to be there."

The actual invasion and seizure of the premises of the American consulate general was effected by Chinese Communist police and four civilian officials, the State department said, at 9:50 a. m. today (China time) or 8:50 p. m. yesterday, Eastern Standard Time.

The American staff in Peiping has occupied four compounds, which are walled enclosures or residences and offices. The most important was the one in which the consulate offices operated. That was this one the Reds took over.

Americans in that compound moved without molestation into the adjoining compound which for the moment at least was not disturbed.

Some of the official records in the consulate offices have been destroyed, Butterworth said, and some have been removed. This was also true of the materials used in sending code messages to the government in Washington; some were destroyed, some were removed.

So far communications between Peiping and Washington have not been disrupted and officials are hopeful they will not be. They are also hopeful that they will encounter no extraordinary difficulties in arranging to get the State department people out of China. The arrangements may take a month or more to complete.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex) of the senate foreign relations committee had no comment on the development, but some other lawmakers spoke out at once.

Chairman Kee (D-W. Va.) of the house foreign affairs committee said "the only thing to do is simply break off all relations with the Communists and get our people out."

The Republicans had barbed comments a-plenty.

Senator Brewster (R-Maine) said the Communists have "slammed the open door of China in our faces." Senator Young (R-ND) called the seizure "a natural result of our weak-knee dpolicy in China." Senator Bridges (R-NH) said U. S. policy in Asia has been one of continual appeasement and retreat. The consulate seizure, he added, "should make it evident that under no conditions should we recognize the Chinese Communist government."

"This," declared Senator Knowland, "is always the result of paying international blackmail—appeasement is but surrender on the installment plan."

Senate Republican Leader Wherry of Nebraska saw the development as a "natural sequence of our abandonment of Nationalist China."

The State department said the actual Communist requisition order for the American government property at 22 Legation street in Peiping was issued on January 7, a day after the military authorities gave out their general proclamation.

"Following this action by the Chinese Communist authorities," the State department said, "the U. S. government took every posible step to insure that the highest Chinese Communist authorities were aware of the seriousnes with which we would view a nattempt to carry out this requisition order.

"We not only brought the matter to the attention of the highest Chinese Communist authorities but asked the good offices of the British government which instructed its officer in charge at Peiping also to bring the matter to the attention of the Chinese Communist officials and to state that the U. S. government would be compelled to withdraw all official American personnel and to close all its establishments if the Chinese Communist authorities persisted in this move."

As late as Thursday, the State department said, Consul General Clubb sent a note to the Communist Foreign Minister General Chou En Lai, protesting the intended seizure.

The note was subsequently returned to Clubb—a gesture meaning that it had not even been considered.

On Friday afternoon, Clubb was orally notified by the military control commission that the consulate property would be requisitioned at 9 a. m. Jan. 14. Clubb replied that such an action would be against American protests and he confirmed his oral statement in a formal letter later in the day.

The State department said the Communist action is part of the pattern of "mistreatment of Americans" which reached its peak in the long detention of Consul General Angus Ward and his staff at Mudken last year.

The special property rights which the United States and other foreign countries have held in Peiping date from a treaty made in 1901 following the anti-foreign Boxer rebellion. The Peiping rights were reaffirmed in a Chinese-United States treaty of 1943 in which the United States voluntarily gave up its general extraterritorial privileges in China.

U. S. ACTION CONSIDERED TO BE GRAND STRATEGY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The United States today acted directly in line with the new Far Eastern grand strategy, in State department opinion, when she ordered all her officials out of Communist China after a new affront by the Reds.

The move was interpreted as intended to shock Chinese leaders into a raelization of the degree to which they are isolating themselves from this country—and to make the Chinese people realize the extreme disapproval with which their highhanded leaders are regarded here. Many officials believe there is a reservoir of good will for this country among the Chinese people.

The Chinese Reds, precipitating the move by seizing U. S. government property in Peiping, have no doubt delayed still further the day when this country can even consider recognizing their regime.

State department officials are reported convinced that President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson have laid the basis for a new Far Eastern strategy which will first block, then reverse the Communist tide in Asia.

There are strong indications, however, that Acheson's real fight to make the new policy effective—both in Washington and in the Far East—has just begun.

With the president's backing he has clearly won the first round—his, reported conflict with Secretary Johnson over the kind of strategy the United States should declare for the Asiatic cold war front.

Johnson favored more vigorous action on Formosa, according to reports, than Acheson was ever willing to consider—though apparently neither man advocated sending American troops there.

But beyond the division inside the president's family, the split between the administration and the bitterly critical Republican bloc in the senate has shaken the foundation of such bi-partisan foreign policy as already existed—and has shut off any early prospect of extending the bi-partisan approach to the Far East.

Moreover differences between the State and Defense departments over what might be done in Asia—and especially Formosa—may now be turned against the administration by its Republican critics.

Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, at Republican insistence are being asked to testify before the senate foreign relations committee Jan. 26.

Although Johnson, as a top ranking official in Mr. Truman's cabinet, is expected to soft-pedal any evidence of differences between Acheson and him, administration officials expect the full story of military advice regarding the importance of Formosa to be developed.

The essence of this story, according to highly placed informants, is that on three occasions the joint chiefs advised the administration that Formosa was not worth saving from the Communists at the price of involving American troops, but that it was strategically important and probably ought to be saved by economic and political means if possible.

Recently also the military chiefs suggested sending a military mission to Formosa but reportedly did not press the point when it arose in a meeting of the security council over which Mr. Truman presided.

The split between Acheson and Johnson over Far Eastern policy gets close to the heart of the problems which Acheson now faces. He has outlined a policy and the administration is committed. But he has only begun to answer the next question: What specific steps will he take to carry the policy out?

Discussions in the secret councils of the administration brought out, according to authoritative information, that Johnson attacked the Far Eastern situation as one requiring prompt, pointed actions. He maneuvered to get the government to try to save Formosa, to avoid the hands-off policy that it now has proclaimed. He had plans to commit most or all of a $75,000,000 Far Eastern anti-Communist fund which congress voted Mr. Truman last fall.

Acheson took a different line. He argued as he has now said publicly, that the Communist problem in Asia cannot be solved primarily by military means but must be worked out in terms of the "revolutionary forces" sweeping that part of the world. These forces, he said, are driving toward true national independence and better living conditions.

Acheson therefore held out against American action to keep Formosa from the Chinese Communists, arguing such action would brand this country as a land-grabbing, imperialist power.

Since Russia is stealing huge areas of North China, he contended, Russia is really the new candidate for the anti-imperialist hatreds of the Asiatic peoples and Formosa was not worth the risk that the United States might direct these hatreds to itself.

Acheson has made one start on applying his policy by accusing Russia in extraordinarily blunt language of dismembering and swallowing up Manchuria, outer Mongolia, inner Mongolia and Sinkiang.

He also has urged congress to pass legislation under which the United States (1) could begin to give scientific and industrial help to the Asiatic peoples who want it, in order to raise their living standards, and (2) could also stimulate private investments in that area.

In some respects the Far Eastern policy has reached the stage where general European policy was three or four years ago.

American leaders then hoped that the people of western Europe with American economic help would block Communist expansion. With the advent of the Marshall Plan for European recovery, that hope was borne out and the European line against Soviet Communist power was finally made firm in the Atlantic pact.

But with far greater problems of economic need and political instability, the Asiatic peoples do not hold out the same prospects of reacting strongly against Communist appeals. Nor does American policy as Acheson has now outlined it provide them with any hope of the billions of dollars worth of goods which the United States was willing to promise the western Europeans.

Even among Acheson's associates there is considerable uncertainty as to how effective the American strategy will be, therefore, in actually blocking Communist expansion in Asia where some countries are concerned.

There appears to be, in fact, somewhat stronger hope that the chances of Titoism is China or of an eventual break by the Chinese people away from communism are the really vulnerable points in the Communist position in Asia. The example of what happened to the Russians in Yugoslavia obviously dominates much of the state department's thinking about what could happen to them in China.

nounce for the Democratic nomination, which is equivalent to election in South Carolina. The others are Thomas H. Pope, speaker of the state house of representatives, and Lester H. Bates, Columbia city councilman.

In recent speeches the 70-year-old Byrnes has spoken against centralization of power in Washington and big government. But he made clear that he was not just hitting at the Democratic administration. He said he meant Republicans too.

His new plunge into politics also comes after service as a U. S. supreme court justice and war mobilizer in World War II.

When he resigned as secretary of state in 1947, he gave health as the reason. Today he looks and acts fit.

He and Mrs. Byrnes have no children. They live in a modest brick home on the edge of Spartanburg.

Byrnes never went to high school, but has been awarded honorary degrees by many universities.

With royalties from his book "Speaking Frankly," which describes in part his trying to get along with Russia while secretary of state, Byrnes established a foundation to send orphans to college.

The fund amounts to more than $100,000.

But Byrnes is not a wealthy man. One combination houseman-chauffeur is the only servant in the household.

He has a summer home on the Isle of Palms near Charleston.

Byrnes is a shorthand expert. In the first decade of 1900 he was court reporter and then solicitor (prosecutor) of South Carolina second judicial circuit.

Sparkman Predicts Housing Program For Middle Income Group Will Pass

Bill Starts Journey Through Legislative Assembly Line; Alabama Says Regular Groups Who Fight Federal Housing Will Oppose

By Edwin B. Haakinson

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Senator Sparkman (D.-Ala.) today forecast congressional approval of the administration's new housing plan to aid families in the middle income brackets.

This program, now just starting through the legislative mill, would provide long term mortgage guarantees totaling up to $2,250,000,000 to cooperatives and other non-profit groups which woud undertake the actual home construction.

Sparkman asserted the "same groups that have opposed all of the government housing programs are fighting this one." But he said "I think when congress and the public gets all the facts the new program will become law."

He expressed this optimistic view to a reporter only a day after he had a sharp verbal tangle with a representative of the United States Savings and Loan League who termed the new housing plan "pure socialism, uneconomic and unrealistic."

This attack was made by Horace Russell, general counsel for the loan league.

Sparkman said today that the legislation would not cover more than 250,000 homes at the most out of a population group estimated at about 8,000,000 families. He contended that the government plan would leave plenty of work for private organizations.

That proposal, which was not acted on by the senate, called for a $1,000,000,000 fund to finance direct federal loans to housing cooperatives. It was sponsored by Sparkman.

Under the new program the government would advance $100,000,000 to set up a new federal agency. This agency would finance loans up to $2,250,000,000, backed by the government, through sale of dentures or its own obligations. Repayment of these loans could be for as long as 50 or 60 years at a low interest rate, or probably 2 1/2 to 3 per cent under present conditions.

MINERS DEFY

Pennsylvania also are scheduled for the week-end.

Last year a hectic one for the operators and a slim one for the miners. Sporadic strikes and curtailed work paralleled fruitless negotiating sessions between the U. M. W. chief and three blocs of operators.

When the old contract expired June 30, Lewis broke tradition by permitting the diggers to work without a new one.

Some 69,000 miners in Pennsylvania and West Virginia—the heart of the bituminous belt—quit the pits last Monday. They gave no official explanation but rumblings in the field indicated general dissatisfaction with progress toward a pact.

The man who would most keenly feel the rebellion today grieved over a more personal loss. Lewis was in Springfield, Ill., attending the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Anna Louisa Lewis.

Many of his lieutenants and district leaders were with him.

The diggers openly expressed their sentiments at the meetings today.

"Five days or nothing," one said. "We're tired of going in, then going out, then going in."

Another said the miners "are pretty damn sore about the delay" in forging a new contract. Asked at whom they are "sore," he replied:

"I won't say it's Lewis or the operators in particular. We just want to get the contract business settled for once and for all."

A union member said virtually all the mines in the coal-rich fields of Fayette and Greene counties in southwestern Pensylvania will be idle on Monday.

At the meeting the diggers drew up plans to establish picket lines throughout the region. They said independent strip mines will be closed by the pickets.

The level of the nation's stockpile has continued to fall. Everywhere reports are the same:

No hardship unless the temperature falls.

In many areas soft coal is being rationed to householders. Most dealers said their supplies are as much as 50 per cent below normal. A Baltimore dealer said:

"You simply can't untie this thing from the weather. It is the only thing that has prevented this situation from getting out of hand. If we had normally cold weather you wouldn't find a ton of coal in any Baltimore yord."

President Truman has refused to act claiming the situation does not constitute an emergency. On Monday N. L. R. B. General Counsel Robert N. Denham is scheduled to decide on an operators charge of unfair labor practices against Lewis and the union.

from lowlands around Cotton Plant early today. Several stores in De Valls Bluff were flooded yesterday when drainage pumps failed to carry off water from heavy rains.

Governor McMath has ordered the Arkansas National Guard on a standby basis to be ready to move into the stricken areas if conditions worsen.

Assistant Adjt. Gen. H. L. McAlister said the Guard transported 125 tents and stoves to points along the St. Francis and White rivers yesterday. Most of the supplies went to Wynne and Cotton Plant.

The swirling St. Francis has broken out of its course in at least three spots near Paragould in northeast Arkansas.

Yesterday, the river cut through a levee at Bertig and flowed over about 3,500 acres of farm land. About 30 houses are in the area. This morning a levee chain broke near Lake City, flooding hundreds of acres of bottom lands. Engineers also expect additional breaks.

RIPPING WINTER

history, with gusts up to 95 M. P. H. Gusts reached 85 to 90 M. P. H. in Niagra Falls and over 80 in Buffalo.

At the Geneseo Airport, 30 miles south of Rochester, six small airplanes were smashed in a heap. The roof was ripped from a machinery manufacturing company plant in Auburn. Damage from fallen trees and broken power lines was widespread in the state.

Frigid winds of 70 miles an hour tore at northern Illinois and gusts of 60 miles an hour smashed windows, knocked down trees and snapped power lines in Chicago.

Winds of 60 miles an hour were general throughout Ohio.

A low pressure area over southern Quebec caused the violent windstorms. This center acted as a giant vacuum, sucking air in from other regions.

Cold air poured into the midwest on the churning winds. Overnight drops in temperature were as much as 43 degrees. The mercury plummeted from 62 to 19 at South Bend, Ind., from 65 to 29 in Indianapolis and from 48 to 16 in Chicago.

Blizzard conditions were forecast for Montana, Wyoming and the Dakotas as the Pacific storm wheeled eastward.

A man was killed in Cleveland when he became entangled with a high tension wire blown down by the winds. Another man was killed near Lowville, N. Y., when he was slammed against a truck by a gust of wind. A gust of wind blew a Union Pacific Railroad switchman beneath the wheels of a train at Tooele, Utah.

Five persons perished in a head on bus crash in a blinding snowstorm near Gaylord, Mich., and five others were killed in a train-truck crash in a heavy rain storm at Terre Haute, Ind.

A man and his three children drowned apparently when their boat overturned in the backwaters of the flooded Wabash river near Oaktown, Ind.

Storms caused three deaths in Canada. In British Columbia, an 86 year old woman died from hunger and exposure and an infant died at birth after its mother was carried through a blizzard to a hospital. A man was crushed to death by a 400 pound stone blown from the 11th story of a building in Montreal, where gusts reached 69 miles an hour.

Flood swollen rivers in the midwest brought new damage. Thirteen families were evacuated at Nashville, Tenn., on the Cumberland river. The Red Cross removed 50 families from the Indiana "pocket" area between the converging Ohio and Wabash rivers.

Water was chest deep in the Main street of Rosiclare, Ill., on the Ohio river. Some 250 persons have been evacuated and 40 business houses have been abandoned. Local telephone service was shut off "for the duration." The town of nearly 2,000 has no flood wall and a further rise of two feet of water is expected.

The mercury dipped below freezing again in scattered sections of the California citrus belt and colder weather was forecast.

COMMONWEALTH'S

action. The Australian delegation called it a "new concept of Commonwealth" relations, but not all delegates shared this enthusiasm.

A second agreement was the endorsement "in principle" of a Commonwealth loan to strengthen independent Burma's internal finances. Although this never was announced officially, delegates said all but Canada and South Africa would recommend to their governments that blocked sterling be made available to Burma in the form of a loan. Britain is expected to contribute about half of the loan of £7,500,000 ($21,000,000).

This is what the conference did on other items of the agenda:

Indo-china—Except for India, the conference nations agreed that the French-sponsored government of former Emperor Bao Dai should be recognized after the agreement giving his regime self-governing powers has been ratified by the French parliament and signed. Prime Minister Jawalharal Nehru of India disagreed with the contention of Malcolm MacDonald, British commisioner general for southeast Asia, that Bao Dai could establish a sound government. Nehru was reported to have said that Bao Dai lacked the support of a majority of the people and to have criticized French colonial policy generally.

Japanese Peace Treaty—All agreed on the need for an early peace treaty, but took note of the difficulties involved in view of Russian insistence that only the Soviet Union, China (the Communist regime), Britain and the United States draft the pact. There was a tendency of the others to discount Australian and New Zealand concern over a possible resurgence of Japanese militarism.

China—Those delegates who contended the diplomatic recognition of China must be accompanied by genuine friendliness toward the Peiping Red regime appeared to have got their viewpoint across to the conference. This attitude may also have its effect on the long term.

Europe—British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Canadian External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson appeared to have made an impression with their exposition of why Britain is preoccupied with Europe, and that the rehabilitation and integration of Europe is a matter of first international importance. Australia and New Zealand, wose concern is with the dangers in the east, were reported to have agreed that Britain's attitude is necessary, though perhaps a little overdone.

Many delegates underlined the value of the exchange of views over the conference table. As a result, they said, views are matured and a sense of international responsibility of some delegates is widened.

"These discussions inrtdouce the human element," said one delegate, "focusing in one place the normal exchange that is going on among the governments all the time. A valuable result is the ability to take away from the conference impressions of what other governments are thinking about matters affecting all Commonwealth nations."

The conference did not grapple with some urgent questions dividing some of the members, such as Kashmir, the trade stalemate between India and Pakistan, Indian relations with South Africa, and British irritation at India and Pakistan for supporting the United Nations resolution for a check-up on social conditions in colonies.

However, there was considerable activity behind the scenes on some of these issues. Bevin and Pearson were reported to have urged India and Pakistan to expedite a solution on Kashmir, the princely state which both want. There also was pressure on the same countries to solve the breakdown in trade which resulted from Pakistan's decision not to devalue her currency in step with India and Britain.

The talks also produced a general picture of the sterling area's shortage of dollars and the need of competing in the North American market. Economists of the conference made no recommendations.

LEGAL QUESTION

women and four men to decide what weight—if any—should be given the psychiatric testimony.

Cross-examination of the two by th government prosecutor—Asisstant U. S. Attorney Thomas F. Murphy—resulted in the head-on collision of two schools of thought: the psychiatric and the legal.

Psychiatric thinking is inclusive, reaching a conclusion on the basis of all available facts. The legal mind is trained to strip fasts down to essentials and employing those essentials to reach a conclusion.

On Murphy's broad shoulders fell the difficult job of trying to discredit the witness' testimony both in terms of psychiatry and in terms understandable to the jurors.

It led to some sharp fencing between him and Dr. Binger.

Dr. Binger told Defense Counsel Claude B. Cross that Chambers' habit of staring at the ceiling was odd. Then Murphy said Dr. Binger himself looked at the ceiling 59 times in 50 minutes and asked the psychiatrist:

"Now I was wondering if that was any symptom of a psychiatric personality?"

Dr. Binger smiled coldly and replied, "not alone."

The psychiatrist said that Chambers' constant use of various names was a psychopathic symptom. Murphy then brought out that the witness was listed variously as "Dr. Carl Binger," "Dr. Carl A. L. Binger," and "Dr. Carl Alfred Lanning Binger."

The bulky prosecutor pursued much the same tactics in his cros-examination of the Harvard psychologist. Point by point he tried to discredit the mental expert's description of Chambers as a psychopathic and a chronic liar.

Obviously alluding to some of Murray's own mannerisms on the witness stand, Murphy asked:

"Would it be of any significance to you, if you noticed that a subject's mouth twitched, that his eyes opened and closed, that he had excessive hand gestures, that he played with his watch chain and his glasses and his nose, that he turned his head contsantly and that he breahed heavily through his nose—would that have any significance to you?"

"No sir," responded Murray. Then he added that the intensity of such gestures would be of some importance "when considered with the personality of the individual as a whole."

Generally, the witness said under questioning, a psychopathic personality cannot be cured by any means known to science.

One-Third Of Spain's Army To Be Demobilized

MADRID, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Reliable sources said today Generalissimo Francisco Franco will demobilize one-third of Spain's army on Feb. 1. Economy was given as the reason for the reduction.

War ministry informants said the army would be reorganized to incorporate "new tactical methods" learned from World War II.

These informants said there would also be a number of high command changes including the transfer of Lt. Gen. Jose Enrique Varela Iglesias from his post as high commissioner in Spanish Morocco to Madrid. He is politically the most important army general, next to Franco.

Spain at present has an army of about 300,000 troops of which nearly 100,000 are in Spanish Morocco.

Under a record breaking high budget of 18,040,872,075 pesetas ($1,640,000,000) recently approved by the Cortes (parliament) 35 per cent of revenues are earmarked for military expenditures.

A third brother escaped the cavein. Kasmir Burda, 32, was caught in the rush of earth, but managed to leap free, jumping clear out of his boots.

Despite an injured leg and a severe case of shock, Kasmir pitched into the rescue work for a time. Later he went home under a doctor's care.

Two other brothers, Frank and John, also helped the rescue workers claw through the rain-sogged earth in an attempt to reach the trapped men.

The area surrounding the mine cavein was so muddy it was difficult to drive an automobile into the area.

The ground was softened by recent heavy rains. Clearing skies today did little but help buoy the spirits of the rescue workers.

They toiled in teams of three, slanting in along mounds of earth to the heart of the caved in area.

Morgan said one of the major problems is supplying the trapped men with oxygen so that they can breathe. In the pit where they were entombed, there was no air supply.

Steam shovels were put to use pushing a two-inch pipe straight down into the caved in slope to pump air through it to the area beyond the cavein.

Age sometimes is an asset, when it is not too great, then it may be a handicap. This has proved true in West Monroe, where the denizens have been quite eager to name Tom E. Hicks as "Man of the Year" in the Jaycee contest. His chief proponents were Civic League Ladies but they ran up into a formidable snag. He has gone far forward past the 35-year age limit so is counted out of the contest. But the league members still feel that his record is quite notable. He is a member of the Ouachita parish police jury; president of the Tensas basin levee board; member of Ouachita Safety Council; member of the Kiwanis Club; president of West Monroe Gravity Drainage district; Fifth district committeeman for the Police Jury Association of Louisiana; chairman of the Ouachita parish Red Cross disaster committee and president of the Ouachita Valley Fair.

TOM THUMB BECOMES BENEDICT

Shown above the midget wedding that was staged by grades first and second of the A. L. Smith, Sterlington school.

Herb Bailey, daddy of an only daughter now less than a month old, is making fatherly provision for her future. He has her well insured so that when she is of college age she will be properly financed. And to make a good thing even better, he deposits a nice little sum each month in the bank to her credit. This, he says, will be financing if she wants to spend a year or so in Europe when she has completed her college course. This plan surely is a good one and many fathers would do well to follow a similar course now when money is so easily available.

Right in the middle of the street, in front of the residence of Sheriff Bailey Grant, 207 South Second street, West Monroe, there lay one morning last week a huge possum flattened out by some passing auto. It was viewed by many persons before it was removed. This neighborhood is quite a select one for closeby are the following neighbor's of the high sheriff. At 202 South Second resides State Senator John F. McCormick and Robert (Bob) Kilgore, city court marshal, lives at 206 South Second street. If anything further is needed for good measure, Ralph Scoop White, vice-president of the Louisiana State Federation of Labor and also Louisiana League Reporter publisher, lives at 210 Ludwig avenue, only a stone's throw distant.

Monroe is delighted to possess a budding young novelist in her midst, Hillyer Speed Lamkin, descendant of the famed Lee family.

Mr. Lamkin's book, "Tiger in the Garden" is given announcement in this month's "Retail Bookseller," which classes it as "a mature story with lots of real interest. Good!" It will be placed on sale in Monroe at the Children's Bookshop starting February 7.

ONLY DEAD

ties in whose jurisdiction litigation might occur.

Before the Divina was released, the Navy tugged from her prow the jagged 18-foot segment of the Truculent's hull which had been caught on the Swedish ship.

Experts examined it carefully, trying to determine how many of the submarine's compartments were damaged by the cutting impact of a keel designed to break up ice floes.

Apparently there was no legal obstacle to hinder the departure of the Divina on its interrupted journey to Ipswich with a cargo of petroleum. But no preparations were made to sail tonight. Instructions from the Swedish owners were awaited.

Out in the Thames channel, eight miles from the nearest shore, frogmen—expert swimmers with breathing apparatus—managed to wiggle into the compartment which had been ripped open.

They brought back reports giving no hope that any of the 54 missing men are alive.

No bodies lay in the compartment they penetrated, but the frogmen could not move much because orf tangled gear and they did not try to open bulkhead doors.

After the first session of a preliminary inquiry here, naval authorities believed they were arriving at a pretty clear picture of what happened.

Survivors said that at the time of the collision several of the crew were in the coning tower and on the bridge. The rest were dispersed through the vessel. About half the crew was in quarters flooded by the inrush of water.

Those who could, ran into the undamaged section. Bulkhead doors were sealed and preparations began immediately for escape from the engine room hatch.

There still was a great deal of uncertainty about the number who got clear, but it was certainly more than the 15 survivors. The tide was flowing toward the open sea at about three miles an hour.

One of the survivors John Stevenson, owed his life to a little red flashlight sewed to his clothing. He switched it on as he floated. It's tiny gleam brought help.

Salvage experts said that raising the Truculent will be a more difficult task than was at first supposed. It lies "across the tide," so the current strikes it broadside.

It was believed that four lifting craft, instead of the two on the scene, will be needed and that the operation may take some months.

U. S. CONSULATE

China and the staff there includes some junior embassy officers.

The British government, with this complete break in all semi-official contact between the United States and Red China, has agreed to look after American interests and property there.

The state department said arrangements for the actual withdrawal of American officials and their families will be made as quickly as possible.

"Any facilities for evacuation from China which are arranged for our official personnel will be made available for all American citizens who desire to depart," the state department announcement said.

It was not believed here, however, that many of the 3,000 businessmen, missionaries and other Americans still in China would need the implied device to get out.

Explaining the order for withdrawal of American diplomatic personnel, Assistant Secretary Butterworth told a news conference:

"No one can keep representatives in a foreign country if the foreign country doesn't wish them to be there."

The actual invasion and seizure of the premises of the American consulate general was effected by Chinese Communist police and four civilian officials, the State department said, at 9:50 a. m. today (China time) or 8:50 p. m. yesterday, Eastern Standard Time.

The American staff in Peiping has occupied four compounds, which are walled enclosures or residences and offices. The most important was the one in which the consulate offices operated. That was this one the Reds took over.

Americans in that compound moved without molestation into the adjoining compound which for the moment at least was not disturbed.

Some of the official records in the consulate offices have been destroyed, Butterworth said, and some have been removed. This was also true of the materials used in sending code messages to the government in Washington; some were destroyed, some were removed.

So far communications between Peiping and Washington have not been disrupted and officials are hopeful they will not be. They are also hopeful that they will encounter no extraordinary difficulties in arranging to get the State department people out of China. The arrangements may take a month or more to complete.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex) of the senate foreign relations committee had no comment on the development, but some other lawmakers spoke out at once.

Chairman Kee (D-W. Va.) of the house foreign affairs committee said "the only thing to do is simply break off all relations with the Communists and get our people out."

The Republicans had barbed comments a-plenty.

Senator Brewster (R-Maine) said the Communists have "slammed the open door of China in our faces." Senator Young (R-ND) called the seizure "a natural result of our weak-knee dpolicy in China." Senator Bridges (R-NH) said U. S. policy in Asia has been one of continual appeasement and retreat. The consulate seizure, he added, "should make it evident that under no conditions should we recognize the Chinese Communist government."

"This," declared Senator Knowland, "is always the result of paying international blackmail—appeasement is but surrender on the installment plan."

Senate Republican Leader Wherry of Nebraska saw the development as a "natural sequence of our abandonment of Nationalist China."

The State department said the actual Communist requisition order for the American government property at 22 Legation street in Peiping was issued on January 7, a day after the military authorities gave out their general proclamation.

"Following this action by the Chinese Communist authorities," the State department said, "the U. S. government took every posible step to insure that the highest Chinese Communist authorities were aware of the seriousnes with which we would view a nattempt to carry out this requisition order.

"We not only brought the matter to the attention of the highest Chinese Communist authorities but asked the good offices of the British government which instructed its officer in charge at Peiping also to bring the matter to the attention of the Chinese Communist officials and to state that the U. S. government would be compelled to withdraw all official American personnel and to close all its establishments if the Chinese Communist authorities persisted in this move."

As late as Thursday, the State department said, Consul General Clubb sent a note to the Communist Foreign Minister General Chou En Lai, protesting the intended seizure.

The note was subsequently returned to Clubb—a gesture meaning that it had not even been considered.

On Friday afternoon, Clubb was orally notified by the military control commission that the consulate property would be requisitioned at 9 a. m. Jan. 14. Clubb replied that such an action would be against American protests and he confirmed his oral statement in a formal letter later in the day.

The State department said the Communist action is part of the pattern of "mistreatment of Americans" which reached its peak in the long detention of Consul General Angus Ward and his staff at Mudken last year.

The special property rights which the United States and other foreign countries have held in Peiping date from a treaty made in 1901 following the anti-foreign Boxer rebellion. The Peiping rights were reaffirmed in a Chinese-United States treaty of 1943 in which the United States voluntarily gave up its general extraterritorial privileges in China.

U. S. ACTION CONSIDERED TO BE GRAND STRATEGY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The United States today acted directly in line with the new Far Eastern grand strategy, in State department opinion, when she ordered all her officials out of Communist China after a new affront by the Reds.

The move was interpreted as intended to shock Chinese leaders into a raelization of the degree to which they are isolating themselves from this country—and to make the Chinese people realize the extreme disapproval with which their highhanded leaders are regarded here. Many officials believe there is a reservoir of good will for this country among the Chinese people.

The Chinese Reds, precipitating the move by seizing U. S. government property in Peiping, have no doubt delayed still further the day when this country can even consider recognizing their regime.

State department officials are reported convinced that President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson have laid the basis for a new Far Eastern strategy which will first block, then reverse the Communist tide in Asia.

There are strong indications, however, that Acheson's real fight to make the new policy effective—both in Washington and in the Far East—has just begun.

With the president's backing he has clearly won the first round—his, reported conflict with Secretary Johnson over the kind of strategy the United States should declare for the Asiatic cold war front.

Johnson favored more vigorous action on Formosa, according to reports, than Acheson was ever willing to consider—though apparently neither man advocated sending American troops there.

But beyond the division inside the president's family, the split between the administration and the bitterly critical Republican bloc in the senate has shaken the foundation of such bi-partisan foreign policy as already existed—and has shut off any early prospect of extending the bi-partisan approach to the Far East.

Moreover differences between the State and Defense departments over what might be done in Asia—and especially Formosa—may now be turned against the administration by its Republican critics.

Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, at Republican insistence are being asked to testify before the senate foreign relations committee Jan. 26.

Although Johnson, as a top ranking official in Mr. Truman's cabinet, is expected to soft-pedal any evidence of differences between Acheson and him, administration officials expect the full story of military advice regarding the importance of Formosa to be developed.

The essence of this story, according to highly placed informants, is that on three occasions the joint chiefs advised the administration that Formosa was not worth saving from the Communists at the price of involving American troops, but that it was strategically important and probably ought to be saved by economic and political means if possible.

Recently also the military chiefs suggested sending a military mission to Formosa but reportedly did not press the point when it arose in a meeting of the security council over which Mr. Truman presided.

The split between Acheson and Johnson over Far Eastern policy gets close to the heart of the problems which Acheson now faces. He has outlined a policy and the administration is committed. But he has only begun to answer the next question: What specific steps will he take to carry the policy out?

Discussions in the secret councils of the administration brought out, according to authoritative information, that Johnson attacked the Far Eastern situation as one requiring prompt, pointed actions. He maneuvered to get the government to try to save Formosa, to avoid the hands-off policy that it now has proclaimed. He had plans to commit most or all of a $75,000,000 Far Eastern anti-Communist fund which congress voted Mr. Truman last fall.

Acheson took a different line. He argued as he has now said publicly, that the Communist problem in Asia cannot be solved primarily by military means but must be worked out in terms of the "revolutionary forces" sweeping that part of the world. These forces, he said, are driving toward true national independence and better living conditions.

Acheson therefore held out against American action to keep Formosa from the Chinese Communists, arguing such action would brand this country as a land-grabbing, imperialist power.

Since Russia is stealing huge areas of North China, he contended, Russia is really the new candidate for the anti-imperialist hatreds of the Asiatic peoples and Formosa was not worth the risk that the United States might direct these hatreds to itself.

Acheson has made one start on applying his policy by accusing Russia in extraordinarily blunt language of dismembering and swallowing up Manchuria, outer Mongolia, inner Mongolia and Sinkiang.

He also has urged congress to pass legislation under which the United States (1) could begin to give scientific and industrial help to the Asiatic peoples who want it, in order to raise their living standards, and (2) could also stimulate private investments in that area.

In some respects the Far Eastern policy has reached the stage where general European policy was three or four years ago.

American leaders then hoped that the people of western Europe with American economic help would block Communist expansion. With the advent of the Marshall Plan for European recovery, that hope was borne out and the European line against Soviet Communist power was finally made firm in the Atlantic pact.

But with far greater problems of economic need and political instability, the Asiatic peoples do not hold out the same prospects of reacting strongly against Communist appeals. Nor does American policy as Acheson has now outlined it provide them with any hope of the billions of dollars worth of goods which the United States was willing to promise the western Europeans.

Even among Acheson's associates there is considerable uncertainty as to how effective the American strategy will be, therefore, in actually blocking Communist expansion in Asia where some countries are concerned.

There appears to be, in fact, somewhat stronger hope that the chances of Titoism is China or of an eventual break by the Chinese people away from communism are the really vulnerable points in the Communist position in Asia. The example of what happened to the Russians in Yugoslavia obviously dominates much of the state department's thinking about what could happen to them in China.

nounce for the Democratic nomination, which is equivalent to election in South Carolina. The others are Thomas H. Pope, speaker of the state house of representatives, and Lester H. Bates, Columbia city councilman.

In recent speeches the 70-year-old Byrnes has spoken against centralization of power in Washington and big government. But he made clear that he was not just hitting at the Democratic administration. He said he meant Republicans too.

His new plunge into politics also comes after service as a U. S. supreme court justice and war mobilizer in World War II.

When he resigned as secretary of state in 1947, he gave health as the reason. Today he looks and acts fit.

He and Mrs. Byrnes have no children. They live in a modest brick home on the edge of Spartanburg.

Byrnes never went to high school, but has been awarded honorary degrees by many universities.

With royalties from his book "Speaking Frankly," which describes in part his trying to get along with Russia while secretary of state, Byrnes established a foundation to send orphans to college.

The fund amounts to more than $100,000.

But Byrnes is not a wealthy man. One combination houseman-chauffeur is the only servant in the household.

He has a summer home on the Isle of Palms near Charleston.

Byrnes is a shorthand expert. In the first decade of 1900 he was court reporter and then solicitor (prosecutor) of South Carolina second judicial circuit.

Sparkman Predicts Housing Program For Middle Income Group Will Pass

Bill Starts Journey Through Legislative Assembly Line; Alabama Says Regular Groups Who Fight Federal Housing Will Oppose

By Edwin B. Haakinson

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Senator Sparkman (D.-Ala.) today forecast congressional approval of the administration's new housing plan to aid families in the middle income brackets.

This program, now just starting through the legislative mill, would provide long term mortgage guarantees totaling up to $2,250,000,000 to cooperatives and other non-profit groups which woud undertake the actual home construction.

Sparkman asserted the "same groups that have opposed all of the government housing programs are fighting this one." But he said "I think when congress and the public gets all the facts the new program will become law."

He expressed this optimistic view to a reporter only a day after he had a sharp verbal tangle with a representative of the United States Savings and Loan League who termed the new housing plan "pure socialism, uneconomic and unrealistic."

This attack was made by Horace Russell, general counsel for the loan league.

Sparkman said today that the legislation would not cover more than 250,000 homes at the most out of a population group estimated at about 8,000,000 families. He contended that the government plan would leave plenty of work for private organizations.

That proposal, which was not acted on by the senate, called for a $1,000,000,000 fund to finance direct federal loans to housing cooperatives. It was sponsored by Sparkman.

Under the new program the government would advance $100,000,000 to set up a new federal agency. This agency would finance loans up to $2,250,000,000, backed by the government, through sale of dentures or its own obligations. Repayment of these loans could be for as long as 50 or 60 years at a low interest rate, or probably 2 1/2 to 3 per cent under present conditions.

MINERS DEFY

Pennsylvania also are scheduled for the week-end.

Last year a hectic one for the operators and a slim one for the miners. Sporadic strikes and curtailed work paralleled fruitless negotiating sessions between the U. M. W. chief and three blocs of operators.

When the old contract expired June 30, Lewis broke tradition by permitting the diggers to work without a new one.

Some 69,000 miners in Pennsylvania and West Virginia—the heart of the bituminous belt—quit the pits last Monday. They gave no official explanation but rumblings in the field indicated general dissatisfaction with progress toward a pact.

The man who would most keenly feel the rebellion today grieved over a more personal loss. Lewis was in Springfield, Ill., attending the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Anna Louisa Lewis.

Many of his lieutenants and district leaders were with him.

The diggers openly expressed their sentiments at the meetings today.

"Five days or nothing," one said. "We're tired of going in, then going out, then going in."

Another said the miners "are pretty damn sore about the delay" in forging a new contract. Asked at whom they are "sore," he replied:

"I won't say it's Lewis or the operators in particular. We just want to get the contract business settled for once and for all."

A union member said virtually all the mines in the coal-rich fields of Fayette and Greene counties in southwestern Pensylvania will be idle on Monday.

At the meeting the diggers drew up plans to establish picket lines throughout the region. They said independent strip mines will be closed by the pickets.

The level of the nation's stockpile has continued to fall. Everywhere reports are the same:

No hardship unless the temperature falls.

In many areas soft coal is being rationed to householders. Most dealers said their supplies are as much as 50 per cent below normal. A Baltimore dealer said:

"You simply can't untie this thing from the weather. It is the only thing that has prevented this situation from getting out of hand. If we had normally cold weather you wouldn't find a ton of coal in any Baltimore yord."

President Truman has refused to act claiming the situation does not constitute an emergency. On Monday N. L. R. B. General Counsel Robert N. Denham is scheduled to decide on an operators charge of unfair labor practices against Lewis and the union.

from lowlands around Cotton Plant early today. Several stores in De Valls Bluff were flooded yesterday when drainage pumps failed to carry off water from heavy rains.

Governor McMath has ordered the Arkansas National Guard on a standby basis to be ready to move into the stricken areas if conditions worsen.

Assistant Adjt. Gen. H. L. McAlister said the Guard transported 125 tents and stoves to points along the St. Francis and White rivers yesterday. Most of the supplies went to Wynne and Cotton Plant.

The swirling St. Francis has broken out of its course in at least three spots near Paragould in northeast Arkansas.

Yesterday, the river cut through a levee at Bertig and flowed over about 3,500 acres of farm land. About 30 houses are in the area. This morning a levee chain broke near Lake City, flooding hundreds of acres of bottom lands. Engineers also expect additional breaks.

RIPPING WINTER

history, with gusts up to 95 M. P. H. Gusts reached 85 to 90 M. P. H. in Niagra Falls and over 80 in Buffalo.

At the Geneseo Airport, 30 miles south of Rochester, six small airplanes were smashed in a heap. The roof was ripped from a machinery manufacturing company plant in Auburn. Damage from fallen trees and broken power lines was widespread in the state.

Frigid winds of 70 miles an hour tore at northern Illinois and gusts of 60 miles an hour smashed windows, knocked down trees and snapped power lines in Chicago.

Winds of 60 miles an hour were general throughout Ohio.

A low pressure area over southern Quebec caused the violent windstorms. This center acted as a giant vacuum, sucking air in from other regions.

Cold air poured into the midwest on the churning winds. Overnight drops in temperature were as much as 43 degrees. The mercury plummeted from 62 to 19 at South Bend, Ind., from 65 to 29 in Indianapolis and from 48 to 16 in Chicago.

Blizzard conditions were forecast for Montana, Wyoming and the Dakotas as the Pacific storm wheeled eastward.

A man was killed in Cleveland when he became entangled with a high tension wire blown down by the winds. Another man was killed near Lowville, N. Y., when he was slammed against a truck by a gust of wind. A gust of wind blew a Union Pacific Railroad switchman beneath the wheels of a train at Tooele, Utah.

Five persons perished in a head on bus crash in a blinding snowstorm near Gaylord, Mich., and five others were killed in a train-truck crash in a heavy rain storm at Terre Haute, Ind.

A man and his three children drowned apparently when their boat overturned in the backwaters of the flooded Wabash river near Oaktown, Ind.

Storms caused three deaths in Canada. In British Columbia, an 86 year old woman died from hunger and exposure and an infant died at birth after its mother was carried through a blizzard to a hospital. A man was crushed to death by a 400 pound stone blown from the 11th story of a building in Montreal, where gusts reached 69 miles an hour.

Flood swollen rivers in the midwest brought new damage. Thirteen families were evacuated at Nashville, Tenn., on the Cumberland river. The Red Cross removed 50 families from the Indiana "pocket" area between the converging Ohio and Wabash rivers.

Water was chest deep in the Main street of Rosiclare, Ill., on the Ohio river. Some 250 persons have been evacuated and 40 business houses have been abandoned. Local telephone service was shut off "for the duration." The town of nearly 2,000 has no flood wall and a further rise of two feet of water is expected.

The mercury dipped below freezing again in scattered sections of the California citrus belt and colder weather was forecast.

action. The Australian delegation called it a "new concept of Commonwealth" relations, but not all delegates shared this enthusiasm.

A second agreement was the endorsement "in principle" of a Commonwealth loan to strengthen independent Burma's internal finances. Although this never was announced officially, delegates said all but Canada and South Africa would recommend to their governments that blocked sterling be made available to Burma in the form of a loan. Britain is expected to contribute about half of the loan of £7,500,000 ($21,000,000).

This is what the conference did on other items of the agenda:

Indo-china—Except for India, the conference nations agreed that the French-sponsored government of former Emperor Bao Dai should be recognized after the agreement giving his regime self-governing powers has been ratified by the French parliament and signed. Prime Minister Jawalharal Nehru of India disagreed with the contention of Malcolm MacDonald, British commisisoner general for southeast Asia, that Bao Dai could establish a sound government. Nehru was reported to have said that Bao Dai lacked the support of a majority of the people and to have criticized French colonial policy generally.

Japanese Peace Treaty—All agreed on the need for an early peace treaty, but took note of the difficulties involved in view of Russian insistence that only the Soviet Union, China (the Communist regime), Britain and the United States draft the pact. There was a tendency of the others to discount Australian and New Zealand concern over a possible resurgence of Japanese militarism.

China—Those delegates who contended the diplomatic recognition of China must be accompanied by genuine friendliness toward the Peiping Red regime appeared to have got their viewpoint across to the conference. This attitude may also have its effect on the long term.

Europe—British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Canadian External Affairs Minister Lester B. Pearson appeared to have made an impression with their exposition of why Britain is preoccupied with Europe, and that the rehabilitation and integration of Europe is a matter of first international importance. Australia and New Zealand, wose concern is with the dangers in the east, were reported to have agreed that Britain's attitude is necessary, though perhaps a little overdone.

Many delegates underlined the value of the exchange of views over the conference table. As a result, they said, views are matured and a sense of international responsibility of some delegates is widened.

"These discussions inrtdouce the human element," said one delegate, "focusing in one place the normal exchange that is going on among the governments all the time. A valuable result is the ability to take away from the conference impressions of what other governments are thinking about matters affecting all Commonwealth nations."

The conference did not grapple with some urgent questions dividing some of the members, such as Kashmir, the trade stalemate between India and Pakistan, Indian relations with South Africa, and British irritation at India and Pakistan for supporting the United Nations resolution for a check-up on social conditions in colonies.

However, there was considerable activity behind the scenes on some of these issues. Bevin and Pearson were reported to have urged India and Pakistan to expedite a solution on Kashmir, the princely state which both want. There also was pressure on the same countries to solve the breakdown in trade which resulted from Pakistan's decision not to devalue her currency in step with India and Britain.

The talks also produced a general picture of the sterling area's shortage of dollars and the need of competing in the North American market. Economists of the conference made no recommendations.

LEGAL QUESTION

women and four men to decide what weight—if any—should be given the psychiatric testimony.

Cross-examination of the two by th government prosecutor—Asisstant U. S. Attorney Thomas F. Murphy—resulted in the head-on collision of two schools of thought: the psychiatric and the legal.

Psychiatric thinking is inclusive, reaching a conclusion on the basis of all available facts. The legal mind is trained to strip fasts down to essentials and employing those essentials to reach a conclusion.

On Murphy's broad shoulders fell the difficult job of trying to discredit the witness' testimony both in terms of psychiatry and in terms understandable to the jurors.

It led to some sharp fencing between him and Dr. Binger.

Dr. Binger told Defense Counsel Claude B. Cross that Chambers' habit of staring at the ceiling was odd. Then Murphy said Dr. Binger himself looked at the ceiling 59 times in 50 minutes and asked the psychiatrist:

"Now I was wondering if that was any symptom of a psychiatric personality?"

Dr. Binger smiled coldly and replied, "not alone."

The psychiatrist said that Chambers' constant use of various names was a psychopathic symptom. Murphy then brought out that the witness was listed variously as "Dr. Carl Binger," "Dr. Carl A. L. Binger," and "Dr. Carl Alfred Lanning Binger."

The bulky prosecutor pursued much the same tactics in his cros-examination of the Harvard psychologist. Point by point he tried to discredit the mental expert's description of Chambers as a psychopathic and a chronic liar.

Obviously alluding to some of Murray's own mannerisms on the witness stand, Murphy asked:

"Would it be of any significance to you, if you noticed that a subject's mouth twitched, that his eyes opened and closed, that he had excessive hand gestures, that he played with his watch chain and his glasses and his nose, that he turned his head contsantly and that he breahed heavily through his nose—would that have any significance to you?"

"No sir," responded Murray. Then he added that the intensity of such gestures would be of some importance "when considered with the personality of the individual as a whole."

Generally, the witness said under questioning, a psychopathic personality cannot be cured by any means known to science.

LION BOYS BOW TO EROS IN TOURNEY FINALS

GIRLS OF BASKIN DROP BASTROP IN FINAL CAGE TILT

Two Lions, Boatright and Bates, Receive All Tournament Honors After Finals

By Oland Silk
(World Sports Reporter)

The long and well-managed invitational tournament sponsored by the Ouachita Parish High School ended last night with hundreds of spectators, partisans of the local boy Lions of Coach Herbert Holloman, leaving the stands after having stood on their collective ear and seeing the locals bow desperately to a bitter rival, Eros, 35 to 23 in the finals of the three-day meet.

In the girls' division of the finals, the tall and poised Ragsdale of Baskin High School led her team to an easy victory over the Bastrop girls, 67 to 24, to take first place honors in the tournament that saw hundreds of persons witness local and out-of-town teams eliminate one another beginning last Thursday.

The two boys' teams, which had eliminated one foe after another in the grueling ladder of games, won places in the finals and gave a spirited show from 9:20 p.m. until the final whistle.

Eros, the Jackson parish court giant, failed to cringe before the Lions den, and at half-time led 15 to 7. They came back in the second half to continue their slight edge in the end coming out with victory smiles all round.

The teams laid by the way side by Eros were Lake Providence, 37 to 20, Okaloosa, 29 to 22, Columbia 32 to 21. One, Okaloosa got in on a consolation game with Calhoun and defeated them 42 to 39.

The Ouachita Lions made their appearance in the final round by defeating Calhoun 41 to 24, Forest 32 to 27, and Collinston 52 to 17. Calhoun took on Okaloosa in the consolation arrangement, and was defeated 42 to

Southeastern Wins 4th Conference Tilt

HAMMOND, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Southeastern Louisiana won its fourth Gulf States Conference basketball game here tonight, over Louisiana Tech, 75-52.

Determined Southeastern, led by Center Harold Owens, took an early lead and was never headed. The lanky 6-foot-6-inch captain scored 23 points to take high-point honors.

Robert Bertrand of Tech dropped in 14 points to lead his team.

Halftime score was 36-24, in favor of Southeastern.

Tech pulled up to within seven points midway in the last period, but Southeastern ran away in the closing minutes.

Baby Bengals Will Engage North Texas In Fights Wednesday Night

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 14. (Special)—Coach J. T. Owen's National Championship boxing team will take on a new role Wednesday night when they will be spectators for the Tiger Frosh-North Texas State College fistic battle. The Baby Bengals wil meet the highly touted Texans in the Agricultural Coliseum with the opening bell scheduled to ring at 6:45 p.m.

The ring battle between the two schools may well cause the hair of the youthful Tiger mentor to turn grey, as the North Texas pugilists are well-stocked in both ability and experience, in Golden Glove tourneys, and most of which are title-holders. Heading the list will be Johnny O'Glee, 1949 Texas State Golden Glove Champ who may steal the spotlight in the feature match of the evening. O'Glee won the title in the 135 pound division, the same weight class that classy Danny Orsak, Tiger frosh star, will fight in when the two schools tangle on January 18. Should the two meet, fans will be treated to one of the finest exhibitions of collegiate boxing seen at the Ole War Skule in many days.

The Eagles will not rely entirely on the punching power of O'Glee, however, as they have outstanding contenders in Harlan Gaskill, 118 pound Golden Glove District Champ in 1949, Baxter Ragsdale, 126 pound Golden Glove district champion and Texas amateur athletic federation champion in 1949, and Jackie Gunter, 1949 regional Golden Glove champion in the 147 pound division. Gaskill will probably move up to the 125 pound class where he will face lanky Cecil "Whitie" Brooking, Tiger contender in that weight. Ragsdale will take a four pound deficit and battle it out with the Tiger's Tommy Gascon in the 130 pound tussle, while Gunter will face hard-hitting Joe Zale in the 145 pound division.

Asure-fire crowd pleaser will be the heavyweight clash between L. S. U.'s Paul Miller and the Eagle's Bob Gilstrap. Miller has caused many eyebrows to be raised around the Tiger training camp with his slow, deliberate style of fighting. The bulky Miller has dynamite in both gloves, and continually stalks his opponent awaiting his opportunity to unleash his powder-laden mitts. Gilstrap, Texas Regional Golden Glove champ, is a rugged battler who can trade punches with the best of them, so it's not all unlikely that a slugfest will result when the two big boys meet.

Tiger Coach J. T. Owen will taper off his freshmen crew this week end for their fracas Wednesday night. Showing deep concern for his chances against the power-laden Eagles Owen stated," we will face one of the finest boxing teams in the south when North Texas State College comes to Baton Rouge. With almost every fighter a champion we wil have all we can handle in every weight, and those attending the fights will see some of the finest talent exhibited at L. S. U. in quite some time."

Probable Starting Lineups

Tommy Gascon (LSU) vs. Baxter Ragsdale (N. Tex.), 130 lbs.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The pro football coaches who dropped in to pay their respects to their college brethren this week have been getting a lot of ribbing about their "basketball" game . . . and at least one of them, Pittsburgh's Johnny Michelosen, thinks something will be done about it before too long. . . "I think there'll be less pasisng next year," says Johnny. "The fans don't like it when two T-formation teams get together and do nothing but pass. You need some running, too." . . . Michelosen is a single wing coach, which may have some bearing on his criticism of the T. . . He also teaches rugged defensive football, as indicated by Steve Van Buren's remark: "When you play the steelers. one man never tackles you; ten tackle you." . . . . Johnny's reply to that is: "It takes ten men to stop Van Buren."

IT'S IN THE AIR

A couple of college publicity men were walking past the room where three big conferences were holding a sort of rump session on the N. C. A. A. sanity code the other day . . . Said one: "They're probably having a big discussion of free substitution." . . . "Did you say free subsidy?" asked the other . . . and during another publicity session Michigan State's Fred Stabley was giving a glowing description of his new football press box, where they do everything for the reporter but write his story. . . . and Bob Megargel from Bucknell wisecracked: "What we need in sports publicity is a sanity code."

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Although there's no talk about a change, Ed Danowski hasn't signed a contract to coach Fordham in 1950 yet. . . . Bobby Brown of the Yankees will finish his work for his medical degree at Tulane this semester, but he'll probably have to return to New Orleans in June for commencement to receive the degree officially. . . . Bobby, incidentally, stands in the upper third of his class. . . .. Don Gehrmann, the Wisconsin miler, took a long rest after the cross country season and may have difficulty beating Tennessee's Alf Holmberg at Washington tonight . . . . He's pointing for the Wanamaker mile two weeks later. . . A half hour after Bob Wodruff signed as Florida football coach, a newspaperman phoned him and asked: "When do you start work?" . . . Replied Bob: "I started a half hour ago."

WEAK END NOTES

Middleweight Lee Sala had to score three knockouts in 12 days to earn $5,000. That's what he got for stopping Ruben Jones in New York, Eddie O'Neil in Columbus, O., and Pete Zadduck in Buffalo. . . . coincidence dept. On Friday the 13th horses numbered 1 and 3 won the daily double at Tropical Park. Price $26.00—or about 13 for one. . . . Believe it or not, Mushky Jackson got this sentence into a publicity release on the pending appearance of Dot Dodson and June Byers at Matawan, N. J.: "In the mat world this pair has plenty of grunt-groans and will be a lively bout among female sex."

Former L. S. U. Star Undergoes Operation

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 14.—Y. A. Tittle, former L. S. U. gridiron star and now professional with the Baltimore Colts, underwent an operation at 3 a. m. today for ruptured appendix.

Tittle is reported "not resting well" at Our Lady of the Lake Sanitarium here. Although not in critical condition.

Dr. J. J. Noto, team physician of the L. S. U. football team, performed the operation after Tittle was rushed to the hospital from the home of a former teammate Charlie Pevey.

Tittle was here on business and attended the L. S. U.-Tulane basketball game Friday night.

3-DAY CAGE MEET WILL BEGIN FEB. 9TH AT COLLEGE

One Day Added So That Girl Quintets May Compete; 65 Teams Attended In 1949

A record number of cage quintets is expected for the annual Northeast Junior College Invitational Basketball Tournament slated to get underway here Thursday, February 9. The affair will last through Saturday, February 11.

Fifty-eight teams have already signed up for the cage meet. Last year 65 quintets met on the court at N. J. C.

Biggest reason for the boost in entries up to date was the addition of one day of activity so that more girl's teams can compete. The Louisiana High School Athletic Association rules limit girls to 60 minutes of play daily, and for that reason no more than two games a day for each team can be scheduled. By getting the girls into action Thursday and giving them three days in which to work, more squads were able to be accepted in this division.

The entry list so far is divided evenly between girls' and boy's combinations, representing the cream of high school talent throughout this section of the state.

The tourney is open to all high schools of northeast Louisiana, A. S. Huffman, head of the N. J. C. department of health and physical education announced. In the event that invitations failed to reach basketball coaches in this area, officials are asked to get in touch with Huffman or Miss Ada Bess Hart, director of health and physical education for women at the college here. The former will handle the boys' division of the tourney and the latter will direct the girls' section.

Carrying out the policy of former years, the basketball event will be conducted for both divisions under regulations of the Louisiana High School Athletic Association.

A health certificate is required of all girls participating, Miss Hart said. These will be accepted at the time of registration for the tournament.

Drawings for play are to be made January 27. Immediately following, squads in both divisions will be notified as to the team, time and place that they will play.

Boys' games will not get underway until Friday, February 10.

All girls' games will be played in the N. J. C. gymnasium. Boys' squads are to be divided between Louisiana Training Institute and Ouachita Parish High School gymnasiums during the preliminaries. Semi-final, consolation and final games in the boys' ranks will be played at N. J. C.

Calling the girls' games will be the following officials: Miss Oleta Savage, physical education major at Louisiana Tech; Miss Mary L. George, head of the health and physical education department at Ouachita Parish High School; Mrs. Colene Hart Mann, former physical education instructor at O. P. H. S. Serving as umpires will be two N. J. C. physical education majors, Agnes Jones and Audrey Wilson, both of whom officiated during last week's basketball tournament sponsored by O. P. H. S.

Last year the Baskin High School girls won their fourth Northeast Junior College Invitational Basketball Tournament championship. In the boys' division, Choudrant High School claimed its first title in the eleventh annual affair.

Baskin's defending champions beat out a hard fighting Oak Grove sextet in the title finals, 50 to 35, and Choudrant made its final triumph over Central High School, 34 to 25.

Trophies are to be presented to the three leading teams in each division, according to tradition. Trophies also will be awarded by Lockhart-Blair Sports Shop of Monroe to the girl and boy representing the finest sportsmanship throughout the event. These prizes were made a tournament feature for the first time last year. Ed Lockhart and L. N. "Buddy" Blair awarded the trophies on the judgment of tourney officials. Anne Dozier, Fort Necessity, and Henry Staggs, Quitman, were acclaimed winners of the sportsmanship prizes.

The list of high school entries that had been received last night comprised the following girls' teams: Ouachita Parish, Bonita, Mangham, Winnsboro, Grayson, Clarks, Eros, Bastrop, Oak Grove, Columbia, Epps, Forest, Neville, Waterproof, Linville, Start, Kilbourne, Baskin, Choudrant, Okaloosa, Central, Calhoun, St. Paschal's, Marion, Oak Ridge, Quitman, Monticello, Pioneer and St. Mhatthews'.

Entries of boys' squads include the following high schools: Ouachita Parish, Bonita, Mangham, Winnsboro, Grayson, Clarks, Eros, Bastrop, Oak Grove, Columbia, Epps, Forest, Neville, Waterproof, Linville, Start, Talulah, Delhi, Baskin, Choudrant, Okaloosa, Central, Calhoun, St. Paschal's, Marion, Oak Ridge, Quitman, Monticello and Pioneer.

Association Lists 154 Games For Eight Clubs

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Southern Association announced a 154-game baseball schedule for its eight clubs today.

The season will open April 14 and close Sept. 10 with its all-star game set for July 18.

The opening day will have Birmingham at Atlanta, Little Rock at Memphis, Mobile at New Orleans and Chattanooga at Nashville.

Nashville is defending champion of the Southern Association.

Greenies Take Teeth Out of L. S. U. Tiger

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Tulane University kept its Southeastern Conference basketball record spotless last night by beating arch-rival Louisiana State University 75-70 in a see-saw affair.

Bob Meador of L. S. U. took high point honors by tallying 24 points. Several of his scores came at critical times and kept L. S. U. hopes alive. Virgil Risner topped Tulane's point-makers with 19.

Shreveport Sells Kraus To Pacific Coast League

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Shreveport Sports of the Texas League have sold Pitcher Jack Kraus to Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League.

President Bonneau Peters of the Shreveport Club announced the sale of the 31-year-old lefthander yesterday. The sale price was not announced.

Kraus won 11 and lost nine games last year with Shreveport.

LOCAL BALL CLUB WILL BE 'SPORTS'

Name Given Monroe Team In Recognition Of Monroe-Shreveport Association

The Monroe entry in the Cotton States League will be known as the Sports, according to Business Manager Paul Manasseh. The nome de baseball guerre was arrived at in recognition of the association between the Monroe and Shreveport clubs.

For almost one generation the Texas League Club has been referred to by that nickname and Bonneau Peters, president of both teams, pointed out that the naming of the new Class C club the same as the parent organization will insure a closer tieup between the two.

"It is our hope," Peters said. "to work out a close degree of cooperation between the two clubs, so close in fact that the two are able to help one another when the need arises."

However, he reiterated a previous statement that the operation of the Monroe club will be concentrated in Monroe and Shreveport's share will be to aid the Cotton States League squad so that it will become a representative of which the residents of northeast Louisiana can be proud.

For the third straight year, only students are being admitted to Penn State's indoor athletic events in 1950.

EIGHT BOUTS ON DOCKET FOR M. S.

Mississippi Southern Will Take On Tigers, Gamecocks In Boxing Matches

HATTIESBURG, Miss.,—(Special)—Mississippi Southern's ever-expanding varsity athletic program took another stride toward national prominence with the announcement today by Athletic Director Reed Green of an eight-meet schedule for the newly-organized southern boxing team.

In releasing the boxing schedule, Green stated that "although our intercollegiate boxing program is in its infancy, we have been fortunate in securing matches with some of the nation's outstanding teams."

Coached by Perry Waldvogel, former mentor of the chimpionship Hinds Junior College squad, the southern mitters will open the season on January 16 against North Texas State College in Southern's new field house.

Other home matches are slated against an L. S. U. team on February 10; against DePaul University of Chicago on March 4; and against McNeese College of Lake Charles, La., on March 11.

Highlighting the Southerner's road matches are bouts with the University of South Carolina Gamecocks in Columbia, S. C., on February 24 and the Citadel in Charleston, S. C., on February 21. The Citadel match is tentative.

Other matches away from home find the southerners tangling with McNeese College in Lake Charles on January 18 and with an L. S. U. team in Baton Rouge on January 27.

As a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Boxing Association, which includes L. S. U., Clemson, South Carolina, and the Citadel among other, the southerners will also enter the Southern Invitational tournament on March 17 and 18. Site of the tourney has not been set.

LION BOYS BOW TO EROS IN TOURNEY FINALS

GIRLS OF BASKIN DROP BASTROP IN FINAL CAGE TILT

Two Lions, Boatright and Bates, Receive All Tournament Honors After Finals

By Oland Silk
(World Sports Reporter)

The long and well-managed invitational tournament sponsored by the Ouachita Parish High School ended last night with hundreds of spectators, partisans of the local boy Lions of Coach Herbert Holloman, leaving the stands after having stood on their collective ear and seeing the locals bow desperately to a bitter rival, Eros, 35 to 23 in the finals of the three-day meet.

In the girls' division of the finals, the tall and poised Ragsdale of Baskin High School led her team to an easy victory over the Bastrop girls, 67 to 24, to take first place honors in the tournament that saw hundreds of persons witness local and out-of-town teams eliminate one another beginning last Thursday.

The two boys' teams, which had eliminated one foe after another in the grueling ladder of games, won places in the finals and gave a spirited show from 9:20 p.m. until the final whistle.

Eros, the Jackson parish court giant, failed to cringe before the Lions den, and at half-time led 15 to 7. They came back in the second half to continue their slight edge in the end coming out with victory smiles all round.

The teams laid by the way side by Eros were Lake Providence, 37 to 20, Okaloosa, 29 to 22, Columbia 32 to 21. One, Okaloosa got in on a consolation game with Calhoun and defeated them 42 to 39.

The Ouachita Lions made their appearance in the final round by defeating Calhoun 41 to 24, Forest 32 to 27, and Collinston 52 to 17. Calhoun took on Okaloosa in the consolation arrangement, and was defeated 42 to

Southeastern Wins 4th Conference Tilt

HAMMOND, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Southeastern Louisiana won its fourth Gulf States Conference basketball game here tonight, over Louisiana Tech, 75-52.

Determined Southeastern, led by Center Harold Owens, took an early lead and was never headed. The lanky 6-foot-6-inch captain scored 23 points to take high-point honors.

Robert Bertrand of Tech dropped in 14 points to lead his team.

Halftime score was 36-24, in favor of Southeastern.

Tech pulled up to within seven points midway in the last period, but Southeastern ran away in the closing minutes.

Baby Bengals Will Engage North Texas In Fights Wednesday Night

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 14. (Special)—Coach J. T. Owen's National Championship boxing team will take on a new role Wednesday night when they will be spectators for the Tiger Frosh-North Texas State College fistic battle. The Baby Bengals wil meet the highly touted Texans in the Agricultural Coliseum with the opening bell scheduled to ring at 6:45 p.m.

The ring battle between the two schools may well cause the hair of the youthful Tiger mentor to turn grey, as the North Texas pugilists are well-stocked in both ability and experience, in Golden Glove tourneys, and most of which are title-holders. Heading the list will be Johnny O'Glee, 1949 Texas State Golden Glove Champ who may steal the spotlight in the feature match of the evening. O'Glee won the title in the 135 pound division, the same weight class that classy Danny Orsak, Tiger frosh star, will fight in when the two schools tangle on January 18. Should the two meet, fans will be treated to one of the finest exhibitions of collegiate boxing seen at the Ole War Skule in many days.

The Eagles will not rely entirely on the punching power of O'Glee, however, as they have outstanding contenders in Harlan Gaskill, 118 pound Golden Glove District Champ in 1949, Baxter Ragsdale, 126 pound Golden Glove district champion and Texas amateur athletic federation champion in 1949, and Jackie Gunter, 1949 regional Golden Glove champion in the 147 pound division. Gaskill will probably move up to the 125 pound class where he will face lanky Cecil "Whitie" Brooking, Tiger contender in that weight. Ragsdale will take a four pound deficit and battle it out with the Tiger's Tommy Gascon in the 130 pound tussle, while Gunter will face hard-hitting Joe Zale in the 145 pound division.

Asure-fire crowd pleaser will be the heavyweight clash between L. S. U.'s Paul Miller and the Eagle's Bob Gilstrap. Miller has caused many eyebrows to be raised around the Tiger training camp with his slow, deliberate style of fighting. The bulky Miller has dynamite in both gloves, and continually stalks his opponent awaiting his opportunity to unleash his power-laden mitts. Gilstrap, Texas Regional Golden Glove champ, is a rugged battler who can trade punches with the best of them, so it's not all unlikely that a slugfest will result when the two big boys meet.

Tiger Coach J. T. Owen will taper off his freshmen crew this week end for their fracas Wednesday night. Showing deep concern for his chances against the power-laden Eagles Owen stated," we will face one of the finest boxing teams in the south when North Texas State College comes to Baton Rouge. With almost every fighter a champion we wil have all we can handle in every weight, and those attending the fights will see some of the finest talent exhibited at L. S. U. in quite some time."

Probable Starting Lineups

Cecil Brooking (LSU) vs. Harlan Gaskill (N. Tex.), 125 lbs.

Tommy Gascon (LSU) vs. Baxter Ragsdale (N. Tex.), 130 lbs.

Danny Orsak (LSU) vs. Johnny O'Glee (N. Tex.), 135 lbs.

Joe Zale (LSU) vs. Jack Gunter (N. Tex.), 145 lbs.

Gene Weinzel (LSU) vs. Gene Milner (N. Tex.), 155 lbs.

Dave Millegan (LSU) vs. Jack Woodruff (N. Tex.), 165 lbs.

Archie Crosby or Bo Alford (LSU) vs. Horace DeFord (N. Tex.), 175 lbs.

Paul Miller (LSU) vs. Bob Gilstrap (N. Tex.), heavyweight.

3-DAY CAGE MEET WILL BEGIN FEB. 9TH AT COLLEGE

One Day Added So That Girl Quintets May Compete; 65 Teams Attended In 1949

A record number of cage quintets is expected for the annual Northeast Junior College Invitational Basketball Tournament slated to get underway here Thursday, February 9. The affair will last through Saturday, February 11.

Fifty-eight teams have already signed up for the cage meet. Last year 65 quintets met on the court at N. J. C.

Biggest reason for the boost in entries up to date was the addition of one day of activity so that more girl's teams can compete. The Louisiana High School Athletic Association rules limit girls to 60 minutes of play daily, and for that reason no more than two games a day for each team can be scheduled. In the event that invitations failed to reach basketball coaches in this area, officials are asked to get in touch with Huffman or Miss Ada Bess Hart, director of health and physical education for women at the college here. The former will handle the boys' division of the tourney and the latter will direct the girls' section.

Carrying out the policy of former years, the basketball event will be conducted for both divisions under regulations of the Louisiana High School Athletic Association.

A health certificate is required of all girls participating, Miss Hart said. These will be accepted at the time of registration for the tournament.

Drawings for play are to be made January 27. Immediately following, squads in both divisions will be notified as to the team, time and place that they will play.

Boys' games will not get underway until Friday, February 10.

All girls' games will be played in the N. J. C. gymnasium. Boys' squads are to be divided between Louisiana Training Institute and Ouachita Parish High School gymnasiums during the preliminaries. Semi-final, consolation and final games in the boys' ranks will be played at N. J. C.

Calling the girls' games will be the following officials: Miss Oleta Savage, physical education major at Louisiana Tech; Miss Mary L. George, head of the health and physical education department at Ouachita Parish High School; Mrs. Colene Hart Mann, former physical education instructor at O. P. H. S. Serving as umpires will be two N. J. C. physical education majors, Agnes Jones and Audrey Wilson, both of whom officiated during last week's basketball tournament sponsored by O. P. H. S.

Last year the Baskin High School girls won their fourth Northeast Junior College Invitational Basketball Tournament championship. In the boys' division, Choudrant High School claimed its first title in the eleventh annual affair.

Baskin's defending champions beat out a hard fighting Oak Grove sextet in the title finals, 50 to 35, and Choudrant made its final triumph over Central High School, 34 to 25.

Trophies are to be presented to the three leading teams in each division, according to tradition. Trophies also will be awarded by Lockhart-Blair Sports Shop of Monroe to the girl and boy representing the finest sportsmanship throughout the event. These prizes were made a tournament feature for the first time last year. Ed Lockhart and L. N. "Buddy" Blair awarded the trophies on the judgment of tourney officials. Anne Dozier, Fort Necessity, and Henry Staggs, Quitman, were acclaimed winners of the sportsmanship prizes.

The list of high school entries that had been received last night comprised the following girls' teams: Ouachita Parish, Bonita, Mangham, Winnsboro, Grayson, Clarks, Eros, Bastrop, Oak Grove, Columbia, Epps, Forest, Neville, Waterproof, Linville, Start, Kilbourne, Baskin, Choudrant, Okaloosa, Central, Calhoun, St. Paschal's, Marion, Oak Ridge, Quitman, Monticello, Pioneer and St. Mhatthews'.

Entries of boys' squads include the following high schools: Ouachita Parish, Bonita, Mangham, Winnsboro, Grayson, Clarks, Eros, Bastrop, Oak Grove, Columbia, Epps, Forest, Neville, Waterproof, Linville, Start, Tallulah, Delhi, Baskin, Choudrant, Okaloosa, Central, Calhoun, St. Paschal's, Marion, Oak Ridge, Quitman, Monticello and Pioneer.

Association Lists 154 Games For Eight Clubs

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Southern Association announced a 154-game baseball schedule for its eight clubs today.

The season will open April 14 and close Sept. 10 with its all-star game set for July 18.

The opening day will have Birmingham at Atlanta, Little Rock at Memphis, Mobile at New Orleans and Chattanooga at Nashville.

Nashville is defending champion of the Southern Association.

Greenies Take Teeth Out of L. S. U. Tiger

BATON ROUGE, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Tulane University kept its Southeastern Conference basketball record spotless last night by beating arch-rival Louisiana State University 75-70 in a see-saw affair.

Bob Meador of L. S. U. took high point honors by tallying 24 points. Several of his scores came at critical times and kept L. S. U. hopes alive. Virgil Risner topped Tulane's point-makers with 19.

Shreveport Sells Kraus To Pacific Coast League

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Shreveport Sports of the Texas League have sold Pitcher Jack Kraus to Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast League.

President Bonneau Peters of the Shreveport Club announced the sale of the 31-year-old lefthander yesterday. The sale price was not announced.

Kraus won 11 and lost nine games last year with Shreveport.

LOCAL BALL CLUB WILL BE 'SPORTS'

Name Given Monroe Team In Recognition Of Monroe-Shreveport Association

The Monroe entry in the Cotton States League will be known as the Sports, according to Business Manager Paul Manasseh. The nome de baseball guerre was arrived at in recognition of the association between the Monroe and Shreveport clubs.

For almost one generation the Texas League Club has been referred to by that nickname and Bonneau Peters, president of both teams, pointed out that the naming of the new Class C club the same as the parent organization will insure a closer tieup between the two.

"It is our hope," Peters said. "to work out a close degree of cooperation between the two clubs, so close in fact that the two are able to help one another when the need arises."

However, he reiterated a previous statement that the operation of the Monroe club will be concentrated in Monroe and Shreveport's share will be to aid the Cotton States League squad so that it will become a representative of which the residents of northeast Louisiana can be proud.

For the third straight year, only students are being admitted to Penn State's indoor athletic events in 1950.

EIGHT BOUTS ON DOCKET FOR M. S.

Mississippi Southern Will Take On Tigers, Gamecocks In Boxing Matches

HATTIESBURG, Miss.,—(Special)—Mississippi Southern's ever-expanding varsity athletic program took another stride toward national prominence with the announcement today by Athletic Director Reed Green of an eight-meet schedule for the newly-organized southern boxing team.

In releasing the boxing schedule, Green stated that "although our intercollegiate boxing program is in its infancy, we have been fortunate in securing matches with some of the nation's outstanding teams."

Coached by Perry Waldvogel, former mentor of the chimpionship Hinds Junior College squad, the southern mitters will open the season on January 16 against North Texas State College in Southern's new field house.

Other home matches are slated against an L. S. U. team on February 10; against DePaul University of Chicago on March 4; and against McNeese College of Lake Charles, La., on March 11.

Highlighting the Southerner's road matches are bouts with the University of South Carolina Gamecocks in Columbia, S. C., on February 24 and the Citadel in Charleston, S. C., on February 21. The Citadel match is tentative.

Other matches away from home find the southerners tangling with McNeese College in Lake Charles on January 18 and with an L. S. U. team in Baton Rouge on January 27.

As a member of the Southern Intercollegiate Boxing Association, which includes L. S. U., Clemson, South Carolina, and the Citadel among other, the southerners will also enter the Southern Invitational tournament on March 17 and 18. Site of the tourney has not been set.

NEVILLE POINTS FOR LION-TIGER CAGE SCRAP

O. P. H. S. FACES FIGHTING TEAM HERE NEXT WEEK

Neville Cage Squad Will Invade Lion Country For First Time In Long Time

Tuesday night, for the first time in many years the Neville Tiger cage squad will invade the home of the Ouachita Lions.

The tilt will continue the intra-city rivalry that was begun again this fall in football.

A preliminary girls' game will precede the featured boys' game at 8:00 p. m.

The Neville Tiger squad has weathered six battles in their current campaign leading up to the match Tuesday. These hoopsters from Neville boasts of victories over Dubach, Delhi, Haynesville, and Winnsboro, while losing close battles to Eros and Okaloosa.

The Tigers worked hard in the holidays at Christmas time in an attempt to overcome the late start in cage work due to the prolonged football season.

In the pre-Christmas games with only a few drills under their belts, the Tigers turned under Dubach 44-36 in the Choudrant Tournament, only to lose a thriller in the quarer finals to Eros 39-36. In their holiday workouts, the Bengals scrimmaged the Choudrant sextet in a closed contest.

Making their debut to the home fans just after the holidays, the Neville quintet beat Delhi, and then pulled out a thriller from the Haynesville Golden Tornado 41-40 at Haynesville.

In a game just last week, Neville took Winnsboro to a 39-32 count.

Riding a winning streak since Christmas, the Neville outfit failed to get rolling in the Ouachita Tournament, losing a close one to Okaloosa in an overtime game 44-36.

In the current season the Tigers from Neville have pushed in total of 232 points to their opponents' 221. High point honors thus far have been well spread over the squad, paced by Joe Messina at times, Ken Harrell, and Charles Calhoun and Charles Woods at other times.

The Ouachita cagers have a good many more games under their belt going into this fray, and this well may be the deciding factor. With this mind the Tigers will enter the fray as the underdogs to Coach Holliman's fast sharpshooters.

The 1948-49 basketball season was the first in which Navy's opponents scored more than 1,000 points; the Middies made 1,064 to 1,054.

Disputed Wrestling Match Results In Return Engagement

LAYE, WOLFE WILL TACKLE PHANTOM, STEDDUM TUESDAY

Tag Match Last Week Ended With Purse Being Held, New Round Scheduled

A dispute about the decision in last Tuesday night's tag team match at Gus Kallio's arena has resulted in a return engagement for this week being scheduled between the same group, according to Wrestling Promoter Gus Kallio.

The referee last week gave the match to Wild Bill Steddum and his partner, Black Phantom, later admitting that he might have been wrong, according to Kallio. They fought Joe Wolfe and Charley Laye.

Scheduled for Tuesday night is the return engagement of the tag team in a 90 minute time limit battle with only two falls to win.

Following the match last week and the concomitant dispute, Commissioner Silverstein asked promoter Kallio that the purse be withheld until another match could settle it.

The Black Phantom was very displeased over the purse being withheld and told Kallio so. The Monroe promoter said that he had no choice in the matter since what the commissioner said went.

Charley Laye and Joe Wolfe, the opponents of the Phantom and Steddum, were reported to be n favor of a return match. Wolf said he didn't ever win arguments, but "I have won a lot of matches on the mat, and I can't see why we should be afraid of Steddum and his masked partner; after all, if he pulls his mask off, only thing you can see is another face and faces haven't scared me yet."

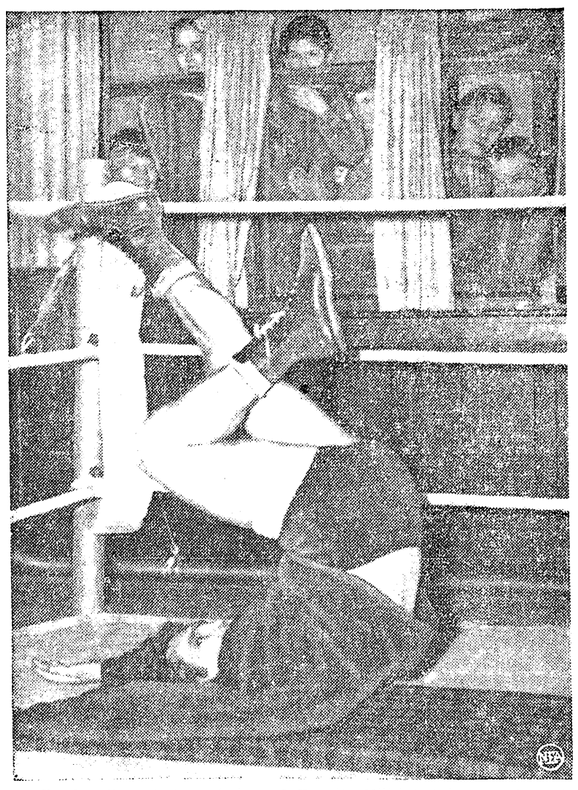

Taylor Will Take Post Vacated By Ed Erdelatz

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The San Francisco 49ers today announced Charles S. Taylor will succeed Eddy Erdelatz as assistant coach of the pro football club.

Erdelatz was named head mentor of the U. S. Naval Academy earlier this week.

Taylor, 29, is freshman football coach at Stanford University. His yearlings have never been defeated.

INSIDE DOPE

Peering through the window of Freddie Mills' training quarters at Betchworth, Surrey, the neighborhood kids get a line on the light-heavyweight champion's condition. The Englishman defends the title against Cleveland's Joey Maxim at Earl's Court, London, January 24.

Little Leagues Are Blow To Softball

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Frank O'Rourke, organizer of Little Leagues in Connecticut, tells you what they have done to softball.

"Three years ago softball was the most thriving sport in a town of 25,000," he says. "Last season you could find no more than three or four teams in a place of that size."

You no doubt have seen Little Leaguers in action, or heard of the movement. It has boys from eight to 12 playing during the summer vacation in a big league setting on a miniature diamond laid out in a park to match.

The ball used is a little larger than the regulation baseball, but the game definitely has the kids back on the hard ball.

And the Little Leagues get them in time to instill the baseball idea before they go in for football or some other pastime.

It's a tremendous lift for organized baseball, although the latter has reacted as usual—slow to appreciate.

In the last four years, Little League baseball has spread from Williamsport, Pa., where it originated, through 28 states. Last summer there were 225 leagues, more than 900 teams with 16,000 players from 22 states playing regular schedules. This culminated in the Little League World Series in Williamsport, where eight teams fought it out with all the trappings of the majors.

Since the war, Little Leagues have spread like amoebae. Take Connecticut, for an example. As recently as 1948, only one league, involving four teams and 72 youngsters, was functioning. Next summer Director O'Rourke expects 50 leagues, 200 teams, 4,000 lads.

O'Rourke relates amusing stories about the young combatants. A batter had a habit of blowing a big bubblegum bubble with the pitch. Catchers complained. Seems it made it look as though two balls were coming.

Hartford business men donated special awards. Batters blasting home runs and pitchers notching shutouts were given a milk shake, a banana split, candy, soda pop, a hot dog, a free haircut and whatnot.

In a game at Middletown, Kenny Fredericks had a shutout going into the seventh. Little League games are limited to seven innings. With runners on third and second and one out, a fly ball was hit to left field.

As the outfielder trotted into the dressing room, young Kenny Fredericks grabbed his hand, and excitedly shouted, "Thanks for saving my milk shake."

Young or old, a ballplayer always plays for keeps.

WILL MANAGE DALLAS CLUB

Charlie Grimm, left, who quit his $25,000-a-year job as Chicago Cub vice-president, said he verbally accepted the offer of owner Dick Burnett of the Dallas baseball club to take over as field director of the Texas League team. When Grimm tried to turn in his Chicago uniform, trainer Andy Lotshaw, right, and traveling secretary Bob Lewis urged him to keep it for sentimental reasons. (NEA Telephoto).

TED ATKINSON IS TAGGED PROFESSOR

Fellow Jockeys Say Rider Is Authority On All Subjects

HIALEAH, Fla.—(NEA)—Because he is the final authority on all subjects in the jockey quarters, Ted Atkinson is known to his fellow booters as The Professor, although sometimes the Greentree guide is identified as The Brain.

The studious Atkinson attended college for a year in his native Brooklyn, puts in most of his spare time reading. He also thinks while on a horse's back, which is not the least reason why he'll bid for top riding honors for the third time in four winters at the Hialeah Park meeting, which gets under way Jan. 17. He was runner-up a year ago.

Because they are affixed to two of the best, Banana Nose and The Professor are the two most famous nicknames hung on riders. The first-named tag is, of course, attached to Eddie Arcaro, currently riding at Santa Anita.

Conn McCreary wears the largest riding cap in racing, size 7 1/4, all out of proportion to his weight and height. Thus his nickname, The Head.

The Clock Judges Pace

Rail-like Warren Mehrtens is The Thin Man, Jimmy Stout Baldy because of his receding hairline. D. D. T. is the obvious handle for Doug Dodson. Bobby Strange answers to Cigars for the reason that he is always puffing a big black one. One look at Georgie South, a dead ringer for Humpty Dumpty, and you know why he is Butterball. Because of his uncanny ability to judge the split-second pace of the horse he is riding, Pete Anderson is The Clock.

Herb Lindberg's nickname, Lucky, is obvious enough. His other handle, Derby Herbie, is derived from the fact that he likes to brag about the time he led for a half mile in the big one at Churchill Downs. Every time the boys loked up two years ago, W. M. Cook was winning, so they started calling him Here Comes Cookie! The name sticks in face of the fact that he doesn't pop down in front as frequently this winter.

Saerling Young, long-time president of The Jockeys' Guild, is The Prez. Anthony Skoronski is Polack to the boys, Kenneth Scawthorn Scrappy. Willie Saunders, who rode Omaha to victory in the 1935 Kentucky Derby, is Smoky, but nobody knows why. Another veteran, Red Pollard, Seabiscuit's rider, is called The Cougar, and again no one knows for what reason. The youngest member of a riding family, R. J. Martin is Baby, although no longer an apprentice.

Jimmy McCoy, an old-timer, many years ago established a fashion which has been universally adopted.

He was the first rider to wear them, and although now a grandfather, Jimmy McCoy is still known as Goggles.

A 20-game schedule is slated for 1950 for the pentagonal hoskey league.

Man Charged For Trying To Kill Pitching Star

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A man was booked today on suspicion of assault with intent to murder Tommy Bridges, former Detroit Tigers pitching star now with the San Francisco Seals.

Verle L. Penney, 41, a Portland, Ore. trucking contractor, was arrested after an affray which officers said involves him, his former wife, Iona, 39, and Bridges, 43.

Bridges was quoted by Detective E. Goossen as saying:

"I went into the drugstore (where Mrs. Penney is employed) to pick Iona up (late Friday night) and Penny approaching me with his hand in his right pocket as we started toward the car. Penny said he wanted to talk to me in the alley and the three of us started for the alley.

"Suddenly Penny pulled out a gun, stuck it in my ribs and said, "'this is it'. Then he struck me on the head three times with it."

Goossen said Penney was subdued by passers-by. Bridges, who is a bowling equipment salesman during the off-season, told officers he had been going with Mrs. Penney since last September.

California has won the Pacific Coast Conference basketball championship more times than any other school.

S. M. U.'S WALKER WILL GET AWARD

All-American Football Star Slated For Nelson Trophy For Sportsmanship

BOSTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Doak Walker, Southern Methodist's three-time All-American football star, will be awarded the Swede Nelson trophy for outstanding sportsmanship during the 1949 season at the Gridiron Club's annual dinner today.

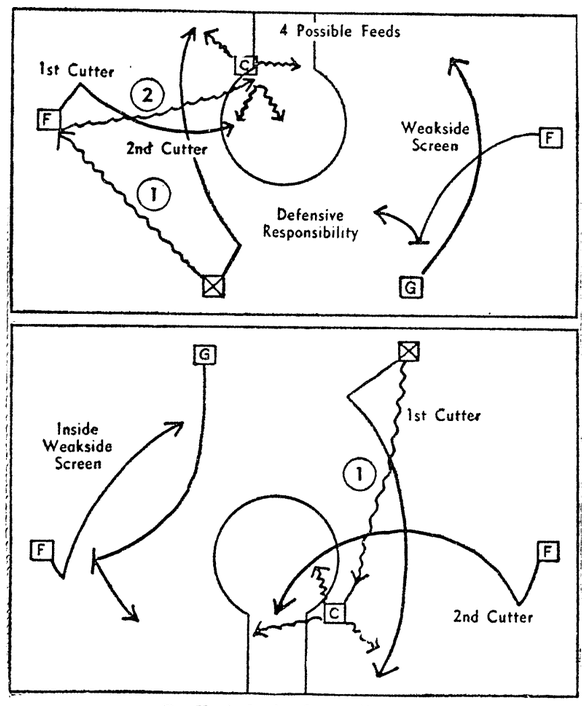

Two years ago Walker was voted the Maxwell trophy and last year he was the recipient of the Heisman award for outstanding gridiron performances.

The winner of the Nelson trophy, dedicated to the former Harvard star player and coach, was decided by a nation-wide vote in which 95 coaches, sports writers and sportscasters participated.

Walker was named by 49 of the selections committee and his closest rival was Kyle Rote, his teammate, who scored 20 points against Notre Dame.

Walker will share tonight's limelight with Matty Bell, the S. M. U. coach, and Bud Wilkinson and undefeated Oklahoma, who was named "Coach of the Year" by his colleagues.

Timing, Balance For Rebounding, Defense Emphasized At Bradley

Bradley's basic-play patterns.

PEORIA, Ill.—(NEA)—Bradely University's basic basketball pattern was designed for a tall center.

Although our present squad lacks height, must settle for the capable five-foot eight-and-a-half Gene Melchiorre at center, the system works well, and we like it.

The key is balance for rebounding, defensive responsibility and timing on the part of the cutters and screeners.

In the top half of the accompanying diagram, the forward passing into the center is the first cutter. He definitely fakes before cutting. The guard on the same side fakes, then cuts off the back of the first cutter. Many possibilities are opened to the center in handing off, or he may chose to shoot from his pivot position.

In the meantime, an outside screen is executed by the opposite forward on the weakside guard's opponent to open up more scoring possibilities.

The same principle prevails in the bottom diagram, except that the guard throws directly into the center, becomes the first cutter.

The weakside guard screens for the opposite forward.

Taylor Will Take Post Vacated By Ed Erdelatz

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The San Francisco 49ers today announced Charles S. Taylor will succeed Eddy Erdelatz as assistant coach of the pro football club.

Erdelatz was named head mentor of the U. S. Naval Academy earlier this week.

Taylor, 29, is freshman football coach at Stanford University. His yearlings have never been defeated.

INSIDE DOPE

Peering through the window of Freddie Mills' training quarters at Betchworth, Surrey, the neighborhood kids get a line on the light-heavyweight champion's condition. The Englishman defends the title against Cleveland's Joey Maxim at Earl's Court, London, January 24.

Little Leagues Are Blow To Softball

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Frank O'Rourke, organizer of Little Leagues in Connecticut, tells you what they have done to softball.

"Three years ago softball was the most thriving sport in a town of 25,000," he says. "Last season you could find no more than three or four teams in a place of that size."

You no doubt have seen Little Leaguers in action, or heard of the movement. It has boys from eight to 12 playing during the summer vacation in a big league setting on a miniature diamond laid out in a park to match.

The ball used is a little larger than the regulation baseball, but the game definitely has the kids back on the hard ball.

And the Little Leagues get them in time to instill the baseball idea before they go in for football or some other pastime.

It's a tremendous lift for organized baseball, although the latter has reacted as usual—slow to appreciate.

In the last four years, Little League baseball has spread from Williamsport, Pa., where it originated, through 28 states. Last summer there were 225 leagues, more than 900 teams with 16,000 players from 22 states playing regular schedules. This culminated in the Little League World Series in Williamsport, where eight teams fought it out with all the trappings of the majors.

Since the war, Little Leagues have spread like amoebae. Take Connecticut, for an example. As recently as 1948, only one league, involving four teams and 72 youngsters, was functioning. Next summer Director O'Rourke expects 50 leagues, 200 teams, 4,000 lads.

O'Rourke relates amusing stories about the young combatants. A batter had a habit of blowing a big bubblegum bubble with the pitch. Catchers complained. Seems it made it look as though two balls were coming.

Hartford business men donated special awards. Batters blasting home runs and pitchers notching shutouts were given a milk shake, a banana split, candy, soda pop, a hot dog, a free haircut and whatnot.

In a game at Middletown, Kenny Fredericks had a shutout going into the seventh. Little League games are limited to seven innings. With runners on third and second and one out, a fly ball was hit to left field.

As the outfielder trotted into the dressing room, young Kenny Fredericks grabbed his hand, and excitedly shouted, "Thanks for saving my milk shake."

Young or old, a ballplayer always plays for keeps.

WILL MANAGE DALLAS CLUB

Charlie Grimm, left, who quit his $25,000-a-year job as Chicago Cub vice-president, said he verbally accepted the offer of owner Dick Burnett of the Dallas baseball club to take over as field director of the Texas League team. When Grimm tried to turn in his Chicago uniform, trainer Andy Lotshaw, right, and traveling secretary Bob Lewis urged him to keep it for sentimental reasons. (NEA Telephoto).

TED ATKINSON IS TAGGED PROFESSOR

Fellow Jockeys Say Rider Is Authority On All Subjects

HIALEAH, Fla.—(NEA)—Because he is the final authority on all subjects in the jockey quarters, Ted Atkinson is known to his fellow booters as The Professor, although sometimes the Greentree guide is identified as The Brain.

The studious Atkinson attended college for a year in his native Brooklyn, puts in most of his spare time reading. He also thinks while on a horse's back, which is not the least reason why he'll bid for top riding honors for the third time in four winters at the Hialeah Park meeting, which gets under way Jan. 17. He was runner-up a year ago.

Because they are affixed to two of the best, Banana Nose and The Professor are the two most famous nicknames hung on riders. The first-named tag is, of course, attached to Eddie Arcaro, currently riding at Santa Anita.

Conn McCreary wears the largest riding cap in racing, size 7 1/4, all out of proportion to his weight and height. Thus his nickname, The Head.

The Clock Judges Pace

Rail-like Warren Mehrtens is The Thin Man, Jimmy Stout Baldy because of his receding hairline. D. D. T. is the obvious handle for Doug Dodson. Bobby Strange answers to Cigars for the reason that he is always puffing a big black one. One look at Georgie South, a dead ringer for Humpty Dumpty, and you know why he is Butterball. Because of his uncanny ability to judge the split-second pace of the horse he is riding, Pete Anderson is The Clock.

Herb Lindberg's nickname, Lucky, is obvious enough. His other handle, Derby Herbie, is derived from the fact that he likes to brag about the time he led for a half mile in the big one at Churchill Downs. Every time the boys loked up two years ago, W. M. Cook was winning, so they started calling him Here Comes Cookie! The name sticks in face of the fact that he doesn't pop down in front as frequently this winter.

Saerling Young, long-time president of The Jockeys' Guild, is The Prez. Anthony Skoronski is Polack to the boys, Kenneth Scawthorn Scrappy, Willie Saunders, who rode Omaha to victory in the 1935 Kentucky Derby, is Smoky, but nobody knows why. Another veteran, Red Pollard, Seabiscuit's rider, is called The Cougar, and again no one knows for what reason. The youngest member of a riding family, R. J. Martin is Baby, although no longer an apprentice.

Jimmy McCoy, an old-timer, many years ago established a fashion which has been universally adopted.

He was the first rider to wear them, and although now a grandfather, Jimmy McCoy is still known as Goggles.

A 20-game schedule is slated for 1950 for the pentagonal hoskey league.

Man Charged For Trying To Kill Pitching Star

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 14.—(AP) — A man was booked today on suspicion of assault with intent to murder Tommy Bridges, former Detroit Tigers pitching star now with the San Francisco Seals.

Verle L. Penney, 41, a Portland, Ore. trucking contractor, was arrested after an affray which officers said involves him, his former wife, Iona, 39, and Bridges, 43.

Bridges was quoted by Detective E. Goossen as saying:

"I went into the drugstore (where Mrs. Penney is employed) to pick Iona up (late Friday night) and Penny approaching me with his hand in his right pocket as we started toward the car. Penny said he wanted to talk to me in the alley and the three of us started for the alley.

"Suddenly Penny pulled out a gun, stuck it in my ribs and said, "'this is it'. Then he struck me on the head three times with it."

Goossen said Penney was subdued by passers-by. Bridges, who is a bowling equipment salesman during the off-season, told officers he had been going with Mrs. Penney since last September.

California has won the Pacific Coast Conference basketball championship more times than any other school.

S. M. U.'S WALKER WILL GET AWARD

All-American Football Star Slated For Nelson Trophy For Sportsmanship

BOSTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Doak Walker, Southern Methodist's three-time All-American football star, will be awarded the Swede Nelson trophy for outstanding sportsmanship during the 1949 season at the Gridiron Club's annual dinner today.

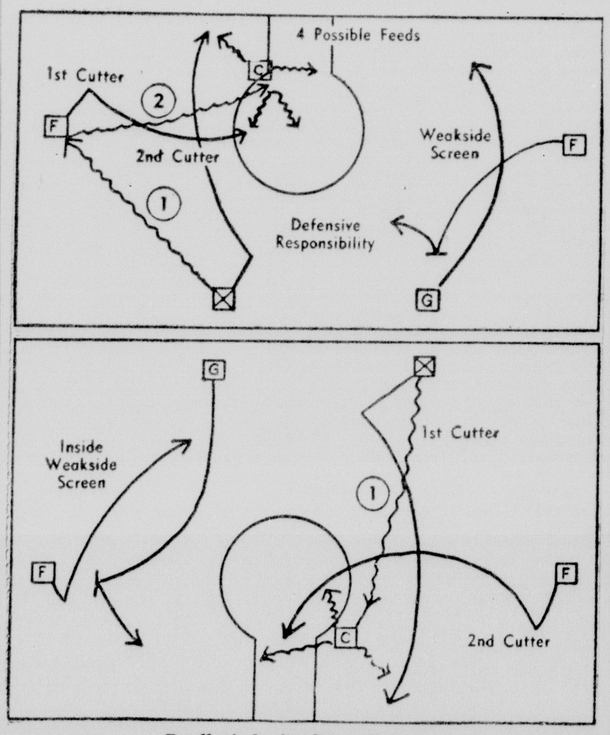

Two years ago Walker was voted the Maxwell trophy and last year he was the recipient of the Heisman award for outstanding gridiron performances.

The winner of the Nelson trophy, dedicated to the former Harvard star player and coach, was decided by a nation-wide vote in which 95 coaches, sports writers and sportscasters participated.

Walker was named by 49 of the selections committee and his closest rival was Kyle Rote, his teammate, who scored 20 points against Notre Dame.

Walker will share tonight's limelight with Matty Bell, the S. M. U. coach, and Bud Wilkinson and undefeated Oklahoma, who was named "Coach of the Year" by his colleagues.

Timing, Balance For Rebounding, Defense Emphasized At Bradley

Bradley's basic-play patterns.

PEORIA, Ill.—(NEA)—Bradely University's basic basketball pattern was designed for a tall center.

Although our present squad lacks height, must settle for the capable five-foot eight-and-a-half Gene Melchiorre at center, the system works well, and we like it.

The key is balance for rebounding, defensive responsibility and timing on the part of the cutters and screeners.

In the top half of the accompanying diagram, the forward passing into the center is the first cutter. He definitely fakes before cutting. The guard on the same side fakes, then cuts off the back of the first cutter. Many possibilities are opened to the center in handing off, or he may chose to shoot from his pivot position.

In the meantime, an outside screen is executed by the opposite forward on the weakside guard's opponent to open up more scoring possibilities.

The same principle prevails in the bottom diagram, except that the guard throws directly into the center, becomes the first cutter.

The weakside guard screens for the opposite forward.

REBELS WIN DECISIVE VICTORY IN NCAA FEUD

BALLOTS TO OUST 7 MEMBERS FALL 25 VOTES SHORT

Delegates Reach Decision After Seven Hours Without Lunch; Teams Still In

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The rebel schools which defied the National Collegiate Athletic Association's sanity code won a rousing victory today when a vote to expel them failed of a necessary two-thirds majority.

After nearly seven hours of heated debate, without a stop for lunch, delegates to the association's annual convention voted by secret balot 111 to 93 for expulsion of the seven recalcitrants. This was 25 votes short of the number needed for expulsion.

The seven who gained this partial vindication of their athletic policies were Virginia University, Boston College, Maryland, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Poly, Villanova and The Citadel.

There was a moment of high confusion immediately after the vote was announced when Dr. Karl Leib of Iowa, president of the N. C. A. A., declared "the motion is carried."

The cry went up from the floor "no, no—two-thirds are required."

Upon being shown a copy of the N. C. A. A. constitution, Leib changed to "the action failed," but declined to concede the result was a victory for opponents of the purity code.

"This vote shows merely that the circumstances in this group of cases were not enough to justify the severe penalties contemplated in the aggravated cases of non-compliance," he said.

Immediately after the vote was announced, President H. C. Byrd of Maryland introduced a resolution calling for a special committee to investigate the athletic practices of all member schools and to make a report at next year's meeting. This was passed 87 to 71.

The result of the ballot apparently will not alter the decision of The Citadel, military school at Charleston, S. C., to withdraw from the N. C. A. A. Its official resignation was presented early today.

Col. D. S. McAlester, dean of student activities at The Citadel, said:

"We resigned in December, we resigned again today and we are still resigned although those fellows seem hard to convince. If they had accepted the resignation and not brought us on the floor we probably would have applied for readmission. Now that's out."

Boston College presented new evidence two days ago to show that it now is in compliance with all the rules and regulations governing aid to athletes. Villanova stated, simply, that its president, the Rev. Francis McGuire had not received several letters addressed to him by the policy body, having been on vacation at the time of their arrival.

The three Virginia schools, as well as Maryland, did not back down a foot in their defiant stand.

A clear indication that the accused schools had summoned sufficient support to avoid expulsion came several hours before the decisive vote. An amendment offered by W. A. Alexander, director of athletics at Georgia Tech, to make a three-meal-a-day training table legal was voted down by only 115 to 106.

No action was taken on the bowl committee's six-point recommendation. In the main, it specified that sponsors of post-season games must give competing schools 80 per cent of the gross receipts and allot them one third of the tickets.

A special committee was formed, instead, to compose a set of by-laws in which such items may be incorporated. This is to avoid having to revise the constitution repeatedly.

Bernie Moore, commissioner of the southeastern conference, predicted today's developments would result in a workable code to which the entire membership could conform.

It may call for open athletic scholarships, such as proposed by Virginia, Maryland and some of the other recalcitrants, or it may provide the year-around training table.

Virginia, which had been on the verge of a bolt paralleling the Citadel's action, changed its mind when the resolution passed to give the code a working over.

Of Penn State's 17 basketball players, only four are under the six-foot mark. Tallest is six-seven.

It was the eighteenth straight win for the Epps squad. Jackson and Harrell sparked the Epps team to victory collecting 12 points each for the losing home team.

The last time these two teams met at Ogden on Monday, Jan. 9, the locals lost by a score of 56 to 52 in a close and hard fought ball game, and another hard fought game is expected come Monday night.

COLUMBIA HIGH SCHOOL WILL BE HOST TO TEAMS

C. H. S. Coach Urges All Teams To Mail Applications In Immediately

COLUMBIA, La., Jan. 14—(Special)—The third annual Columbia high school basketball tournament for teams in the class "B" bracket will get underway here Saturday morning. Twelve teams will compete, Woodrow Turner, Columbia high school coach and athletic director, announced tonight.

The all-boy cage affair, already endorsed by W. L. Colvin, president of the state athletic association, will be staged in the gym of Columbia high school.

Coach Turner, in announcing the tourney, said all expenses will be paid for first and second place winners in the tournament. No trophies will be given, he said.

Names of the teams, their opponents and the time of the games' will be announced in Thursday's Morning World. All coaches are urged to mail the lists of their teams and applications to enter the tourney to D. E. Sikes, principal at Columbia High School. These lists must be received not later than Wednesday.

Turner said the twelve teams whose applications are received by Sikes first, would be allowed to compete in the tournament.

The contests will be governed, Turner said, by regulations of district and state basketball rally rules.

Turner, in conclusion, added that the affair is being so arranged that all teams attending the cage tourney will be allowed to play more than one game. Lake Province High School has taken away honors of the first two annual events.

GIRLS OF BASKIN

39, to make the latter take third place in the boys' division.

At the end of the Ouachita-Eros game, J. C. Strickland, principal of O. P. H. S., presented six trophies, one to the first, second, and third place boys and girls in the tournament.

In the semi-finals yesterday afternoon Ouachita beat Calhoun 41 to 24, and Okaloosa was defeated by Eros 29 to 22.

All-tournament honors in the boys division went to two Ouachita boys, Boatright and Bates, receiving gold basketballs from Jase Johnson, as did Stuckey, of Eros. Kilpatrick, of Calhoun and White of Okaloosa.

Receiving all-tournament honors, but not gold basketballs on the second team were Crowell of Eros, Holliday of Columbia, B. Fortenberry of Lake Providence, Shively of Jonesboro Hodge, and Carter of O. P. H. S.

Baskin, the ragged country school of Franklin parish, had not trouble in any of girls' games.

They defeated Choudrant, 59 tot 18, Okaloosa, 63 to 21, Linville, 55 to 24.

Bastrop climbed to the playoff by defeating Forest in the semi-finals, 31 to 27; before that they downed Ouachita, 27 to 21, and in the first game they beat Mangham, 30 to 17.

The officials for the games received commendations from Coach Jim Hodgins and other spectators. It was considered by many as the best called tournament that they had ever seen.

Winning all-tournament honors and gold basketballs were three of Baskin's victory crowned team. They were Baskin, Ragsdale, and Stevens; also receiving the emblems from Jase Johnson were Posey of Bastrop, Tulles of Forest, Welsh of Forest.

The second team which simply won the honors had three girls from Baskin also—Glass, Diggens, and Duchesne; also Brooks of Bastrop, Dugdoll, Choudrant, and Orr of Forest.

REBELS WIN DECISIVE VICTORY IN NCAA FEUD

BALLOTS TO OUST 7 MEMBERS FALL 25 VOTES SHORT

Delegates Reach Decision After Seven Hours Without Lunch; Teams Still In

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The rebel schools which defied the National Colegiate Athletic Association's sanity code won a rousing victory today when a vote to expel them failed of a necessary two-thirds majority.

After nearly seven hours of heated debate, without a stop for lunch, delegates to the association's annual convention voted by secret balot 111 to 93 for expulsion of the seven recalcitrants. This was 25 votes short of the number needed for expulsion.

The seven who gained this partial vindication of their athletic policies were Virginia University, Boston College, Maryland, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Poly, Villanova and The Citadel.

There was a moment of high confusion immediately after the vote was announced when Dr. Karl Leib of Iowa, president of the N. C. A. A., declared "the motion is carried."

The cry went up from the floor "no, no—two-thirds are required."

Upon being shown a copy of the N. C. A. A. constitution, Leib changed to "the action failed," but declined to concede the result was a victory for opponents of the purity code.

"This vote shows merely that the circumstances in this group of cases were not enough to justify the severe penalties contemplated in the aggravated cases of non-compliance," he said.

Immediately after the vote was announced, President H. C. Byrd of Maryland introduced a resolution calling for a special committee to investigate the athletic practices of all member schools and to make a report at next year's meeting. This was passed 87 to 71.

The result of the ballot apparently will not alter the decision of The Citadel, military school at Charleston, S. C., to withdraw from the N. C. A. A. Its official resignation was presented early today.

Col. D. S. McAlester, dean of student activities at The Citadel, said:

"We resigned in December, we resigned again today and we are still resigned although those fellows seem hard to convince. If they had accepted the resignation and not brought us on the floor we probably would have applied for readmission. Now that's out."

Boston College presented new evidence two days ago to show that it now is in compliance with all the rules and regulations governing aid to athletes. Villanova stated, simply, that its president, the Rev. Francis McGuire had not received several letters addressed to him by the policy body, having been on vacation at the time of their arrival.

The three Virginia schools, as well as Maryland, did not back down a foot in their defiant stand.

A clear indication that the accused schools had summoned sufficient support to avoid expulsion came several hours before the decisive vote. An amendment offered by W. A. Alexander, director of athletics at Georgia Tech, to make a three-meal-a-day training table legal was voted down by only 115 to 106.

No action was taken on the bowl committee's six-point recommendation. In the main, it specified that sponsors of post-season games must give competing schools 80 per cent of the gross receipts and allot them one third of the tickets.

A special committee was formed, instead, to compose a set of by-laws in which such items may be incorporated. This is to avoid having to revise the constitution repeatedly.

Bernie Moore, commissioner of the southeastern conference, predicted today's developments would result in a workable code to which the entire membership could conform.

It may call for open athletic scholarships, such as proposed by Virginia, Maryland and some of the other recalcitrants, or it may provide the year-around training table.

Virginia, which had been on the verge of a bolt paralleling the Citadel's action, changed its mind when the resolution passed to give the code a working over.

Of Penn State's 17 basketball players, only four are under the six-foot mark. Tallest is six-seven.

COLUMBIA HIGH SCHOOL WILL BE HOST TO TEAMS

C. H. S. Coach Urges All Teams To Mail Applications In Immediately

COLUMBIA, La., Jan. 14—(Special)—The third annual Columbia high school basketball tournament for teams in the class "B" bracket will get underway here Saturday morning. Twelve teams will compete, Woodrow Turner, Columbia high school coach and athletic director, announced tonight.

The all-boy cage affair, already endorsed by W. L. Colvin, president of the state athletic association, will be staged in the gym of Columbia high school.

Coach Turner, in announcing the tourney, said all expenses will be paid for first and second place winners in the tournament. No trophies will be given, he said.

Names of the teams, their opponents and the time of the games' will be announced in Thursday's Morning World. All coaches are urged to mail the lists of their teams and applications to enter the tourney to D. E. Sikes, principal at Columbia High School. These lists must be received not later than Wednesday.

Turner said the twelve teams whose applications are received by Sikes first, would be allowed to compete in the tournament.

The contests will be governed, Turner said, by regulations of district and state basketball rally rules.

Turner, in conclusion, added that the affair is being so arranged that all teams attending the cage tourney will be allowed to play more than one game. Lake Province High School has taken away honors of the first two annual events.

Baseball Meet Is Set For Tuesday

A preliminary meeting for the reorganization of the Louisiana Delta Baseball League for the 1950 season is slated for Tuesday night, George Sumlin, president, announced today. The meet will be held at the Louisiana Delt Council office at 7:30 p. m.

Representatives of all the League teams are requested to attend, also other teams that are interested in Delta League play.

Officers will be elected and new and old rules will be discussed. Teams participating in the Delta League last year were: Delhi, West Monroe Rebels, West Monroe Vols, Rayville, Mangham, Boeuf River, and Jonesville.

39, to make the latter take third place in the boys' division.

At the end of the Ouachita-Eros game, J. C. Strickland, principal of O. P. H. S., presented six trophies, one to the first, second, and third place boys and girls in the tournament.

In the semi-finals yesterday afternoon Ouachita beat Calhoun 41 to 24, and Okaloosa was defeated by Eros 29 to 22.

All-tournament honors in the boys division went to two Ouachita boys, Boatright and Bates, receiving gold basketballs from Jase Johnson, as did Stuckey, of Eros. Kilpatrick, of Calhoun and White of Okaloosa.

Receiving all-tournament honors, but not gold basketballs on the second team were Crowell of Eros, Holliday of Columbia, B. Fortenberry of Lake Providence, Shively of Jonesboro Hodge, and Carter of O. P. H. S.

Baskin, the ragged country school of Franklin parish, had not trouble in any of girls' games.

They defeated Choudrant, 59 tot 18, Okaloosa, 63 to 21, Linville, 55 to 24.

Bastrop climbed to the playoff by defeating Forest in the semi-finals, 31 to 27, before that they downed Ouachita, 27 to 21, and in the first game they beat Mangham, 30 to 17.

The officials for the games received commendations from Coach Jim Hodgins and other spectators. It was considered by many as the best called tournament that they had ever seen.

Winning all-tournament honors and gold basketballs were three of Baskin's victory crowned team. They were Baskin, Ragsdale, and Stevens; also receiving the emblems from Jase Johnson were Posey of Bastrop, Tulles of Forest, Welsh of Forest.

The second team which simply won the honors had three girls from Baskin also—Glass, Diggens, and Duchesne; also Brooks of Bastrop, Dugdoll, Choudrant, and Orr of Forest.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Radio-television and meat packing stocks took the fancy of buyers today in another surging market.

The direction of prices generally was unpaid but selling was still vigorous enough to limit gains to a point or less—mostly less.

The intense pressure that knocked the market off its feet late Thursday and again yesterday at times, however, seemed to have spent itself.

Trading was fast, especially for a Saturday, although well below Friday, which was the biggest day since May 1948. Turnover hit a rate of around 1,100,000 shares for the two-hour session.

New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Cotton futures were firm today. The new crop months calling for deliveries from October 1950 to May 1951 were in strongest demand. Commission houses were active buyers of distant deliveries with the trade buying nearby contracts. Some of the buying was again said to be covering against export sales, although traders explained that part of the demand also was in anticipation of increased export sales in the near future. Buying of new crop months was based on trade belief that they probably were under the prospective level of the 1950 crop.

Futures closed 35 to 80 cents a bale higher than the previous close.

SMALL CHILDREN DIE IN BLIZZARD

Freeze While Walking After Car Stalled; Father Treated For Frostbite

RITZVILLE, Wash., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two small children, who tried to walk home with their father after the family car stalled on a country road, froze to death in a field yesterday at the height of a howling blizzard.

Sheriff Frank Lucas said the victims were Frederick (Donnie) Stumpf, 6, and his sister, Eileen, 10. The father, Fred Stumpf, was taken to a Ritzville hopsital in serious condition from frostbite.

Lucas said Stumpf was in Ritzville yesterday afternoon when schools were closed at noon. He picked up the children but apparently stayed in town for a time before heading home.

He started out about 3 p.m., the sheriff said. They drove 14 of the 15 miles home when the car stalled on the road in heavy drifts.

Lucas said Stumpf and the children got out and started across the field.

"When they are covered about half the distance, the boy dropped out,' Lucas. "A little farther on, the girl dropped out. The father kept going for help at home.

"When he got within shouting distance, he aroused his wife. She tried to get help.

"There was a crew out looking for a missing school bus. When it came by the Stumpf home, the yard light was blinking off and on in an S-O-S signal. The crew stopped and got the details.

"We sent a bulldozer out right body. We found the boy's body about 3 a.m. We found the girl's body about 300 yards from where her brother died."

Lucas said a snow-covered blanket was found near where little Donnie lay.

The school bus carrying nine children was lost in drifts from 1 p.m. until near midnight. It was found and all the children aboard were safe although there was some frost bite, Lucas said.

Propose New Method Of Choosing President

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A Louisiana proposal for changing the method of electing the president and vice-president of the United States is under consideration by the National League of Women Voters.

Mrs. A. Dent Tisdale, president of the Louisiana League of Women Voters, said here today that the Louisiana League, at a state board meeting in Lafayette a few months ago, recommended to the national organization that the electoral college be eliminated and that the electoral votes be cast in proportion to voters polled.

Whether the national league will choose to work on this proposal on national basis will be decided at the spring convention in Atlantic City, Mrs. Tisdale said.

"There is always the danger," Mrs. Tisdale told interviewers "that the electors will defy public opinion and vote independently."

Other reasons she listed for changing the present law, which would have to be done by constitutional amendment, include the fact that "it is possible under the present system of casting all of a state's electoral votes for the winning candidate that a president with a minority of popular votes in the nation as a whole can be elected."

HYDROGEN ATOM DECISION NEAR

Administration To Decide If Super-Bomb Will Be Developed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Truman administration today is nearing a momentous decision on whether to put the hydrogen atom to work toward development of a super-bomb far surpassing even the latest atomic weapons.

The project has taken on urgency from the disquieting knowledge that Russia also may be working desperately toward the same goal.

Scientists explained that the basic knowledge and theory for a hydrogen bomb is not an exclusive American weapon. It is widely known in other countries.

A committee which has been quietly studying the desirability of such a project since last October is understood to be almost at the point of recommending that the government undertake it.

The whole subject of a "hydrogen" bomb is surrounded by a deep and pervading official silence.

The unofficial speculation that has grown up around this official silence during recent weeks does not attempt to estimate the cost of developing a super-bomb. But the cost would be great.

Strangely, the idea of producing a hydrogen explosion is older than the theory of the fission explosion of uranium and plutonium as in A-bombs.

Attention is being given by scientists to experiments started by English physicists back in 1932, invloving the use of lithium and hydrogen. Lithium is a silver-white element of the Alkali family, an extremely light metal.

Until now, the theory of a Lithium-hydrogen bomb has encountered the obstacle that a chain reaction (which would produce explosion), could be possible only if the compound was subjected, and the reaction started, in a temperature of millions of degrees.

But the conventional A-bomb could produce the required heat to explode the lithium-hydrogen charge. The heat of a conventional U-235 type bomb is measurable in "thousands of millions of degrees."

There has been talk—including comment by Senator Johnson (D-Colo.)—that bombs 1,000 times more powerful than present atomic weapons were being developed. The area of devastation produced by such a bomb has been officially guessed at 40 square miles, far beyond the destructive scope of atomic bombs.

Its use could be only for mass destruction of places and people. It would not be "selective" enough to use in the battlefield against enemy troops. The zone of death might reach out to embrace friendly forces.

Stunned 16-Year-Old Bride Records Death Of Husband

FORT BENNING, Ga., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A stunned, 16-year-old bride of 11 days noted in a travel-worn Bible today that her husband and 12 others died in the crash of an airforce glider.

Mrs. Betty Smith, wife of Private Gordon Smith, 23, of Columbus, Ga., note simply that her husband and the others were "killed, Friday, Jan. 13, 1950."

The Bible was a gift from her husband which he obtained in Italy during the war while serving with the navy.

Meanwhile, a seven-man board was convened at Lawson Airbase by Major Richard O. Johnson, commanding officer, to determine the cause of the crash which also left four men critically injured.

None of the injured could testify. Each was unconscious in a hospital here.

While the board met to write an official end to the aftermath of the accident, a memorial service for the 13 dead was scheduled for the Infantry Training Center at 4 p.m. Monday.

The service will be attended by all the pomp and circumstance with which the army honors its dead.

Eleven of the victims were student paratroopers. They were scheduled to make their final jump today and then receive the coveted insignia of the men who drop to war on silk.

The others killed were a sergeant instructor and the pilot, 2nd Lt. Robert D. Henley of Columbia, Mo.

The glider crashed unaccountably yesterday while approaching Lawson Field to land.

Louisiana Oil And Gas News

Oil Activity In Section Held To Three Producesr

Last week's oil activity in northeast Louisiana fields were held down to the completion of three new oil producers, the abandonment of another well, and the siting of only three new locations, the conservation department's weekly report showed here yesterday.

No new gas wells were brought in.

The West Catahoula Lake field in LaSalle parish claimed two of the three new oilers. They were:

The H. L. Hunt Co.—Nebo Oil Co., Inc.'s No. F-162 in 35-7-3E, gauged at 152 barrels at 4,284 feet, and the H. L. Hunt Co.-Nebo Oil Co., Inc.'s F-177 in 33-7-3E, gauged at 176 barrels at 4,397 feet.

The other oil yielder was unearthed in a wildcat field in Union parish. It was: The Zach Brooks Drilling Company's D. Nelson No. 1 in 29-23-3W and was gauged at 114 barrels at 9,800 feet.

The H. L. Hunt Company-Nebo Co., Inc. abandoned their A-52 in 9-7-3E ir. the Nebo Hemphill field, LaSalle parish, at 4,150 feet.

The week's new locations included:

Catahoula parish, wildcat field: W. O. Woodward, Trustee-Woodie C. Fairbanks, et al, No. 1 in 23-7-6E.

Concordia parish, Vidalia field: Kemp Drilling Co., Inc. and Walter Duncan, Jr.-Mrs. S. G. Smith, et al, No. 1 in 14-7-10E.

LaSalle parish, Tullos field: Pan-American Production Co.-Urania Lumber Company Core Test 3 in 12-10-1E.

Allowable Trouble May Come Forth At Meeting

By Max B. Skelton

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Texas takes another look at its crude oil production allowables Tuesday. There is indication the statewide hearing here will be packed with oratory.

Flush supply, foreign imports, and, perhaps, the big Scurry county oil boom, appears to be in for verbal lashings.

Such a situation would be in sharp contrast with the last dozen or so proration hearings held by the Texas Railroad Commission, an oil and gas regulatory body.

Little excitment accompanied the 1949 monthly meetings that resulted in cutbacks primarily responsible for the nation's daily crude output dropping from about 5,600,000 barrels to below 5,000,000.

Several items this week began supplying the background for a rather lengthy and controversial Tuesday morning.

The items included:

1. The state comptroller, blaming decreases in oil taxes, said Texas spending at current rates will be $26,000,000 in the red by September 1951.

2. Talk of increased natural resources taxes grew as Governor Allan Shivers selected January 31 as the date he will call the legislature into special session to consider emergency financial matters.

3. William J. Murray, chairman of the railroad commission, said foreign oil imports are endangering Texas' economy. He announced plans to appoint a citizens' committee, with University of Texas President T. S. Painter, as co-chairman, to study the problem.

4. The railroad commission was successful in getting Premier Oil Refining Company to withdraw until January 19—two days after next week's hearing—its plans to curtail its crude oil purchases in west central Texas by 60 percent.

Premier's plans involve only about 5,400 barrels of oil daily, but a quick protest came from the West Central Oil and Gas Association.

Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson, in arranging the postponement, expressed hope another purchaser can be found here Tuesday.

Some oilmen believe this leaves the way open for a thorough discussion of how heavy production in Scurry county, the nation's biggest oil boom area in nearly 20 years, is affecting the overall supply-demand situation.

Competition from the flush, high quality Scurry crude is becoming stronger.

Onyx Refining Company last week made a 7-cent per barrel downward adjustment in its west central Texas purchase price and said it had to do so to meet Scurry prices.

Onyx' purchases are comparatively small—about 16,000 barrels daily—but some oilmen fear the big allowables being received by Scurry wells may cause the price cutback to spread.

The railroad commission, by law, has no control over prices and its members try to keep price talk out of the statewide hearings.

Once in a while, however, oilmen feel there is no harm in trying.

Texas crude production last week dropped 48,300 barrels to a daily average of 1,956,000, compared to approximately 2,425,000 a year earlier.

The Texas drop paced a domestic slump of 68,800 barrels that cut the nation's output to 4,926,700 barrels daily. A year earlier production average 5,507,650.

Monroe District Boasts Half Louisiana's Gas Wells

More than half Louisiana's producing gas wells are located in the Monroe conservation district, a survey of Department of Conservation records shows. The survey, made by the Louisiana-Arkansas Division of Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, lists 1,491 producing gassers in the Monroe district, with another 165 inactive.

Louisiana has 2,526 producing gas wells and 591 inactive, the association said.

Only one out of every four producing oil wells in the Monroe area is making crude by natural flow. The district has 962 wells on pump, against 342 flowing wells, 36 on gas lift and 54 inactive. The state-wide average in Louisiana is one flowing well to every two produced by artificial means. Nationally, 88 per cent of the oil wells are producing by pumping.

State-wide figures, as compiled by the association from department records, show:

3,090 flowing oil wells.
5,350 on pump.
835 on gas lift.
924 inactive at time of reports included in the association survey.

2,526 producing gas wells and 591 inactive.

The fact that so many wells are producing by pump or gas lift is not detrimental; there are many oil wells, particularly in north Louisiana, which have been producing for 20 years and on pump nearly all that time. However, the number of wells produced by artificial means is an indication of the investment in equipment, services and manpower required to secure this oil. In low-production areas there is a constant battle to keep operating costs at a point which will permit a modest profit.

Even south Louisiana, which has more wells producing by natural low than those on pump or gas lift, has its problems. While production costs per barrel may not be as high as on pumping wells, the depth of south Louisiana wells makes them so expensive to drill that natural flow is only partical compensation for the high cost of finding the oil.

By conservation districts, the association survey lists:

Houma—513 flowing oil wells, 118 on pump, 221 on gas lift, 170 inactive; 74 producing gas wells, 63 inactive.

Lafayette—764 flowing, 215 on pump, 320 gas lift, 180 inactive; 279 producing gas wells, 125 inactive.

Lake Charles—482 flowing, 195 on pump, 202 gas lift, 355 inactive; 97 producing was wells, 67 inactive.

Monroe—342 flowing, 962 on pump, 36 gas lift, 54 inactive; 1,491 gas wells, 67 inactive.

New Orleans—717 flowing, 10 on pump, 56 gas lift, 180 inactive; 29 producing gas wells, 41 inactive.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Radio-television and meat packing stocks took the fancy of buyers today in another surging market.

The direction of prices generally was unpaid but selling was still vigorous enough to limit gains to a point or less—mostly less.

The intense pressure that knocked the market off its feet late Thursday and again yesterday at times, however, seemed to have spent itself.

Trading was fast, especially for a Saturday, although well below Friday, which was the biggest day since May 1948. Turnover hit a rate of around 1,100,000 shares for the two-hour session.

New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Cotton futures were firm today. The new crop months calling for deliveries from October 1950 to May 1951 were in strongest demand. Commission houses were active buyers of distant deliveries with the trade buying nearby contracts. Some of the buying was again said to be covering against export sales, although traders explained that part of the demand also was in anticipation of increased export sales in the near future. Buying of new crop months was based on trade belief that they probably were under the prospective level of the 1950 crop.

Futures closed 35 to 80 cents a bale higher than the previous close.

BLAZING WELL SEEN FOR MILES

SMALL CHILDREN DIE IN BLIZZARD

Freeze While Walking After Car Stalled; Father Treated For Frostbite

RITZVILLE, Wash., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two small children, who tried to walk home with their father after the family car stalled on a country road, froze to death in a field yesterday at the height of a howling blizzard.

Sheriff Frank Lucas said the victims were Frederick (Donnie) Stumpf, 6, and his sister, Eileen, 10. The father, Fred Stumpf, was taken to a Ritzville hopsital in serious condition from frostbite.

Lucas said Stumpf was in Ritzville yesterday afternoon when schools were closed at noon. He picked up the children but apparently stayed in town for a time before heading home.

He started out about 3 p.m., the sheriff said. They drove 14 of the 15 miles home when the car stalled on the road in heavy drifts.

Lucas said Stumpf and the children got out and started across the field.

"When they are covered about half the distance, the boy dropped out," Lucas. "A little farther on, the girl dropped out. The father kept going for help at home.

"When he got within shouting distance, he aroused his wife. She tried to get help.

"There was a crew out looking for a missing school bus. When it came by the Stumpf home, the yard light was blinking off and on in an S-O-S signal. The crew stopped and got the details.

"We sent a bulldozer out right body. We found the boy's body about 3 a.m. We found the girl's body about noon 300 yards from where her brother died."

Lucas said a snow-covered blanket was found near where little Donnie lay.

The school bus carrying nine children was lost in drifts from 1 p.m. until near midnight. It was found and all the children aboard were safe although there was some frost bite, Lucas said.

Propose New Method Of Choosing President

ALEXANDRIA, La., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A Louisiana proposal for changing the method of electing the president and vice-president of the United States is under consideration by the National League of Women Voters.

Mrs. A. Dent Tisdale, president of the Louisiana League of Women Voters, said here today that the Louisiana League, at a state board meeting in Lafayette a few months ago, recommended to the national organization that the electoral college be eliminated and that the electoral votes be cast in proportion to voters polled.

Whether the national league will choose to work on this proposal on national basis will be decided at the spring convention in Atlantic City, Mrs. Tisdale said.

"There is always the danger," Mrs. Tisdale told interviewers "that the electors will defy public opinion and vote independently."

Other reasons she listed for changing the present law, which would have to be done by constitutional amendment, include the fact that "it is possible under the present system of casting all of a state's electoral votes for the winning candidate that a president with a minority of popular votes in the nation as a whole can be elected."

HYDROGEN ATOM DECISION NEAR

Administration To Decide If Super-Bomb Will Be Developed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Truman administration today is nearing a momentous decision on whether to put the hydrogen atom to work toward development of a super-bomb far surpassing even the latest atomic weapons.

The project has taken on urgency from the disquieting knowledge that Russia also may be working desperately toward the same goal.

Scientists explained that the basic knowledge and theory for a hydrogen bomb is not an exclusive American weapon. It is widely known in other countries.

A committee which has been quietly studying the desirability of such a project since last October is understood to be almost at the point of recommending that the government undertake it.

The whole subject of a "hydrogen" bomb is surrounded by a deep and pervading official silence.

The unofficial speculation that has grown up around this official silence during recent weeks does not attempt to estimate the cost of developing a super-bomb. But the cost would be great.

Strangely, the idea of producing a hydrogen explosion is older than the theory of the fission explosion of uranium and plutonium as in A-bombs.

Attention is being given by scientists to experiments started by English physicists back in 1932, invloving the use of lithium and hydrogen. Lithium is a silver-white element of the Alkali family, an extremely light metal.

Until now, the theory of a Lithium-hydrogen bomb has encountered the obstacle that a chain reaction (which would produce explosion), could be possible only if the compound was subjected, and the reaction started, in a temperature of millions of degrees.

But the conventional A-bomb could produce the required heat to explode the lithium-hydrogen charge. The heat of a conventional U-235 type bomb is measurable in "thousands of millions of degrees."

There has been talk—including comment by Senator Johnson (D-Colo.)—that bombs 1,000 times more powerful than present atomic weapons were being developed. The area of devastation produced by such a bomb has been officially guessed at 40 square miles, far beyond the destructive scope of atomic bombs.

Its use could be only for mass destruction of places and people. It would not be "selective" enough to use in the battlefield against enemy troops. The zone of death might reach out to embrace friendly forces.

Stunned 16-Year-Old Bride Records Death Of Husband

FORT BENNING, Ga., Jan. 14.—(AP)—A stunned, 16-year-old bride of 11 days noted in a travel-worn Bible today that her husband and 12 others died in the crash of an airforce glider.

Mrs. Betty Smith, wife of Private Gordon Smith, 23, of Columbus, Ga., note simply that her husband and the others were "killed, Friday, Jan. 13, 1950."

The Bible was a gift from her husband which he obtained in Italy during the war while serving with the navy.

Meanwhile, a seven-man board was convened at Lawson Airbase by Major Richard O. Johnson, commanding officer, to determine the cause of the crash which also left four men critically injured.

None of the injured could testify. Each was unconscious in a hospital here.

While the board met to write an official end to the aftermath of the accident, a memorial service for the 13 dead was scheduled for the Infantry Training Center at 4 p.m. Monday.

The service will be attended by all the pomp and circumstance with which the army honors its dead.

Eleven of the victims were student paratroopers. They were scheduled to make their final jump today and then receive the coveted insignia of the men who drop to war on silk.

The others killed were a sergeant instructor and the pilot, 2nd Lt. Robert D. Henley of Columbia, Mo.

The glider crashed unaccountably yesterday while approaching Lawson Field to land.

Allowable Trouble May Come Forth At Meeting

By Max B. Skelton

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Texas takes another look at its crude oil production allowables Tuesday. There is indication the statewide hearing here will be packed with oratory.

Flush supply, foreign imports, and, perhaps, the big Scurry county oil boom, appears to be in for verbal lashings.

Such a situation would be in sharp contrast with the last dozen or so proration hearings held by the Texas Railroad Commission, an oil and gas regulatory body.

Little excitment accompanied the 1949 monthly meetings that resulted in cutbacks primarily responsible for the nation's daily crude output dropping from about 5,600,000 barrels to below 5,000,000.

Several items this week began supplying the background for a rather lengthy and controversial Tuesday morning.

The items included:

1. The state comptroller, blaming decreases in oil taxes, said Texas spending at current rates will be $26,000,000 in the red by September 1951.

2. Talk of increased natural resources taxes grew as Governor Allan Shivers selected January 31 as the date he will call the legislature into special session to consider emergency financial matters.

3. William J. Murray, chairman of the railroad commission, said foreign oil imports are endangering Texas' economy. He announced plans to appoint a citizens' committee, with University of Texas President T. S. Painter, as co-chairman, to study the problem.

4. The railroad commission was successful in getting Premier Oil Refining Company to withdraw until January 19—two days after next week's hearing—its plans to curtail its crude oil purchases in west central Texas by 60 percent.

Premier's plans involve only about 5,400 barrels of oil daily, but a quick protest came from the West Central Oil and Gas Association.

Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson, in arranging the postponement, expressed hope another purchaser can be found here Tuesday.

Some oilmen believe this leaves the way open for a thorough discussion of how heavy production in Scurry county, the nation's biggest oil boom area in nearly 20 years, is affecting the overall supply-demand situation.

Competition from the flush, high quality Scurry crude is becoming stronger.

Onyx Refining Company last week made a 7-cent per barrel downward adjustment in its west central Texas purchase price and said it had to do so to meet Scurry prices.

Onyx' purchases are comparatively small—about 16,000 barrels daily—but some oilmen fear the big allowables being received by Scurry wells may cause the price cutback to spread.

The railroad commission, by law, has no control over prices and its members try to keep price talk out of the statewide hearings.

Once in a while, however, oilmen feel there is no harm in trying.

Texas crude production last week dropped 48,300 barrels to a daily average of 1,956,000, compared to approximately 2,425,000 a year earlier.

The Texas drop paced a domestic slump of 68,800 barrels that cut the nation's output to 4,926,700 barrels daily. A year earlier production average 5,507,650.

Monroe District Boasts Half Louisiana's Gas Wells

More than half Louisiana's producing gas wells are located in the Monroe conservation district, a survey of Department of Conservation records shows. The survey, made by the Louisiana-Arkansas Division of Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, lists 1,491 producing gassers in the Monroe district, with another 165 inactive.

Louisiana has 2,526 producing gas wells and 591 inactive, the association said.

Only one out of every four producing oil wells in the Monroe area is making crude by natural flow. The district has 962 wells on pump, against 342 flowing wells, 36 on gas lift and 54 inactive. The state-wide average in Louisiana is one flowing well to every two produced by artificial means. Nationally, 88 per cent of the oil wells are producing by pumping.

State-wide figures, as compiled by the association from department records, show:

3,090 flowing oil wells.
5,350 on pump.
835 on gas lift.
924 inactive at time of reports included in the association survey.
2,526 producing gas wells and 591 inactive.

The fact that so many wells are producing by pump or gas lift is not detrimental; there are many oil wells, particularly in north Louisiana, which have been producing for 20 years and on pump nearly all that time. However, the number of wells produced by artificial means is an indication of the investment in equipment, services and manpower required to secure this oil. In low-production areas there is a constant battle to keep operating costs at a point which will permit a modest profit.

Even south Louisiana, which has more wells producing by natural low than those on pump or gas lift, has its problems. While production costs per barrel may not be as high as on pumping wells, the depth of south Louisiana wells makes them so expensive to drill that natural flow is only partical compensation for the high cost of finding the oil.

By conservation districts, the association survey lists:

Houma—513 flowing oil wells, 118 on pump, 221 on gas lift, 170 inactive; 74 producing gas wells, 63 inactive.

Lafayette—764 flowing, 215 on pump, 320 gas lift, 180 inactive; 279 producing gas wells, 125 inactive.

Lake Charles—482 flowing, 195 on pump, 202 gas lift, 355 inactive; 97 producing was wells, 67 inactive.

Monroe—342 flowing, 962 on pump, 36 gas lift, 54 inactive; 1,491 gas wells, 67 inactive.

New Orleans—717 flowing, 10 on pump, 56 gas lift, 180 inactive; 29 producing gas wells, 41 inactive.

A BIG-PAYING BUSINESS
For a Man in His 50's
All over the U. S. middle-aged men are discovering the biggest earnings of their lives. They are enjoying the type of on-the-job satisfaction few men ever achieve. One of our men makes $11,000 in a year . . . other top men in their 50's are earning from $5,000 to $8,000 right from the start.
We want a man for this area and prefer someone in his 50's. The right man can enjoy long-range security with us. Our business is particularly suited to calm, mature dealings with refined people. (No high pressure.)
We pay earnings in advance and require no investment. If you are over 50 write me a letter and get full information about the opening in the Monroe area. VICE-PRESIDENT, Dept. C., P. O. Box 676.

WALLY FOWLER APPEARING HERE

Will Be Heard With His Famous Oak Ridge Quartet Aggregation

Wally Fowler, your all night singing man, originally from Nashville, Tennessee, with his famous Oak Ridge Quartet, will be presented in an all-night singing and concert of gospel music at the Ouachita Parish High School auditorium on anuary 20, at 8 to 12 p. m.

Wally Fowler originated his Oak Ridge Quartet in Knoxville, Tenn., six years ago, and did special service work for native Oak Ridge, Tenn., for almost a year, and then made a move to Nashville, radio station WSM, and Grand Old Opry. They have been a regular feature on WSM, and The Prince Albert NBC portion of the famous Grand Ole Opry for almost five years.

While singing "Dese Bones A 'Gwinna Rise Agin" on the Grand Ole Opry one night, this quartet tied up the NBC network with a whole minute of applause. This caused such remarks as "They're a musical bombshell." That bombshell is still exploding everywhere in the United States that they appear. They are one of the friendliest to appear before an audience. They are famous for such songs as: "Lead Me To That Rock," "On The Jericho Road," "Everybody's Gonna Have a Wonderful Time Up There" and other Negro spiritual songs.

Wally Fowler originated the ALL NITE SINGING at the Ryman auditorium in Nashville. Folks from all over the nation attend this program. Wally Fowler says that all quartets, trios, soloists, and singers from Monroe and the surrounding churches, schools, and organizations have a special invitation to appear and sing in person on this ALL NITE PROGRAM. Anyone desiring to appear, please phone 6595-J, giving your name, or the name of your group, so as to be scheduled on the program.

Appearing in person with Wally Fowler will be the famous Rangers' quartet, network and recording artists, from Raleigh, North Carolina, featuring the world's lowest bass singer, Arnold Hyles, and one of the world's highest tenor singers, Denver Crumpled. This group has appeared in almost every state in the nation and has received great applause and is considered one of the most outstanding quartets of gospel music throughout the nation.

In addition to these quartets, there will be some eight or ten other quartets from surrounding areas. You can't miss it! If you miss this program, you have missed the program of the year, this being the first program of its kind to appear in Monroe. We will be looking forward to seeing you at the appointed time.

Mysterious 'Sea Elephant' Is Found To Be Baby Whale

SUEZ, Egypt, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The mysterious "Sea Eelephant' of Suez turned out today to be a young whale which strayed from its mother's side and tried to hitch-hike on a passing ship until it missed up with the propeller.

Egyptian scientists agreed that two elephant-like tusks on the mammal, spewed up in a storm 10 days ago, were only broken jaw bones protruding from a fatal wound suffered by the young whale when it became tangled with the propeller of a ship.

Nobody wanted the whale, believed to have strayed from the Indian Ocean. Scientists at the Alexandria Aquarium turned up their noses, and the baby mammal was committed back to the Red Sea which had given it up to the Suez shore.

The scentists said they already had a whale twice as big as the 37-foot long baby, and besides this one didn't smell too well. Suez shore residents, delighted at first with the notoriety brought by the unknown monster, agreed.

There was a general sigh of relief when workers butchered the whale in sections in a disposal operation. Even they paused every few minutes for a breath of fresh air.

The story of the adventurous whale, gradually pieced together, indicated that sometime last November, lured by the wake of a passing ship, it succumbed to wanderlust and deserted its home and family.

In its new found freedom it nosed too close to the ship's propeller and was reportedly killed instantly.

A Norwegian ship, the Cornelius Maersh, reported it struck a floating body 80 miles out of Suez around the turn of the year.

But some mystery still remained. Though the scientist identified it as a common Indian Ocean whale, Professor Ali Ibrahim Isa said it was the Greenland type ordinarily living in northern waters.

MICHAEL MORA TO ADDRESS JAYCEES

Chosen Guest At Annual Banquet When Outstanding Man Will Be Announced

Michael Mora, 54, executive director of the International House in New Orleans, will be guest speaker at the Junior Chamber of Commerce's annual boss' banquet at 7:30 p.m. Monday night when their distinguished service award is presented the Twin Cities' most outstanding young man for 1949.

The award, made each year by Monroe and West Monroe Jaycees on the basis of achievement, leadership and service to the community will be presented by the chairman of the judging committee.

Five citizens, all non-members of the Jaycees, will be designated as judges who select the most outstanding young man from nominations made before January 6th. Names of the judges will be announced Monday night.

The winner of the distinguished award will not be made public until the night of the banquet held at the Rendezvous.

In 1948 District Attorney Fred Fudickar, Jr., was given the signal honor.

Mora, who served as consulate general of Poland in New York from 1925 to 1929, is an internationally renowned speaker of Polish descent. He was born and educated in St. Petersburg, Russia.

In 1940, he became a naturalized American citizen, having come to this country in 1918.

The speaker's name and affiliations appear in the International "Who's Who" along with a biographical sketch of the varied and worldly positions held by him.

For four years he served as vice-president of the Foreign Trade Securities Co., Ltd., with offices in New York, Paris and Berlin.

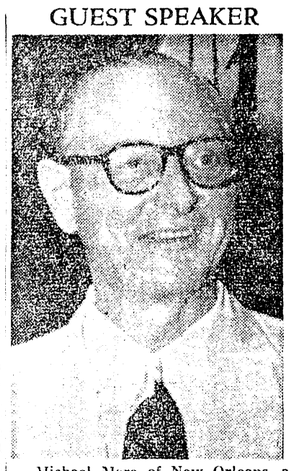

Since April of 1946 he has been world trade development director for the International House in New Orleans. In addition he is chairman of the Foreign Trade Instruction committee of the Joseph A. Maybin Import-Export Institution in New Orleans.

Jaycees are inviting their boss' to the banquet as their guests, according to Charles Regan, president. He added that a limited number of reservations were still available to members and those planning to attend the banquet should call the Chamber of Commerce office immediately.

Runaway Boy Cheered By Crowd, Held By Cops

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Johnny Guthrie got a hero's welcome when he returned here tonight. But it was short-lived, for the police were also waiting for him.

Johnny is the 14-year-old lad who stole out of Arbroath Harbor for a solo cruise aboard the fishing ship Girl Jean Wednesday. He was spotted some 200 miles out in the stormy North Sea yesterday. Rescuers found him seasick and miserable in the hold of the vessel.

Crowds kept at a distance by barriers cheered and sounded horns and sirens. Floodlights, flares and camera bulbs lit up the scene.

But it wasn't all bright lights. Soon after the docking of the Girl Jean and the trawler Reptonian, which accompanied her back to harbor, Johnny went with a policeman to the Aberdeen station.

When the ship berthed, Johnny was in the wheel house beside the captain. He was hoisted over the rail by two detectives and when he left in a police car he was crying.

His parents followed in another car, with the owner of the Girl Jean.

When the Girl Jean disappeared from her pier at Arbroath Johnny's bicycle was found nearby. It was easy for authorities to deduce that boy and ship sailed out of the harbor together.

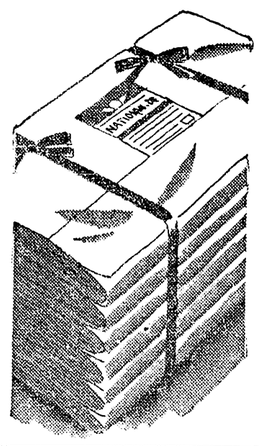

Johnny was remembered as a lad who had stowed away on the 50-foot Girl Jean once before. And he always was hanging around the harbor because of his love for the sea and the ships.

Mysterious 'Sea Elephant' Is Found To Be Baby Whale

SUEZ, Egypt, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The mysterious "Sea Eelephant' of Suez turned out today to be a young whale which strayed from its mother's side and tried to hitch-hike on a passing ship until it missed up with the propeller.

Egyptian scientists agreed that two elephant-like tusks on the mammal, spewed up in a storm 10 days ago, were only broken jaw bones protruding from a fatal wound suffered by the young whale when it became tangled with the propeller of a ship.

Nobody wanted the whale, believed to have strayed from the Indian Ocean. Scientists at the Alexandria Aquarium turned up their noses, and the baby mammal was committed back to the Red Sea which had given it up to the Suez shore.

The scentists said they already had a whale twice as big as the 37-foot long baby, and besides this one didn't smell too well. Suez shore residents, delighted at first with the notoriety brought by the unknown monster, agreed.

There was a general sigh of relief when workers butchered the whale in sections in a disposal operation. Even they paused every few minutes for a breath of fresh air.

The story of the adventurous whale, gradually pieced together, indicated that sometime last November, lured by the wake of a passing ship, it succumbed to wanderlust and deserted its home and family.

In its new found freedom it nosed too close to the ship's propeller and was reportedly killed instantly.

A Norwegian ship, the Cornelius Maersh, reported it struck a floating body 80 miles out of Suez around the turn of the year.

But some mystery still remained. Though the scientist identified it as a common Indian Ocean whale, Professor All Ibrahim Isa said it was the Greenland type ordinarily living in northern waters.

Runaway Boy Cheered By Crowd, Held By Cops

ABERDEEN, Scotland, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Johnny Guthrie got a hero's welcome when he returned here tonight. But it was short-lived, for the police were also waiting for him.

Johnny is the 14-year-old lad who stole out of Arbroath Harbor for a solo cruise aboard the fishing ship Girl Jean Wednesday. He was spotted some 200 miles out in the stormy North Sea yesterday. Rescuers found him seasick and miserable in the hold of the vessel.

Crowds kept at a distance by barriers cheered and sounded horns and sirens. Floodlights, flares and camera bulbs lit up the scene.

But it wasn't all bright lights. Soon after the docking of the Girl Jean and the trawler Reptonian, which accompanied her back to harbor, Johnny went with a policeman to the Aberdeen station.

When the ship berthed, Johnny was in the wheel house beside the captain. He was hoisted over the rail by two detectives and when he left in a police car he was crying.

His parents followed in another car, with the owner of the Girl Jean.

When the Girl Jean disappeared from her pier at Arbroath Johnny's bicycle was found nearby. It was easy for authorities to deduce that boy and ship sailed out of the harbor together.

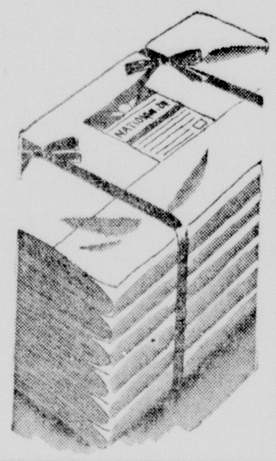

Johnny was remembered as a lad who had stowed away on the 50-foot Girl Jean once before. And he always was hanging around the harbor because of his love for the sea and the ships.

MISS AGNES MILLER BECOMES BRIDE OF THOMAS A. NELSON

At a ceremony characterized by simple dignity and beauty, Miss Agnes Miller of Waterproof, La., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David F. Miller, exchanged marriage vows with Mr. Thomas Alfred Nelson of Lake Providence, Louisiana, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson.

The marriage was solemnized at 4:00 o'clock p. m. in the St. Joseph's Catholic Church, St. Joseph, La., with Rev. Father John P. Quinn officiating.

The bridal couple exchanged the vows of the impressive double ring service before the altar which was beautifully decorated with white gladioli, chrysanthemums and fern. The crib showing the scene of the Nativity erected near the altar added further beauty to the sacred edifice.

A program of nuptial music was rendered at the organ by Mrs. Thomas M. Wade, III, and accompanied Miss Patsy Roberson, as she sang "On This Day, O' Beautiful Mother" and "Mother at Your Feet is Kneeling."

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Mr. David F. Miller, was lovely in a bridal gown of illustrous bridal satin, tight fitted at the waist and forming a long train at the back. Her veil of illusion was caught with seed pearls and fell the full length of her train. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of lilies of the valley, built on imported spangled maline with satin streamers, in the center of which was a white orchid.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Billy Sutton, of Gibsland, La., was wearing a deep pink taffeta made with a full skirt with portrait neckline. Her bouquet was deep pink carnations and daisies with matching tone flower hat. The bridesmaids were Mrs. John Anders, of Ferriday, La., sister of the bride and Miss Emmie Lou Miller, of Waterproof, La., niece of the bride. Their dresses were styled similarly to that of the matron of honor in deep shades of orchid, and carried bouquets of matching carnations and daisies with matching flower hats.

Little Miss Paula Ann Miller, of St. Joseph, La., niece of the bride, was the flower girl. Her gown was of blue taffeta, made along lines similar to those of the other attendants.

Mr. Highland Nelson, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were Mr. Ed Miller and Mr. Brown Nelson.

Mrs. Nelson, mother of the groom was attired in a lovely black crepe dress with pink accessories. Her corsage was pink split carnations.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Burton L. Wade. The home was beautifully decorated with white snapd agons, carnations, stock and candytuft. The bride's table was covered with an embroidered linen table cloth, using as a center piece a three tiered wedding cake, topped with a cornucopia filled with lilies of the valley. Around the base was an arrangement of greenery, all in keeping with the green and white bridal motif. Compotes of nuts and mints were also used to complete the lovely bridal setting. The crystal punch bowls were on the long table at the far end of the living room. Mrs. John Anders, and Mrs. Billy Sutton acted as hostesses at the punch table. Assisting in extending courtesies during the reception were Mrs. David Miller, Mrs. Fred Miller, Mrs. Calvin Mack, Major Emily Miller, Mrs. Hugh Roberson, Mrs. Dalton Miller and Mrs. Kate L. Wade.

The bride's bouquet was caught by Miss Emie Lou Miller.

After the reception the bridal couple left for a wedding trip, after which they will be located in McGee, Ark. For the going away outfit, the bride wore a dark green two-piece wool suit, with brown accessories. She was wearing a white orchid corsage.

Notes From Children's Book Shop

Does your child own a biography of America's finest gentleman, Robert E. Lee? The 19th of this month is the birthday of Lee. Why not celebrate it by giving your boy or girl a book about the great Southern general? The Children's Bookshop has two biographies — one, "Boy Of Old Virginia," is a story of Lee's boyhood up to the time of his leaving home for West Point; the other story, "The Lees Of Arlington," tells of Mary Custis Lee and Robert E. Lee in their home life at Arlington, with the last chapter a brief after-the-war digest.

And, speaking of Lees, Monroe's young novelist, Hillyer Speed Lamkin, had a great grandfather on one side of the family who was a Lee. Speed Lamkin's book, "Tiger In The Garden," is announced in this month's "Retail Bookseller" which classes it as "a mature story with lots of interest. Good!" "Tiger In The Garden" will be on sale at CHILDREN'S BOOKSHOP from February 7th on.

Story hour at 10:00 o'clock next Saturday morning will be for children 5 - 10 years old — a funny story, or maybe TWO funny stories. (adv.)

The home was beautifully decorated with white snapd agons, carnations, stock and candytuft. The bride's table was covered with an embroidered linen table cloth, using as a center piece a three tiered wedding cake, topped with a cornucopia filled with lilies of the valley. Around the base was an arrangement of greenery, all in keeping with the green and white bridal motif. Compotes of nuts and mints were also used to complete the lovely bridal setting. The crystal punch bowls were on the long table at the far end of the living room. Mrs. John Anders, and Mrs. Billy Sutton acted as hostesses at the punch table. Assisting in extending courtesies during the reception were Mrs. David Miller, Mrs. Fred Miller, Mrs. Calvin Mack, Major Emily Miller, Mrs. Hugh Roberson, Mrs. Dalton Miller and Mrs. Kate L. Wade.

The bride's bouquet was caught by Miss Emie Lou Miller.

Notes From Children's Book Shop

Does your child own a biography of America's finest gentleman, Robert E. Lee? The 19th of this month is the birthday of Lee. Why not celebrate it by giving your boy or girl a book about the great Southern general? The Children's Bookshop has two biographies—one, "Boy Of Old Virginia," is a story of Lee's boyhood up to the time of his leaving home for West Point; the other story, "The Lees Of Arlington," tells of Mary Custis Lee and Robert E. Lee in their home life at Arlington, with the last chapter a brief after-the-war digest.

And, speaking of Lees, Monroe's young novelist, Hillyer Speed Lamkin, had a great grandfather on one side of the family who was a Lee. Speed Lamkin's book, "Tiger In The Garden," is announced in this month's "Retail Bookseller" which classes it as "a mature story with lots of interest. Good!" "Tiger In The Garden" will be on sale at CHILDREN'S BOOKSHOP from February 7th on.

Story hour at 10:00 o'clock next Saturday morning will be for children 5-10 years old—a funny story, or maybe TWO funny stories. (adv.)

CATHOLIC DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA HEAR MONSIGNOR MARSH

The regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Daughters of America was held Monday evening at 7:30 p. m. at the Knights of Columbus Hall with Mrs. Gladys Watkins, grand regent, presiding.

The first meeting of the new year was an incentive for a large attendance.

The council was delighted to hear Monsignor Marsh who advised them to revive interest in the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine by having a well planned discussion program at each of their meetings. The subject being decided by suggestions from the general assembly made prior to the meeting and the program would be in charge of their own priests and also of visiting priests.

A letter reminding members to offer special prayers during Church Unity Octave, January 18, 1950, through January 25, 1950, was read, along with a prayer for the holy father the pope, in the crusade for unity of faith.

A congratulatory message will be sent to Father A. O. Olinger, the Catholic Daughters' state chaplain, who has been elevated to the rank of domestic prelate with the title of right reverend monsignor.

Catholic Book Week will be celebrated from February 19, 1950, to February 25, 1950, and each member is urged to donate a book or its equivalent in cash for the book. Your name will be inscribed and will ever be a reminder of your interest in the Catholic Library.

An appeal for old clothing of any kind was made to be sent to Rev. Father Roy P. Leonard, San Francisco, Calif. Only one stipulation was made: to have the clothes cleaned and to deliver the packages to Mrs. Elsie Audoin, R. N., in the health department building. The appeal is urgent. The need is great. Be prompt in this request that many less fortunate ones may benefit by your generosity.

The Maternity Clinic committee report was outstanding as usual and the council was proud of the accomplishments in this field of work.

The sick-visiting committee, Mrs. Plyler, chairman, reporting, was filled with interest for the shut-ins in our midst.

A word of appreciation from St. Joseph Guest Home revealed how delighted they were with the Christmas program of selected music and refreshments served by the Catholic Daughters; Mrs. Mattee Colquitt, chairman.

Members are asked to submit names for application to court rank, thus beginning 1950 with great hopes for future expansion. A party will be held Monday evening, January 16, at the Knights of Columbus Hall; your hostesses, the calling committee, known as the Purple Team. Mrs. Vickmair, chairman.

Plan and be sure to attend the general party, where you will find games for amusement and refreshments very delicious; everything that will attract.

NEWS FROM THE PARISH LIBRARY

Once in a while a book appears which is so beautifully written and is such a charming story that one hates to come to the end of it. After reading it once it is impossible to resist going back and rereading some of the passages of exquisite beauty. Such a book is "Gentian Hill" by Elizabeth Goudge. Miss Goudge knows and loves England. She is well versed in the folklore of the Devon countryside and brings it into her books in a most attractive way. Her characters are faithfully drawn. Mother and Father Sprigge are perfect types of yoeman farmers. Dr. Crane, who loved humanity, was a scholar and student of the human heart. The Abbe de Colbert, a perfect type of the French aristocrat who found himself through helping others. Then there are the two lovable children of the story, Anthony Louis Mary O'Connell, a midshipman in the English navy at 15 and Stella, the foster child of the Sprigge's. Stella is a fairylike creature, much more mature than her ten years. How she and Anthony meet and fall in love makes a lovely story. This is the kind of book that makes you feel a better person after reading it. It is one that we cannot recommend too highly.

Daphne Du Maurier is a modern writer who has never written a book to equal her extremely popular "Rebecca." Her new novel, "The Delaneys" deals with the three children of a theatrical family. It is modern and sophisticated and makes interesting reading, but it is not a book to be loved as is "Gentian Hill."

Do you enjoy reading plays? If so, don't miss "South Pacific" by Oscar Hammerstein 2nd and Joshua Logan, which has just appeared in book form. It is delightfully done and is most interesting to read. Another new play in the library collection is "Summer and Smoke" by Tennessee Williams.

Other new books of fiction recently added to the library collection are "For a Whole Lifetime" by Jessica Lyon and "National Velvet" by Enid Bagnold.

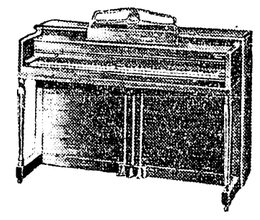

Books of non-fiction are "Chips off the Old Benchley," by Robert Charles Benchley, "Outwitting Your Years," by Clarence William Leib, "Household Equipment" Louise Peet, "Aguide to Victorian Antiques" by Raymond Francis Yates, "Make Friends With Your Land" by Leonard Wickenden, "Wayfaring Stranger" by Burl Ives, "Malaria" by Leon J. Warshaw, "The Peabody Sisters of Salem" by Louise Hall Tharp, and "Hood: Cavalier General" by Richard O'Connor.

NEWS FROM THE PARISH LIBRARY

Once in a while a book appears which is so beautifully written and is such a charming story that one hates to come to the end of it. After reading it once it is impossible to resist going back and rereading some of the passages of exquisite beauty. Such a book is "Gentian Hill" by Elizabeth Goudge. Miss Goudge knows and loves England. She is well versed in the folklore of the Devon countryside and brings it into her books in a most attractive way. Her characters are faithfully drawn. Mother and Father Sprigge are perfect types of yoeman farmers. Dr. Crane, who loved humanity, was a scholar and student of the human heart. The Abbe de Colbert, a perfect type of the French aristocrat who found himself through helping others. Then there are the two lovable children of the story, Anthony Louis Mary O'Connell, a midshipman in the English navy at 15 and Stella, the foster child of the Sprigge's. Stella is a fairylike creature, much more mature than her ten years. How she and Anthony meet and fall in love makes a lovely story. This is the kind of book that makes you feel a better person after reading it. It is one that we cannot recommend too highly.

Daphne Du Maurier is a modern writer who has never written a book to equal her extremely popular "Rebecca." Her new novel, "The Delaneys" deals with the three children of a theatrical family. It is modern and sophisticated and makes interesting reading, but it is not a book to be loved as is "Gentian Hill."

Do you enjoy reading plays? If so, don't miss "South Pacific" by Oscar Hammerstein 2nd and Joshua Logan, which has just appeared in book form. It is delightfully done and is most interesting to read. Another new play in the library collection is "Summer and Smoke" by Tennessee Williams.

Other new books of fiction recently added to the library collection are "For a Whole Lifetime" by Jessica Lyon and "National Velvet" by Enid Bagnold.

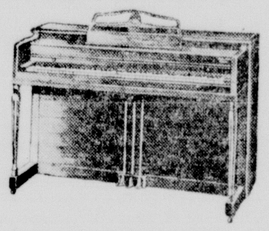

Books of non-fiction are "Chips off the Old Benchley," by Robert Charles Benchley, "Outwitting Your Years," by Clarence William Leib, "Household Equipment" Louise Peet, "Aguide to Victorian Antiques" by Raymond Francis Yates, "Make Friends With Your Land" by Leonard Wickenden, "Wayfaring Stranger" by Burl Ives, "Malaria" by Leon J. Warshaw, "The Peabody Sisters of Salem" by Louise Hall Tharp, and "Hood: Cavalier General" by Richard O'Connor.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Pencils, paper, notebooks, erasers, crayons, watercolors and brushes, as well as socks, gloves, handkerchiefs, ribbons, soap, needles and combs, and other small necessities are some of the articles Girl Scouts may be seen taking to their weekly meetings these days. Asking what it is all about, we find that the girls are making practical application of the fourth scout law, "a Girl Scout is a friend to all and a sister to every other Girl Scout," by taking part in the international project for 1950, "Schoolmates Overseas." Each Brownie and Intermediate troop in Monroe and West Monroe is trying to fill at least one school bag for an overseas friend during the next two months.

February is observed in scouting as International Month, so the project is most appropriate at this time. Tentative plans are for the bags to be presented on the Girl Scout anniversary on March 12.

It has occurred to us that many of the mothers and troop committee members might help by hunting up some of the above-mentioned articles in their homes and giving them to the troops. How about the Christmas loot at your house? Doesn't it contain a few things you can spare? It is a small thing for most of us, but perhaps we can imagine the joy a bright hair ribbon, a new pencil, or a pair of socks without holes, will mean to a child who has long regarded such things as unobtainable luxuries. Let's help our American scouts to help their sister scouts in other lands.

Speaking of international projects, one of the greatest thrills a troop can experience is to receive a letter of thanks for something the girls have sent. One such letter was received recently by Brownie Troop 4, of which Mrs. Louis Turner is leader. The letter, written in German, was a thank you for a clothing kit sent last year. The girls of Troop 4, a fourth grade troop at Sherrouse school, are fascinated by the German script and as pleased as if they could read the letter.

And at their last meeting the scouts of Troop 28 had as their guest Mrs. Howell Heard, who told them about life in her native England and about the work of the English Girl Guides, sister organization of American Girl Scouts.

The scouts regard community work here at home as no less important. Last week Troops 1, 17, 21, 26, 31 and 36 distributed posters last week in the Twin Cities for the March of Dimes campaign. The girls of Troop 15 are also cooperating. They are planning a radio play to be given during the drive. The script is called "A Place for Patsy," and was written especially for Girl Scouts by the radio department of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Next Sunday we'll remind you when to listen.

REVIEW CLUB MEETS IN THE HOME OF MRS. W. L. ALEXANDER

Mrs. W. L. Alexander was hostess to the Review Club Monday for the first meeting of 1950. After reading the club collect, Mrs. F. V. Barnett, president, read a timely editorial on New Year's resolutions and good citizenship; she also read the New Year's message addressed to all federated clubs by Mrs. Mims, president of L. F. W. C. In a brief business session, the club voted to make a contribution to the current March of Dimes drive.

Mrs. DeWitt Henry, chairman of legislation, called the attention of members to the most important measures to be considered by congress in its present session emphasizing the importance of a good citizen's showing an active interest in national legislation.

The program, introduced by Mrs. C. P. Gray, Jr., was entitled "Brief Candles," and consisted of reviews of two recent English novels, both of which are notable for their brevity. Mrs. W. L. Mitchell, Jr. discussed "The Servant," by Robin Maugham, a psychological study of a man's moral, mental, and physical disintegration. The novel has had excellent critical reviews in England, but a some-what cool reception in America. Written by a nephew of Somerset Maugham, "The Servant" contains many traces of the influence of the uncle, but lacks the credibility of the older writer's works. Its greatest weakness, according to Mrs. Mitchell, is the absence of sufficient characterization and motivation to make the outcome believable.

Mrs. J. Nalda Averett reviewed Evelyn Waugh's latest book, "Scott King's Modern Europe." Typical of many of Mr. Waugh's writings, this is a satire, but unlike his previous ones, this novel fails to gain the needed effect. The story deals with the difficulties encountered by Scott King, an obscure teacher of the classics, during a sojourn in the mythical European country of Neutralia and a devious return to England. Throughout the trip Scott King remains completely devoted to the classics and returns to his duties as schoolmaster believing more firmly than ever that it is very wicked indeed to fit any boy for a place in modern world.

During the social hour which followed the program, Mrs. Alexander served delicious refreshments to the following members and guests: Mrs. D. W. Griffith, Mrs. J. N. Averitt, Mrs. F. V. Barnett, Mrs. C. B. Braun, Mrs. J. K. Brothers, Jr., Mrs. Z. J. Byrd, Mrs. E. P. Cudd, Mrs. W. T. Davis, Mrs. A. T. Givens, Mrs. C. P. Gray, Jr., Mrs. DeWitt Henry, Mrs. A. R. Holloway, Mrs. J. C. Loftin, Mrs. W. L. Mitchell, Jr., Mrs. Sam Smith, Mrs. Lea Thompson, Mrs. Corbin Turpin and Mrs. L. N. Waddell.

Homer called sinister laughter sardonic because an herb grown on Sardinia was reputed to cause death by laughter.

In a setting of Christmas decorations, with lighted tree, graduated candles reflected in a handsome mirror, and Madonna vase filled with silver berries and leaves, the spirit of the Yuletide prevailed.

Mrs. John Deen opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. W. J. Erwin read a Christmas poem, and Miss Elizabeth Davis, as a lad in dungerrees and boots recited "Just Before Christmas I'm Good As I Can Be," and later played Santa Claus by distributing the presents.

The refreshment table was overlaid with ecru cloth and centered with silver leaves and green, red and blue baubles.

Guests and members to enjoy the delightful refreshments were Mesdames George Dillen, F. M. Terral, G. C. Hammack, Jr., W. A. Gibson, H. T. Van Fossen, W. H. Maben, J. L. Johnson, Bill Scott, W. J. Erwin, F. A. Babb, and John Deen.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Pencils, paper, notebooks, erasers, crayons, watercolors and brushes, as well as socks, gloves, handkerchiefs, ribbons, soap, needles and combs, and other small necessities are some of the articles Girl Scouts may be seen taking to their weekly meetings these days. Asking what it is all about, we find that the girls are making practical application of the fourth scout law, "a Girl Scout is a friend to all and a sister to every other Girl Scout," by taking part in the international project for 1950, "Schoolmates Overseas." Each Brownie and Intermediate troop in Monroe and West Monroe is trying to fill at least one school bag for an overseas friend during the next two months.

February is observed in scouting as International Month, so the project is most appropriate at this time. Tentative plans are for the bags to be presented on the Girl Scout anniversary on March 12.

It has occurred to us that many of the mothers and troop committee members might help by hunting up some of the above-mentioned articles in their homes and giving them to the troops. How about the Christmas loot at your house? Doesn't it contain a few things you can spare? It is a small thing for most of us, but perhaps we can imagine the joy a bright hair ribbon, a new pencil, or a pair of socks without holes, will mean to a child who has long regarded such things as unobtainable luxuries. Let's help our American scouts to help their sister scouts in other lands.

Speaking of international projects, one of the greatest thrills a troop can experience is to receive a letter of thanks for something the girls have sent. One such letter was received recently by Brownie Troop 4, of which Mrs. Louis Turner is leader. The letter, written in German, was a thank you for a clothing kit sent last year. The girls of Troop 4, a fourth grade troop at Sherrouse school, are fascinated by the German script and as pleased as if they could read the letter.

And at their last meeting the scouts of Troop 28 had as their guest Mrs. Howell Heard, who told them about life in her native England and about the work of the English Girl Guides, sister organization of American Girl Scouts.

The scouts regard community work here at home as no less important. Last week Troops 1, 17, 21, 26, 31 and 36 distributed posters last week in the Twin Cities for the March of Dimes campaign. The girls of Troop 15 are also cooperating. They are planning a radio play to be given during the drive. The script is called "A Place for Patsy," and was written especially for Girl Scouts by the radio department of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Next Sunday we'll remind you when to listen.

REVIEW CLUB MEETS IN THE HOME OF MRS. W. L. ALEXANDER

Mrs. W. L. Alexander was hostess to the Review Club Monday for the first meeting of 1950. After reading the club collect, Mrs. F. V. Barnett, president, read a timely editorial on New Year's resolutions and good citizenship; she also read the New Year's message addressed to all federated clubs by Mrs. Mims, president of L. F. W. C. In a brief business session, the club voted to make a contribution to the current March of Dimes drive.

Mrs. DeWitt Henry, chairman of legislation, called the attention of members to the most important measures to be considered by congress in its present session emphasizing the importance of a good citizen's showing an active interest in national legislation.

The program, introduced by Mrs. C. P. Gray, Jr., was entitled "Brief Candles," and consisted of reviews of two recent English novels, both of which are notable for their brevity. Mrs. W. L. Mitchell, Jr. discussed "The Servant," by Robin Maugham, a psychological study of a man's moral, mental, and physical disintegration. The novel has had excellent critical reviews in England, but a some-what cool reception in America. Written by a nephew of Somerset Maugham, "The Servant" contains many traces of the influence of the uncle, but lacks the credibility of the older writer's works. Its greatest weakness, according to Mrs. Mitchell, is the absence of sufficient characterization and motivation to make the outcome believable.

Mrs. J. Nalda Averett reviewed Evelyn Waugh's latest book, "Scott King's Modern Europe." Typical of many of Mr. Waugh's writings, this is a satire, but unlike his previous ones, this novel fails to gain the needed effect. The story deals with the difficulties encountered by Scott King, an obscure teacher of the classics, during a sojourn in the mythical European country of Neutralia and a devious return to England. Throughout the trip Scott King remains completely devoted to the classics and returns to his duties as schoolmaster believing more firmly than ever that it is very wicked indeed to fit any boy for a place in modern world.

During the social hour which followed the program, Mrs. Alexander served delicious refreshments to the following members and guests: Mrs. D. W. Griffith, Mrs. J. N. Averitt, Mrs. F. V. Barnett, Mrs. C. B. Braun, Mrs. J. K. Brothers, Jr., Mrs. Z. J. Byrd, Mrs. E. P. Cudd, Mrs. W. T. Davis, Mrs. A. T. Givens, Mrs. C. P. Gray, Jr., Mrs. DeWitt Henry, Mrs. A. R. Holloway, Mrs. J. C. Loftin, Mrs. W. L. Mitchell, Jr., Mrs. Sam Smith, Mrs. Lea Thompson, Mrs. Corbin Turpin and Mrs. L. N. Waddell.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED BY QUITMAN COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Waldrip of Quitman, held open house to their friends in their home in Quitman, January 1, 1950 in commemoration of their golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Cecil Waldrip greeted the guests upon their arrival and escorted them to the living room where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip and their children, Mr. Lewis Waldrip, of Jonesboro; Mr. Donnie Waldrip of Shreveport; Mrs. V. W. Ciber of Lafayette; Mr. Cecil Waldrip of Quitman, and Mr. Lester Waldrip of Bastrop.

The reception rooms of the Waldrip home were artistically decorated for the occasion carrying out the gold motif.

The table was overlaid with an exquisite table cloth of imported ecru lace centered with a crystal bowl holding a wedding band arrangement of gold pom poms, gold tulips picked low with plumoses fern filled the base of the crystal bowl. Twin silver candelabras holding gold burning tapers were centered with a lacy rosette and tiny gold wedding bells, tied with gold plastic perforated ribbon, flanked either side of the wedding band arrangement.

The lovely silver coffee service, surrounded by plumoses fern and rows of gold mums was placed on one of the tables. The tiered cake, a beautiful arrangement of gold and white was placed at the opposite end of the table and embossed with "50th Wedding Anniversary." Gold pom poms and plumoses ferns gracefully outlined the three-tiered confectionery. Dainty white napkins reading in gold "James D. and Margaret O., January 2, 1900" were used. Gold Madellians, holding silver compotes of toasted nuts and mints were placed at vantage points on the table.

Centering the buffet was a large plaque of Plumoses fern centered gold pom poms forming the numerals 1900-50. King Alfreds in the upper right hand corner of the plaque, were gracefully held in place with gold metallic ribbon. Twin silver candelabras, matching the table arrangement flanked either side of the plaque. Beautiful arrangements of gold mums were placed at vantage points throughout the dining room.

The fireplace mantle formed a picturesque arrangement of gold leaves, sprigs, and gold balls for the background of large gold numerals "50." These gold sprays were intertwined with white alba planer and plumosis fern. The mirror tray on the console table was circled with double red Professor Sargent camillias, at least a dozen different type of choice camellias in rare varieties and yellow mums were placed at vantage points throughout the reception rooms of the Waldrip home.

Mrs. Lester E. Waldrip and Mrs. William D. Waldrip alternated at the silver service. Mrs. T. H. Boud and Miss Marlene Bond presided over the lovely display of gifts arranged in the guest room. Mrs. Lewis B. Waldrip was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Elder Bond, Miss Margaret Bond, Mr. Vaughn W. Barber and Mr. Elder Bond assisted with other courtesies of the afternoon.

Mrs. James D. Waldrip was becomingly attired in an attractive draped gown of black crepe. Her shoulder corsage was an orchid, featuring a miniature "50" numeral of glitter stems attached to tiny gold bells tied with gold ribbon.

Each lady assisting with the courtesies of the afternoon wore a shoulder corsage of yellow pom poms and gold wedding bells.

Miss Margaret Bond, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bond and Mr. James Dangue Waldrip, Jr., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Dangue Waldrip, Sr., of Quitman, were married Jan. 1, 1900, by the Rev. Lum Jones, pastor of the Sweetwater Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip now reside within four miles of where they were both born.

Approximately two hundred guests called at the Waldrip home during the appointed hours of three to five.

Honor guests present were members of the wedding party fifty years ago. They were: Mrs. R. E. Bayes, Mrs. Jack Rochelle, Mr. W. L. Bond, Mrs. Lula White, Mrs. Lula Lowe, and Mr. J. L. Banard. Each honor guest was presented with a corsage or boutneir of gold pom poms.

Grandchildren present were: Phil Barber, Barber and Eddie Bart Waldrop.

Mr. Waldrip is general manager from the mill out for the lumber company of Ansley where he has been employed for the past 33 years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip are active members of the Quitman Methodist Church. They received many letters, telegrams and congratulations from friends upon their anniversary.

The couple was presented gold wedding bands by their children.

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED BY QUITMAN COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Waldrip of Quitman, held open house to their friends in their home in Quitman, January 1, 1950 in commemoration of their golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Cecil Waldrip greeted the guests upon their arrival and escorted them to the living room where they were received by Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip and their children, Mr. Lewis Waldrip, of Jonesboro; Mr. Donnie Waldrip of Shreveport; Mrs. V. W. Weber of Lafayette; Mr. Cecil Waldrip of Quitman, and Mr. Lester Waldrip of Bastrop.

The reception rooms of the Waldrip home were artistically decorated for the occasion carrying out the gold motif.

The table was overlaid with an exquisite table cloth of imported ecru lace centered with a crystal bowl holding a wedding band arrangement of gold pom poms, gold tulips picked low with plumoses fern filled the base of the crystal bowl. Twin silver candelabras holding gold burning tapers were centered with a lacy rosette and tiny gold wedding bells, tied with gold plastic perforated ribbon, flanked either side of the wedding band arrangement.

The lovely silver coffee service, surrounded by plumoses fern and rows of gold mums was placed on one of the tables. The tiered cake, a beautiful arrangement of gold and white was placed at the opposite end of the table and embossed with "50th Wedding Anniversary." Gold pom poms and plumoses ferns gracefully outlined the three-tiered confectionery. Dainty white napkins reading in gold "James D. and Margaret O., January 2, 1900" were used. Gold Madellians, holding silver compotes of toasted nuts and mints were placed at vantage points on the table.

Centering the buffet was a large plaque of Plumoses fern centered gold pom poms forming the numerals 1900-50. King Alfreds in the upper right hand corner of the plaque, were gracefully held in place with gold metallic ribbon. Twin silver candelabras, matching the table arrangement flanked either side of the plaque. Beautiful arrangements of gold mums were placed at vantage points throughout the dining room.

The fireplace mantle formed a picturesque arrangement of gold leaves, sprigs, and gold balls for the background of large gold numerals "50." These gold sprays were intertwined with white alba planer and plumosis fern. The mirror tray on the console table was circled with double red Professor Sargent camillias, at least a dozen different type of choice camellias in rare varieties and yellow mums were placed at vantage points throughout the reception rooms of the Waldrip home.

Mrs. Lester E. Waldrip and Mrs. William D. Waldrip alternated at the silver service. Mrs. T. H. Boud and Miss Marlene Bond presided over the lovely display of gifts arranged in the guest room. Mrs. Lewis B. Waldrip was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Elder Bond, Miss Margaret Bond, Mr. Vaughn W. Barber and Mr. Elder Bond assisted with other courtesies of the afternoon.

Mrs. James D. Waldrip was becomingly attired in an attractive draped gown of black crepe. Her shoulder corsage was an orchid, featuring a miniature "50" numeral of glitter stems attached to tiny gold bells tied with gold ribbon.

Each lady assisting with the courtesies of the afternoon wore a shoulder corsage of yellow pom poms and gold wedding bells.

Miss Margaret Bond, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bond and Mr. James Dangue Waldrip, Jr., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Dangue Waldrip, Sr., of Quitman, were married Jan. 1, 1900, by the Rev. Lum Jones, pastor of the Sweetwater Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip now reside within four miles of where they were both born.

Approximately two hundred guests called at the Waldrip home during the appointed hours of three to five.

Honor guests present were members of the wedding party fifty years ago. They were: Mrs. R. E. Bayes, Mrs. Jack Rochelle, Mr. W. L. Bond, Mrs. Lula White, Mrs. Lula Lowe, and Mr. J. L. Banard. Each honor guest was presented with a corsage or boutneir of gold pom poms.

Grandchildren present were: Phil Barber, Barber and Eddie Bart Waldrop.

Mr. Waldrip is general manager from the mill out for the lumber company of Ansley where he has been employed for the past 33 years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Waldrip are active members of the Quitman Methodist Church. They received many letters, telegrams and congratulations from friends upon their anniversary.

The couple was presented gold wedding bands by their children.

Congo Leopardmen Spell Terror With A Capital 'T'

LIZALA (Belgian Congo)—A mangled body, with the heart cut out of it and claw marks of a leopard imprinted in the surrounding ground, means one thing to Belgian Congo police: The leopardmen have struck again.

This little known secret society operating in Central Africa claims dozens of such victims each year. And work as hard as they will, the police cannot do much about it. The leopardmen seldom leave a witness to testify to their deeds.

The reason for the killings is generally thought to be a ritual of nature, in which the human heart plays a part. Victims are evidently chosen haphazardly as was the case of Kungbo Antoine, a young fisherman of the village of Yembongo near Libenge. He and his friend Kizima Jean were walking along the road cutting the dense forest between Yumpi and Yembongo in November. It was pitch dark. A thunderstorm threatened. Lightning alone flashed from time to time to lighten their way.

Halfway between the villages, a man suddenly leapt from the undergrowth brandishing a huge bush knife and wearing a leopard skin. Kizima went down immediately from a knife-blow. His friend went to his aid, and was attacked by a second man who leapt from the jungle. Being unarmed, he fled, leaving his friend lying on the ground. He spent the night in the guard station of a nearby plantation, but did not say a word about the attack.

That is one more difficulty the police run up against in dealing with the leopardmen. Nobody will testify.

Next morning passersby on the road discovered large blood stains and parts of human intestines. Following the macabre traces into the surrounding bush, they discovered the remains of Kizima. Only his torso remained. Deeply imprinted on the body were the marks of claws. Human footprints and leopard pawmarks were visible around the body, and the heart was missing. Apart from a pair of trousers carefully folded under a tree nothing else was found.

The trousers clue was evidence that human beings had committed the murder. No animal, however crafty, can fold up a pair of trousers.

A judicial inquiry was immediately opened but without little hope of success. The survivor either could not or would not identify the attackers. He was one of the few to have got away with his life in a leopardman attack. He was not going to leave himself open to reprisals.

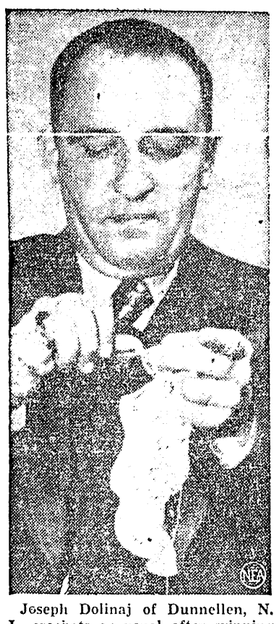

WELCOME WORN OUT

CHICAGO—(AP)—Two gunmen walked into Fred Krause's fur repair shop and robbed him of $26.

DRUMS OF THE NAZIS

UNDER THE RED FLAG East German Youth marches again.

Marching On . . .

Nazi Heritage Vividly Shown By Youth's In Russia's East Zone

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—(AP)—East Germany's Free German Youth organization (F. D. J.) is on the march, with drums and trumpets.

"For peace," say its Communist leaders.

"For Communist domination," charge anti-Communists.

"It looks too much like the Hitler Youth," is another frequent argument against it.

Outwardly, at least, it actually resembles the Hitler Youth in many ways. The F. D. J. is the only youth organization permitted in the Soviet zone, just as the Hitler Youth Youth was in nazi Germany.

Torchlight parades, drums and trumpets were indispensable for the Hitler Youth. Four years after the defeat of the nazi reich, the Communist Free German Youth adopted these requisites.

The Hitler Youth wore brown shirts. F. D. J. are blue.

This was too much even for the Communist-edited east Berlin weekly, Ulenspiegel. It reprimanded the Free German Youth for marching, drumming and trumpeting "just as the Hitler Fascists did."

"Hitler didn't invent those things," retorted the F. D. J.

Its executive council declared that "today youth must be won for the fight for peace with all available means," including these Hitler Youth customs.

"True, they were abused in the past by reactionaries of all shades," it admitted. "But the drums and trumpets of the Free German Youth are the bitterest enemies of reaction, because they are the drums and trumpets of peace."

But these very drums and trumpets of peace were used by an F. D. J. group at Leipzig to break up Catholic church services. The group marched around a church making so much noise that the mass had to be broken off.

The "peace" drums and trumpets also intone marches praising heroes of the Red army. Their peace fanfare precedes speeches calling on F. D. J. members to help defend the Communist-made "democratic order" against "western war mongers." F. D. J. leaders have publicly pledged themselves to do so "with the weapon in our hands" in the ranks of the east zone "People's Police" army.

They were the first to storm the Berlin city hall on Sept. 6, 1948, and drive out the duly elected representatives of the Berlin population. They were in action as strike breakers during the six-weeks walkout of West Berlin's anti-Communist railway workers—with rocks and wooden clubs against strikers.

Without F. D. J. membership card there's hardly a chance of being admitted to high school, university or administrative jobs. There are no sports without the F. D. J. The "Democratic Sports Movement" of Communist-ruled east Germany is supervised by the Free German Youth and the Communist trade union federation, F. D. G. B.

Philatelistic activities, private theater groups and chess clubs are also controlled by the F. D. J. Even old men with beards must obtain a Free German Youth license if they want to go fishing.

NEW CUB PACK TO BE FORMED

Will Be Organized Under P.-T. A. Sponsorship At Mitchell School

By unanimous vote the W. R. Mitchell P.-T. A. will sponsor a new Cub Scout Pack to be formed on the south side of West Monroe. Jones Huskey gave a detailed explanation of the requirements for forming a new pack and the responsibilities of the sponsor at the meeting of the Mitchell P.-T. A. Wednesday, January 11.

Very informative talks were given by Mrs. Lena Martin and Miss Mary E. Breard of the child welfare division. Miss Breard pointed out that there is quite a need for foster homes in this area. Mrs. Martin gave an explanation of the procedure for adopting children through the child welfare division of the department of public welfare.

Meeting was called to order, Mrs. Rex Hymer presiding, and various committee reports were given. Donations for the March of Dimes were taken.

Room count was won by the first grade.

Child Pulled From Furnace By Her Hair

VIRGINIA, Minn., Jan. 12. (AP)—A 15-month-old girl was pulled out by the hair after she fell through an open furnace register late yesterday. She suffered serious burns on her feet and legs.

The child is Charlotte Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Thomas.

The Thomas home is being remodeled. Arnold Koski, a workman laying new linoleum in the house, rescued the baby.

GLOOM IN U. N.

LONDON—(AP)—A British architect thinks the new United Nations secretariat building rising in New York looks like "a gigantic tombstone."

Said A. Trystan Edwards, writing in the magazine "Building," . . . "It promises to be, for its size, the bleakest and most uninteresting building in the world. Shaped like a tombstone, if war should come, it will indeed mark the grave of all our hopes." Edwards' views are based on photographs and drawings. He has not seen the structure.

Hip Twisters Out For O.P.H.S.Band---McCrea

By Percy Fant
(Of The Morning World Staff)

At a football game last season a man sitting behind me remarked: "There's nothing like those classy, high-stepping majorettes to make a good grid struggle complete."

"What's your conception of a majorette anyway?" the man next to him asked.

The first man went into a detailed explanation. When he had finished, the other man outlined his idea of what majorettes were, including even the most minute detail of her assigned duties on a football field.

The two opinions differed and of course an argument followed.

In the course of discussion, however, one of the men tagged the Ouachita parish high school band with being "old fashioned." Why? Because there were no short-skirted, prancing girls to lead the musicians on their merry way down and across the field.

Well, which type majorette do you like best? Is she the twisting kind that considers each movement important above all other things, even the music? Or is your ideal the little girl that sticks strictly to twirling her baton and marching with the band, putting hip-twisting out of her mind?

Then (depending on your idea of a majorette), do you think the Ouachita band is "old fashioned?"

Here's what Truman McCrea, director of the parish high school band, has to say:

"A band must be good first. The musicians must be good. The music they play must be suited to the players and to the occasion. After that comes majorettes, the added attraction. I think majorettes are good for any band, but not vulgar hip-twisters. Majorettes who stick to baton-twirling and marching can add color to any band."

Consequently, the director said, Ouachita's band may have majorettes in 1950.

"But I'll concentrate my efforts first on making the band as good as possible, he said, "and after that's done, and if there is time, I'll try to work out a corps of majorettes. But as far as hip-twisters go, they are definitely out for the Ouachita band."

Continuing, McCrea pointed out that "some high schools in the country try to put on a show, employing the majorettes as the main attraction in a somewhat modified version of burlesque.

"I believe that a good band can put itself over to music lovers without the use of strutting, twisting and stunting girls.

"On the other hand," he explained, "as I've said, majorettes can be good for a band if they confine themselves to their batons and marching."

While hitting upon the idea of adding majorettes to the already colorful band of O. P. H. S., McCrea explained that "if majorettes are used, they will be donned in short skirts and regular uniforms used by other majorettes."

He emphasized that a high school band is in the educational field, not the entertainment field.

McCrea went on to explain that if majorettes are used next year by the Ouachita band, the drum major will still be used to lead the band and the girls will merely march along with the band as an added attraction.

"Some parents of band members advocate majorettes for the band," the director said, "but on the other hand, there are some who violently oppose such a move."

The Ouachita band which last year was acclaimed for its performances consisted of 66 members who marched, while the entire (concert) band was 78 strong.

Next year, according to McCrea, there will be between 70 and 80 members in the band, all of which will march.

Ouachita has never had majorettes in their band. Will 1950 see the tradition broken.?

Judge Says He's Right

BIRMINGHAM, England, Jan. 14.—(AP)—John James Williams, full of his Sunday dinner was dozing on a sofa when his son tickled his foot.

The angry father got up to chastise the boy. His wife intervened, they quarreled and blows were struck.

Mrs. Williams sued for divorce on grounds of cruelty.

Judge Arthur Forbes dismissed the petition today with the comment:

"There is one thing a man does not want after having his Sunday dinner and that is to have his feet tickled."

Functional Fashions Seen For 50 Years

Women's fashions have run the gamut from the bustle to the flapper sack in the last half century.

All signs now point to the prophecy that the next 50 years will be the better half.

We have seen it demonstrated in the last few years that women at last have learned to assert their own common sense when fashion designers go overboard. With one accord American women turned thumbs down on the recent "new look"—the wasp-waisted, hip-padded, skirt-dragging silhouette that came as the first fashion revolution after World War II.

Now, when designers are flirting with the idea of bring back the hip-belted, flat-chested silhouette of the flapper era, women once more have said a firm "NO!" They have accepted the boyish bob, the shorter skirt, the cloche hat and the sheath, but they have refused flatly to bind themselves into flat - chestedness again, and they reserve the right to retain their belts at their natural waistlines.

All these are encouraging signs, showing that America as a nation is coming of age. Twenty-five years ago, after the first World War, the public accepted slavishly the most unflattering fashions in history. Women strove for the sack silhouette, concealed their natural curves, glorified in the so-called "boyish form," and managed to present an altogether frightening appearance, with belts around their hips and skirts above their knees.

This year, at the half-way mark in the century, the same post-war influences are at work. There is an attempt to bring back the foibles of the Terrible Twenties in all their zany hysteria. The latest hit on Broadway is the saga of the Jazz Age, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," with its theme song the Charleston. The most fashionable hairdo is a replica of the shingle bob of the Twenties. The beaded short sheath once more is the last word for evening wear.

But there it stops. The public, perhaps remembering the embarrassments of 25 years ago, has refused to go further along the flapper path of fashion. Feminine busts still retain their natural curves, waistlines stay put where nature made them, and though both skirts and hair are shorter, women still manage to look feminine.

In the next half century it is to be hoped, and not without sound basis, that feminine fashions will adapt themselves more and more to the active lives of modern women. Bustles, hobble skirts and multiple petticoats will be out of step with the trend of the times, as women cannot be encumbered by such things and conduct the varied activities in which they take part today, and in which they may be expected to take even greater part in the next 50 years.

You can't drive a car, pilot a plane or ride a rocket ship in hoop skirts and a tight girdle.

So we may expect in the next half century more natural, functional fashions, simpler, geared to the atomic age.

We may look forward with confidence, we hope, to the century's better half in fashion.

An installation and plans for the spring ceremonial will be discussed.

All members be sure to come again, states the Rani.

Two Kinds Opera Figured In Career Svelte Singing Star

CHICAGO—Two kinds of opera—horse and regular—figured in the career of Anne Jeffreys, svelte singing star of the national company of "Kiss Me Kate."

She set off at a full gallop for opera. Horse operas kept her moving, but at an uneven trot.

Anne started out some years ago to whip into shape as one of the more attractive operatic stars. She retained the shape, but got sidetracked.

"It was money," she explained in an interview. "Didn't have any money and needed some to study music so I could get into opera."

Following the path of thousands of others, she settled with her mother in lucre-lush Hollywood where she got a long-term contract.

In six years she had parts in 34 movies, 12 of which were westerns. It was publicized to some extent that the beauteous belle from Goldsboro, N. C., was closer to a horse than its saddle.

Naturally, press agents seized on this note that she was going from "horse opera to opera" when she appeared in "Tosca" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in 1946.

"It would be safer to say I went from the 'bad type girl' to opera," she said. "I was a bad girl in most of the other movies; you know, the kind who would cheat in a game of jacks."

"This experience with horse operas had quite an effect on Anne, who once was the kind of girl who looked on horses as practically house pets. Now she likes them if they're in front of milk wagons, under somebody else or statues in parks. As she puts it, "I got tired of getting third billing to a horse."

"She made the money, studied music and had a successful fling in opera.

At present, her love—or at any rate, her livelihood—rests in the musical stage. Critics who viewed her at the Shubert Theater unanimously thought it was a well-placed love.

Anne says she is 26. As she explains: "When I started out I was the same age as what's-her-name (she named a Hollywood star but asked that it not be used). Then, as we got older, she turned out to be three years younger than me. That mixes me up some, but I guess I'm an even 26."

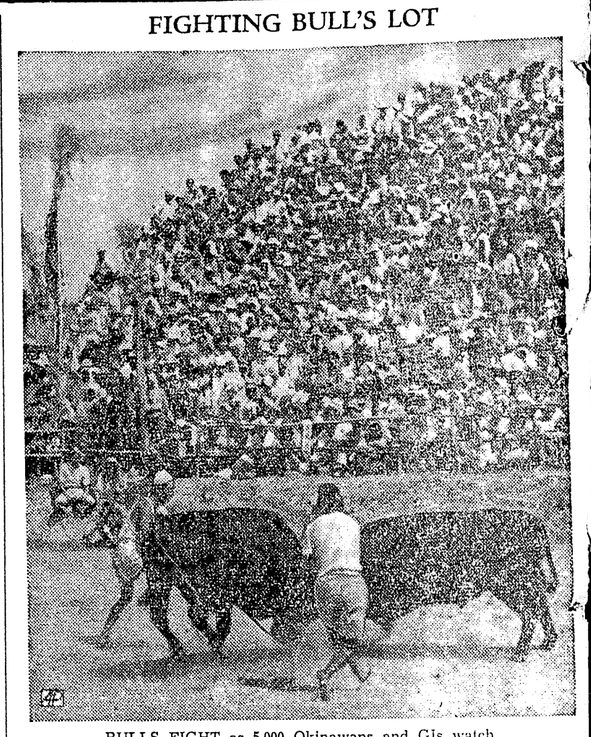

Anne's also a mighty fancy doodler, specializing in sketches of scantily clad girls. They all look like her which is a very nice way to look.

Study Group Will Meet On Thursday

Mrs. Lola Crowell, chairman of study group Selman P.-T. A. will have charge of the program when the Selman P.-T. A. meets for regular monthly meeting, Thursday afternoon, 2 p. m., January 19, 1950. Mrs. Lila Rushing, president, will preside during the business hour.

The executive committee of the Selman P.-T. A., consisting of all elected officers and the committee chairman will meet in regular monthly session Tuesday afternoon, January 17, at Selman School. All members are urged to attend.

FIGHTING BULL'S LOT

BULLS FIGHT as 5,000 Okinawans and GIs watch.

By Russell Brines

OKINAWA—The bull's lot is not a happy one. In Spain, men fight them. On this oriental island, the bulls fight each other. This has been going on for centuries and no doubt the bulls are tired of the sport.

The annual Yakena village tournament was run off the other day. This is big stuff on this former Japanese island. Something like the World Series or an Army-Navy football game. Eleven pairs of bulls were selected. The east villagers had 11 and the west villagers had 11. The rivals' colors were painted on the bulls' horns.

The bulls are led into a fenced ring, two at a time. They even have organized cheering sections. These get into the ring too. They blow horns, beat drums and ring gongs. The bulls meet horn to horn and butt each other around for from 10 to 30 minutes. By that time one of the bulls has shown a decided lack of interest in the proceedings. He either hot foots it over the fence to safety, or if too tired flops down then and there.

Whereupon, the rooters of the champion bull dance about the ring. No doubt they would pull up goal posts if there were any goal posts.

The owners of the winning bulls get prizes—cloth, farm tools, money and a fancy market price for their animals.

So you see why the bull in Okinawa tires of this sport. Even when he wins, he loses. He winds up as a locker full of roasts, ribs and sirloins.

Labor Council In March Of Dimes

The Monroe Central Trades and Labor Council will participate in the annual March of Dimes campaign for polio victims by sponsoring a dance Friday night, January 27, Jiles N. Davis, council president and chairman of arrangements, announced Saturday.

The dance, which will also honor the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, will be staged at the Optimist Club building, formerly Officers' Club, at Selman Field. The Optimist Club donated use of the building for the affair, Davis said.

The club's dance floor is one of the finest in this section, Davis said, and will accommodate close to 500 couples.

All of the proceeds from the dance, above actual expenses, will go to the polio fund, the council president said.

Reservations may be obtained by telephoning 3781, 6007 or 7381. The dance will begin at 9 p. m.

Other members of the council arrangements committee include L. D. Keltner, R. W. Steele, Leon Johnston and W. M. Stokes, Jr. Scoop White is in charge of publicity.

Heir To Fabulous Sum Plunges To His Death

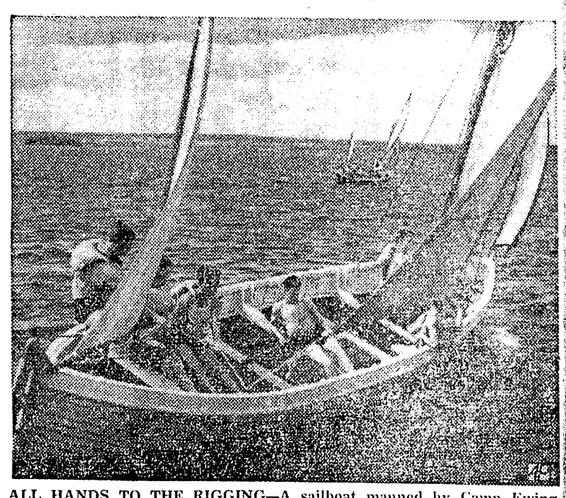

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—(AP)—A man tentatively identified as Thomas S. Lee, 45, heir of the Don Lee automobile and radio fortune, plunged to his death today from the 12th floor of a Wilshire boulevard office building.

Identification was made by a nurse who said she accompanied Lee from a sanitarium where he had been under treatment for mental illness. A bottle of pills in the man's pocket also bore his name, Wilshire detectives said.

The body struck the roof of an adjacent building at the third floor level. Officers said he apparently had jumped or fallen from a window of the 12th floor of the Wiltern Building. A lighted cigarette was found on the window ledge. A package of the same brand was in the man's pocket, officers said.

Canada's Sea School Has Boys From Five Nations

OTTAWA, Canada—School is out at the first British Empire Sea Cadet Camp on the shores of Lake of Two Mountains, Quebec, and 147 young sailors are on their way home. They came from five nations—the United Kingdom, Sweden, Australia, New Zealand and Canada. Brooke Claxton, Canadian minister of defense, reviewed the cadets and said he was "impressed by this great example of youth of several lands working together hand-in-hand." He commended 17-year-old Cadet Chief Petty Officer William Hicks of Britain for his command of the parade. Sailing, swimming, scrubbing decks, and all the crafts of seamanship were learned at Camp Ewing in picturesque northland setting. The "Anzacs" are staying for the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto.

ALL HANDS TO THE RIGGING—A sailboat manned by Camp Ewing Sea cadets changes course in a race on Lake of Two Mountains to test the seamanship of the boys.

INSPECTION—The Canadian contingent of sea cadets stood stiffly at attention when Minister of National Defense, Brooke Claxton (in civvies) reviewed them.

Science Seeking Trail Of Shocking Kissers

By Alton L. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Writer)

NEW YORK—Your teeth can pack a fair electric wallop. Two teeth can generate a current of half a volt or more, if they have different kinds of metal in them as fillings. When they meet, you might get a little shock. Or you can get a shock when a spoon or fork touches both teeth.

It has been known for years that fillings of different metals can set up electric current.

How strong it can be has been measured by Dr. William Schriever, professor of physics at the University of Oklahoma, and Dr. Louis E. Diamond, biochemist in the university's school of medicine.

The made tests on 137 patients, under an office of naval research project.

"It is remarkable that the fillings of some persons have electrical potential differences of over half a volt, and yet these persons apparently suffer no discomfort and apparently no ill efects," they told an American Chemical Society meeting.

The mouth battery is like the simple battery you can make by dipping a copper wire and an iron wire into a glass of salt water, and holding the two upper ends of the wires together. Current flows through the wire, and through the salt water, which is an electrolyte.

The saliva in the mouth and the fluid in the jawbone also can act as electrolytes and conduct an electric current.

"If two teeth are filled, one with gold and the other with silver amalgam, these fillings are in contact with saliva at their exposed surfaces and with the bone-fluid at the surfaces down in the teeth.

"Thus the gold and amalgam together with saliva consitute one electric cell, and the gold and amalgam together with the bone-fluid constitute another electric cell. These cells tend to send electric current from the amalgam to the gold through both fluids."

Each cell generates an electrical pressure, and a current can flow between them even when there's no metallic connection made to the fillings.

Dr. Schriever and Dr. Diamond, using meters, measured the average normal electric currents flowing between various combinations of fillings. They found the most current produced by pairs of teeth with gold and amalgam fillings, and the least between pairs both filled with gold.

Baltimore Sisters Knew Exactly What They Wanted

BALTIMORE—The great treasure of two massive, jewelry-laden, and unassuming Baltimore sisters has a last become their memorial—an art lovers' Mecca.

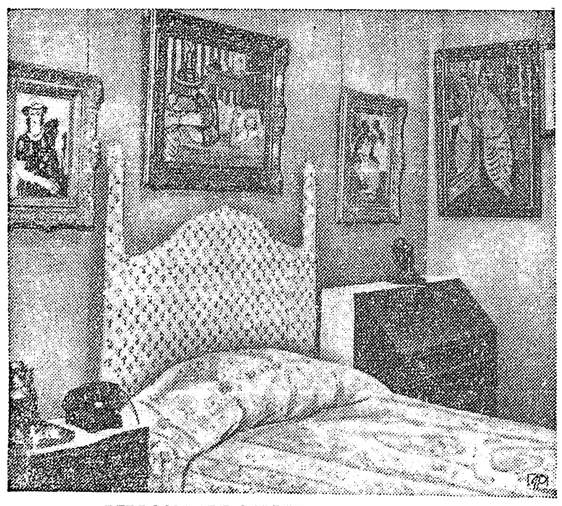

"Outstandingly modest women who knew exactly what they liked," is how Mrs. Adelyn Breeskin, director of Baltimore's Museum of Art, describes the unusual pair. Because what they liked was usually fine art, the museum, in Mrs. Breeskin's words, "has attained its majority, has become adult."

Adulthood arrived through Miss Etta Cone's bequest of the fabulous collection of modern French art she and her sister, Dr. Claribel Cone, had accumulated, jointly and separately, over many years.

Etta Cone died at 78 last August, 20 years after Dr. Claribel. None of her close friends—who included Mrs. Breeskin—was surprised at the bequest, which also grants $400,000 for a new museum wing.

The Cone gift, Mrs. Breeskin declares, "puts our collection of modern French art among the world's most outstanding of this kind." The collection is of unfixed value. But David Rosen, an internationally recognized art expert, says it's worth well over $1,000,000.

As to the sisters, they were Mrs. Breeskin recalled with an affectionate smile, "very large women, you might say monumental. They loved jewelry—striking, strange pieces." Dr. Claribel especially liked wearing rare Spanish shawls. These, along with the jewels and valuable laces, rugs and ancient book covers, have gone to the museum as part of the Cone collection.

BEDROOM ART GALLERY of Miss Etta Cole.

The sisters didn't depend on professional experts but did their own collecting. Only once were they badly duped, buying an alleged Van Gogh painting which proved to be a fake. That canvas now is preserved, though not exhibited.

Miss Etta and Dr. Claribel—a physician and bacteriologist—began acquiring works of Matisse and Picasso at the turn of the century, well before these names became bywords in modern art. The late Gertrude Stein, author, friend and cousin of the Cones, mentions in her writings that she took Miss Etta to Picasso's Paris studio "whenever the Picasso finances got beyond everybody." And the two dollars or so Miss Etta paid in those early days for some Picasso drawings and paintings was big money then to the Spanish-French artist whose canvasses fetch thousands today.

Among the collection's 350 paintings (there are 50 sculptures, many drawings, and a host of miscellaneous objects) are works by Picasso, Gauguin, Manet, Braque, Van Gogh (genuine), Cezanne and Renoir. But the brilliant core of the collection centers on Matisse. For some 30 years Miss Etta brought at least one painting annually from that gay colorist.

Picasso's they stopped purchasing when the painter became too abstruse for their tastes. But personal friendship continued. All oversized greeting card in the Cone collection, drawn by Picasso and depicting himself with a paunch and hat in hand, testifies to that. The sisters spurned surrealist, non-objective, abstract art.

It was in her 17-room apartment that Miss Etta, after Dr. Claribel's death, concentrated her treasures. Every wall, even the bathroom, was aglow with paintings. But the bedroom was where Miss Etta usually hung her latest aquisitions. She liked studying them from her bed.

Only his torso remained. Deeply imprinted on the body were the marks of claws. Human footprints and leopard pawmarks were visible around the body, and the heart was missing. Apart from a pair of trousers carefully folded under a tree nothing else was found.

The trousers clue was evidence that human beings had committed the murder. No animal, however crafty, can fold up a pair of trousers.

A judicial inquiry was immediately opened but without little hope of success. The survivor either could not or would not identify the attackers. He was one of the few to have got away with his life in a leopardman attack. He was not going to leave himself open to reprisals.

WELCOME WORN OUT

CHICAGO—(AP)—Two gunmen walked into Fred Krause's fur repair shop and robbed him of $26.

It was the seventh time in ten years that robbers had walked in and taken his cash.

It may not do any good, but he's going to remove the "Walk In" sign from his front door.

NICE WORK

Joseph Dolinaj of Dunnellen, N. J., crochets as usual after winning first prize in the "Men Only" division of a national crocheting contest in Chicago. Dolinaj, a railroad signal towerman, took up needlework five years ago after betting his wife $5 he could beat her at the art.

DRUMS OF THE NAZIS

UNDER THE RED FLAG East German Youth marches again.

Marching On . . .

Nazi Heritage Vividly Shown By Youth's In Russia's East Zone

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—(AP)—East Germany's Free German Youth organization (F. D. J.) is on the march, with drums and trumpets.

"For peace," say its Communist leaders.

"For Communist domination," charge anti-Communists.

"It looks too much like the Hitler Youth," is another frequent argument against it.

Outwardly, at least, it actually resembles the Hitler Youth in many ways. The F. D. J. is the only youth organization permitted in the Soviet zone, just as the Hitler Youth Youth was in nazi Germany.

Torchlight parades, drums and trumpets were indispensable for the Hitler Youth. Four years after the defeat of the nazi reich, the Communist Free German Youth adopted these requisites.

The Hitler Youth wore brown shirts. F. D. J. are blue.

This was too much even for the Communist-edited east Berlin weekly, Ulenspiegel. It reprimanded the Free German Youth for marching, drumming and trumpeting "just as the Hitler Fascists did."

"Hitler didn't invent those things," retorted the F. D. J.

Its executive council declared that "today youth must be won for the fight for peace with all available means," including these Hitler Youth customs.

"True, they were abused in the past by reactionaries of all shades," it admitted. "But the drums and trumpets of the Free German Youth are the bitterest enemies of reaction, because they are the drums and trumpets of peace."

But these very drums and trumpets of peace were used by an F. D. J. group at Leipzig to break up Catholic church services. The group marched around a church making so much noise that the mass had to be broken off.

The "peace" drums and trumpets also intone marches praising heroes of the Red army. Their peace fanfare precedes speeches calling on F. D. J. members to help defend the Communist-made "democratic order" against "western war mongers." F. D. J. leaders have publicly pledged themselves to do so "with the weapon in our hands" in the ranks of the east zone "People's Police" army.

They were the first to storm the Berlin city hall on Sept. 6, 1948, and drive out the duly elected representatives of the Berlin population. They were in action as strike breakers during the six-weeks walkout of West Berlin's anti-Communist railway workers—with rocks and wooden clubs against strikers.

Without F. D. J. membership card there's hardly a chance of being admitted to high school, university or administrative jobs. There are no sports without the F. D. J. The "Democratic Sports Movement" of Communist-ruled east Germany is supervised by the Free German Youth and the Communist trade union federation, F. D. G. B.

Philatelistic activities, private theater groups and chess clubs are also controlled by the F. D. J. Even old men with beards must obtain a Free German Youth license if they want to go fishing.

NEW CUB PACK TO BE FORMED

Will Be Organized Under P.-T. A. Sponsorship At Mitchell School

By unanimous vote the W. R. Mitchell P.-T. A. will sponsor a new Cub Scout Pack to be formed on the south side of West Monroe. Jones Huskey gave a detailed explanation of the requirements for forming a new pack and the responsibilities of the sponsor at the meeting of the Mitchell P.-T. A. Wednesday, January 11.

Very informative talks were given by Mrs. Lena Martin and Miss Mary E. Breard of the child welfare division. Miss Breard pointed out that there is quite a need for foster homes in this area. Mrs. Martin gave an explanation of the procedure for adopting children through the child welfare division of the department of public welfare.

Meeting was called to order, Mrs. Rex Hymer presiding, and various committee reports were given. Donations for the March of Dimes were taken.

Child Pulled From Furnace By Her Hair

VIRGINIA, Minn., Jan. 13.—(AP)—A 15-month-old girl was pulled out by the hair after she fell through an open furnace register late yesterday. She suffered serious burns on her feet and legs.

The child is Charlotte Thomas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Thomas.

The Thomas home is being remodeled. Arnold Koski, a workman laying new linoleum in the house, rescued the baby.

GLOOM IN U. N.

LONDON—(AP)—A British architect thinks the new United Nations secretariat building rising in New York looks like "a gigantic tombstone."

Said A. Trystan Edwards, writing in the magazine "Building," . . . "It promises to be, for its size, the bleakest and most uninteresting building in the world. Shaped like a tombstone, if war should come, it will indeed mark the grave of all our hopes." Edwards' views are based on photographs and drawings. He has not seen the structure.

Judge Says He's Right

BIRMINGHAM, England, Jan. 14.—(AP)—John James Williams, full of his Sunday dinner was dozing on a sofa when his son tickled his foot.

The angry father got up to chastise the boy. His wife intervened, they quarreled and blows were struck.

Mrs. Williams sued for divorce on grounds of cruelty.

Judge Arthur Forbes dismissed the petition today with the comment:

"There is one thing a man does not want after having his Sunday dinner and that is to have his feet tickled."

Hip Twisters Out For O.P.H.S.Band---McCrea

By Percy Fant
(Of The Morning World Staff)

At a football game last season a man sitting behind me remarked: "There's nothing like those classy, high-stepping majorettes to make a good grid struggle complete."

"What's your conception of a majorette anyway?" the man next to him asked.

The first man went into a detailed explanation. When he had finished, the other man outlined his idea of what majorettes were, including even the most minute detail of her assigned duties on a football field.

The two opinions differed and of course an argument followed.

In the course of discussion, however, one of the men tagged the Ouachita parish high school band with being "old fashioned." Why? Because there were no short-skirted, prancing girls to lead the musicians on their merry way down and across the field.

Well, which type majorette do you like best? Is she the twisting kind that considers each movement important above all other things, even the music? Or is your ideal the little girl that sticks strictly to twirling her baton and marching with the band, putting hip-twisting out of her mind?

Then (depending on your idea of a majorette), do you think the Ouachita band is "old fashioned?"

Here's what Truman McCrea, director of the parish high school band, has to say:

"A band must be good first. The musicians must be good. The music they play must be suited to the players and to the occasion. After that comes majorettes, the added attraction. I think majorettes are good for any band, but not vulgar hip-twisters. Majorettes who stick to baton-twirling and marching can add color to any band."

Consequently, the director said, Ouachita's band may have majorettes in 1950.

"But I'll concentrate my efforts first on making the band as good as possible, he said, "and after that's done, and if there is time, I'll try to work out a corps of majorettes. But as far as hip-twisters go, they are definitely out for the Ouachita band."

Continuing, McCrea pointed out that "some high schools in the country try to put on a show, employing the majorettes as the main attraction in a somewhat modified version of burlesque.

"I believe that a good band can put itself over to music lovers without the use of strutting, twisting and stunting girls.

"On the other hand," he explained, "as I've said, majorettes can be good for a band if they confine themselves to their batons and marching."

While hitting upon the idea of adding majorettes to the already colorful band of O. P. H. S., McCrea explained that "if majorettes are used, they will be donned in short skirts and regular uniforms used by other majorettes."

He emphasized that a high school band is in the educational field, not the entertainment field.

McCrea went on to explain that if majorettes are used next year by the Ouachita band, the drum major will still be used to lead the band and the girls will merely march along with the band as an added attraction.

"Some parents of band members advocate majorettes for the band," the director said, "but on the other hand, there are some who violently oppose such a move."

The Ouachita band which last year was acclaimed for its performances consisted of 66 members who marched, while the entire (concert) band was 78 strong.

Next year, according to McCrea, there will be between 70 and 80 members in the band, all of which will march.

Ouachita has never had majorettes in their band. Will 1950 see the tradition broken.?

Functional Fashions Seen For 50 Years

Women's fashions have run the gamut from the bustle to the flapper sack in the last half century.

All signs now point to the prophecy that the next 50 years will be the better half.

We have seen it demonstrated in the last few years that women at last have learned to assert their own common sense when fashion designers go overboard. With one accord American women turned thumbs down on the recent "new look"—the wasp-waisted, hip-padded, skirt-dragging silhouette that came as the first fashion revolution after World War II.

Now, when designers are flirting with the idea of bring back the hip-belted, flat-chested silhouette of the flapper era, women once more have said a firm "NO!" They have accepted the boyish bob, the shorter skirt, the cloche hat and the sheath, but they have refused flatly to bind themselves into flat - chestedness again, and they reserve the right to retain their belts at their natural waistlines.

All these are encouraging signs, showing that America as a nation is coming of age. Twenty-five years ago, after the first World War, the public accepted slavishly the most unflattering fashions in history. Women strove for the sack silhouette, concealed their natural curves, glorified in the so-called "boyish form," and managed to present an altogether frightening appearance, with belts around their hips and skirts above their knees.

This year, at the half-way mark in the century, the same post-war influences are at work. There is an attempt to bring back the foibles of the Terrible Twenties in all their zany hysteria. The latest hit on Broadway is the saga of the Jazz Age, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," with its theme song the Charleston. The most fashionable hairdo is a replica of the shingle bob of the Twenties. The beaded short sheath once more is the last word for evening wear.

But there it stops. The public, perhaps remembering the embarrassments of 25 years ago, has refused to go further along the flapper path of fashion. Feminine busts still retain their natural curves, waistlines stay put where nature made them, and though both skirts and hair are shorter, women still manage to look feminine.

In the next half century it is to be hoped, and not without sound basis, that feminine fashions will adapt themselves more and more to the active lives of modern women. Bustles, hobble skirts and multiple petticoats will be out of step with the trend of the times, as women cannot be encumbered by such things and conduct the varied activities in which they take part today, and in which they may be expected to take even greater part in the next 50 years.

You can't drive a car, pilot a plane or ride a rocket ship in hoop skirts and a tight girdle.

So we may expect in the next half century more natural, functional fashions, simpler, geared to the atomic age.

We may look forward with confidence, we hope, to the century's better half in fashion.

Two Kinds Opera Figured In Career Svelte Singing Star

CHICAGO—Two kinds of opera—horse and regular—figured in the career of Anne Jeffreys, svelte singing star of the national company of "Kiss Me Kate."

She set off at a full gallop for opera. Horse operas kept her moving, but at an uneven trot.

Anne started out some years ago to whip into shape as one of the more attractive operatic stars. She retained the shape, but got sidetracked.

"It was money," she explained in an interview. "Didn't have any money and needed some to study music so I could get into opera."

Following the path of thousands of others, she settled with her mother in lucre-lush Hollywood where she got a long-term contract.

In six years she had parts in 34 movies, 12 of which were westerns. It was publicized to some extent that the beauteous belle from Goldsboro, N. C., was closer to a horse than its saddle.

Naturally, press agents seized on this note that she was going from "horse opera to opera" when she appeared in "Tosca" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in 1946.

"It would be safer to say I went from the 'bad type girl' to opera," she said. "I was a bad girl in most of the other movies; you know, the kind who would cheat in a game of jacks."

"This experience with horse operas had quite an effect on Anne, who once was the kind of girl who looked on horses as practically house pets. Now she likes them if they're in front of milk wagons, under somebody else or statues in parks. As she puts it, "I got tired of getting third billing to a horse."

"She made the money, studied music and had a successful fling in opera.

At present, her love—or at any rate, her livelihood—rests in the musical stage. Critics who viewed her at the Shubert Theater unanimously thought it was a well-placed love.

Anne says she is 26. As she explains: "When I started out I was the same age as what's-her-name (she named a Hollywood star but asked that it not be used). Then, as we got older, she turned out to be three years younger than me. That mixes me up some, but I guess I'm an even 26."

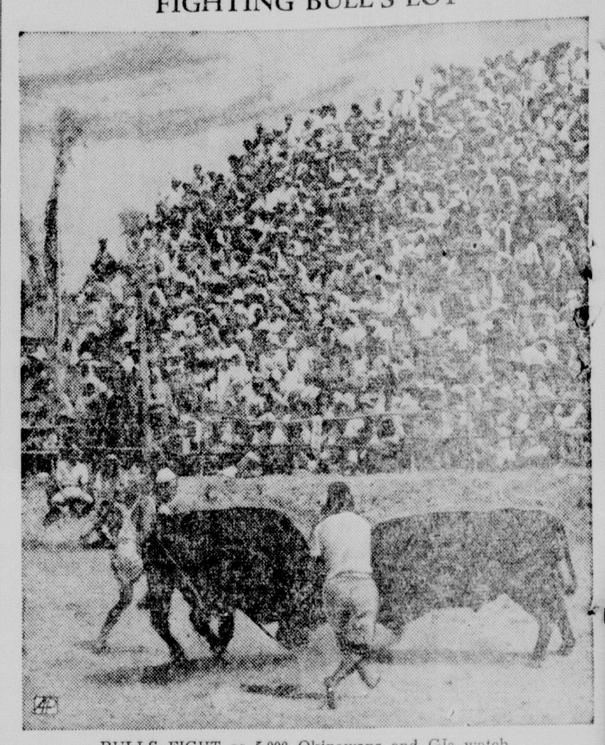

Anne's also a mighty fancy doodler, specializing in sketches of scantily clad girls. They all look like her which is a very nice way to look.

Study Group Will Meet On Thursday

Mrs. Lola Crowell, chairman of study group Selman P.-T. A. will have charge of the program when the Selman P.-T. A. meets for regular monthly meeting, Thursday afternoon, 2 p. m., January 19, 1950. Mrs. Lila Rushing, president, will preside during the business hour.

The executive committee of the Selman P.-T. A., consisting of all elected officers and the committee chairman will meet in regular monthly session Tuesday afternoon, January 17, at Selman School. All members are urged to attend.

FIGHTING BULL'S LOT

BULLS FIGHT as 5,000 Okinawans and GIs watch.

By Russell Brines

OKINAWA—The bull's lot is not a happy one. In Spain, men fight them. On this oriental island, the bulls fight each other. This has been going on for centuries and no doubt the bulls are tired of the sport.

The annual Yakena village tournament was run off the other day. This is big stuff on this former Japanese island. Something like the World Series or an Army-Navy football game. Eleven pairs of bulls were selected. The east villagers had 11 and the west villagers had 11. The rivals' colors were painted on the bulls' horns.

The bulls are led into a fenced ring, two at a time. They even have organized cheering sections. These get into the ring too. They blow horns, beat drums and ring gongs. The bulls meet horn to horn and butt each other around for from 10 to 30 minutes. By that time one of the bulls has shown a decided lack of interest in the proceedings. He either hot foots it over the fence to safety, or if too tired flops down then and there.

Whereupon, the rooters of the champion bull dance about the ring. No doubt they would pull up goal posts if there were any goal posts.

The owners of the winning bulls get prizes—cloth, farm tools, money and a fancy market price for their animals.

So you see why the bull in Okinawa tires of this sport. Even when he wins, he loses. He winds up as a locker full of roasts, ribs and sirloins.

Labor Council In March Of Dimes

The Monroe Central Trades and Labor Council will participate in the annual March of Dimes campaign for polio victims by sponsoring a dance Friday night, January 27, Jiles N. Davis, council president and chairman of arrangements, announced Saturday.

The dance, which will also honor the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, will be staged at the Optimist Club building, formerly Officers' Club, at Selman Field. The Optimist Club donated use of the building for the affair, Davis said.

The club's dance floor is one of the finest in this section, Davis said, and will accommodate close to 500 couples.

All of the proceeds from the dance, above actual expenses, will go to the polio fund, the council president said.

Reservations may be obtained by telephoning 3781, 6007 or 7381. The dance will begin at 9 p. m.

Other members of the council arrangements committee include L. D. Keltner, R. W. Steele, Leon Johnston and W. M. Stokes, Jr. Scoop White is in charge of publicity.

Heir To Fabulous Sum Plunges To His Death

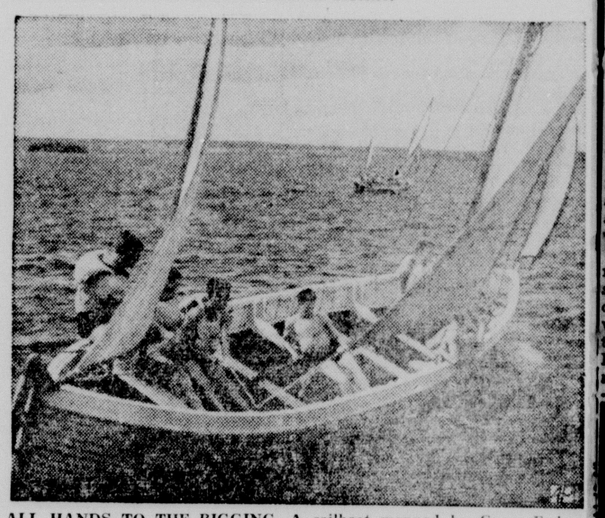

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—(AP)—A man tentatively identified as Thomas S. Lee, 45, heir of the Don Lee automobile and radio fortune, plunged to his death today from the 12th floor of a Wilshire boulevard office building.

Identification was made by a nurse who said she accompanied Lee from a sanitarium where he had been under treatment for mental illness. A bottle of pills in the man's pocket also bore his name, Wilshire detectives said.

The body struck the roof of an adjacent building at the third floor level. Officers said he apparently had jumped or fallen from a window of the 12th floor of the Wiltern Building. A lighted cigarette was found on the window ledge. A package of the same brand was in the man's pocket, officers said.

Canada's Sea School Has Boys From Five Nations

OTTAWA, Canada—School is out at the first British Empire Sea Cadet Camp on the shores of Lake of Two Mountains, Quebec, and 147 young sailors are on their way home. They came from five nations—the United Kingdom, Sweden, Australia, New Zealand and Canada. Brooke Claxton, Canadian minister of defense, reviewed the cadets and said he was "impressed by this great example of youth of several lands working together hand-in-hand." He commended 17-year-old Cadet Chief Petty Officer William Hicks of Britain for his command of the parade. Sailing, swimming, scrubbing decks, and all the crafts of seamanship were learned at Camp Ewing in picturesque northland setting. The "Anzacs" are staying for the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto.

ALL HANDS TO THE RIGGING—A sailboat manned by Camp Ewing Sea cadets changes course in a race on Lake of Two Mountains to test the seamanship of the boys.

INSPECTION—The Canadian contingent of sea cadets stood stiffly at attention when Minister of National Defense, Brooke Claxton (in civvies) reviewed them.

Science Seeking Trail Of Shocking Kissers

By Alton L. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Writer)

NEW YORK—Your teeth can pack a fair electric wallop. Two teeth can generate a current of half a volt or more, if they have different kinds of metal in them as fillings. When they meet, you might get a little shock. Or you can get a shock when a spoon or fork touches both teeth.

It has been known for years that fillings of different metals can set up electric current.

How strong it can be has been measured by Dr. William Schriever, professor of physics at the University of Oklahoma, and Dr. Louis E. Diamond, biochemist in the university's school of medicine.

The made tests on 137 patients, under an office of naval research project.

"It is remarkable that the fillings of some persons have electrical potential differences of over half a volt, and yet these persons apparently suffer no discomfort and apparently no ill efects," they told an American Chemical Society meeting.

The mouth battery is like the simple battery you can make by dipping a copper wire and an iron wire into a glass of salt water, and holding the two upper ends of the wires together. Current flows through the wire, and through the salt water, which is an electrolyte.

The saliva in the mouth and the fluid in the jawbone also can act as electrolytes and conduct an electric current.

"If two teeth are filled, one with gold and the other with silver amalgam, these fillings are in contact with saliva at their exposed surfaces and with the bone-fluid at the surfaces down in the teeth.

"Thus the gold and amalgam together with saliva consitute one electric cell, and the gold and amalgam together with the bone-fluid constitute another electric cell. These cells tend to send electric current from the amalgam to the gold through both fluids."

Each cell generates an electrical pressure, and a current can flow between them even when there's no metallic connection made to the fillings.

Dr. Schriever and Dr. Diamond, using meters, measured the average normal electric currents flowing between various combinations of fillings. They found the most current produced by pairs of teeth with gold and amalgam fillings, and the least between pairs both filled with gold.

Baltimore Sisters Knew Exactly What They Wanted

BALTIMORE—The great treasure of two massive, jewelry-laden, and unassuming Baltimore sisters has a last become their memorial—an art lovers' Mecca.

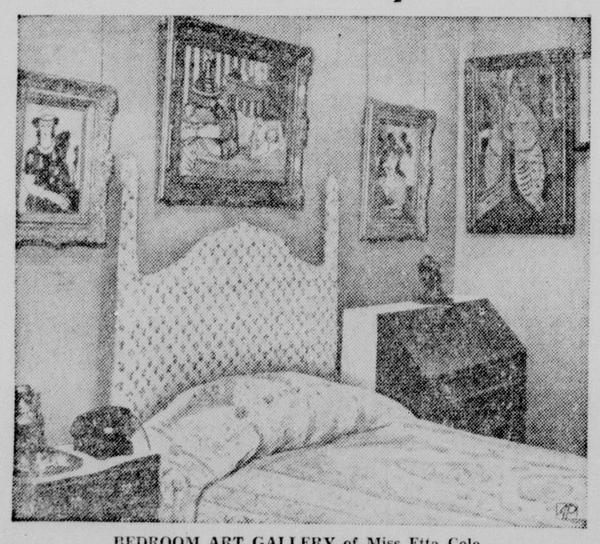

"Outstandingly modest women who knew exactly what they liked," is how Mrs. Adelyn Breeskin, director of Baltimore's Museum of Art, describes the unusual pair. Because what they liked was usually fine art, the museum, in Mrs. Breeskin's words, "has attained its majority, has become adult."

Adulthood arrived through Miss Etta Cone's bequest of the fabulous collection of modern French art she and her sister, Dr. Claribel Cone, had accumulated, jointly and separately, over many years.

Etta Cone died at 78 last August, 20 years after Dr. Claribel. None of her close friends—who included Mrs. Breeskin—was surprised at the bequest, which also grants $400,000 for a new museum wing.

The Cone gift, Mrs. Breeskin declares, "puts our collection of modern French art among the world's most outstanding of this kind." The collection is of unfixed value. But David Rosen, an internationally recognized art expert, says it's worth well over $1,000,000.

As to the sisters, they were Mrs. Breeskin recalled with an affectionate smile, "very large women, you might say monumental. They loved jewelry—striking, strange pieces." Dr.

BEDROOM ART GALLERY of Miss Etta Cole.

Claribel especially liked wearing rare Spanish shawls. These, along with the jewels and valuable laces, rugs and ancient book covers, have gone to the museum as part of the Cone collection.

The sisters didn't depend on professional experts but did their own collecting. Only once were they badly duped, buying an alleged Van Gogh painting which proved to be a fake. That canvas now is preserved, though not exhibited.

Miss Etta and Dr. Claribel—a physician and bacteriologist—began acquiring works of Matisse and Picasso at the turn of the century, well before these names became bywords in modern art. The late Gertrude Stein, author, friend and cousin of the Cones, mentions in her writings that she took Miss Etta to Picasso's Paris studio "whenever the Picasso finances got beyond everybody." And the two dollars or so Miss Etta paid in those early days for some Picasso drawings and paintings was big money then to the Spanish-French artist whose canvasses fetch thousands today.

Among the collection's 350 paintings (there are 50 sculptures, many drawings, and a host of miscellaneous objects) are works by Picasso, Gauguin, Manet, Braque, Van Gogh (genuine), Cezanne and Renoir. But the brilliant core of the collection centers on Matisse. For some 30 years Miss Etta brought at least one painting annually from that gay colorist.

Picasso's they stopped purchasing when the painter became too abstruse for their tastes. But personal friendship continued. All oversized greeting card in the Cone collection, drawn by Picasso and depicting himself with a paunch and hat in hand, testifies to that. The sisters spurned surrealist, non-objective, abstract art.

It was in her 17-room apartment that Miss Etta, after Dr. Claribel's death, concentrated her treasures. Every wall, even the bathroom, was aglow with paintings. But the bedroom was where Miss Etta usually hung her latest aquisitions. She liked studying them from her bed.

DR. ROPP GIVES TALK TO L. E. A.

Tells Of Public Relations Aspect Of Teachers' Lives

"Success in life is measured by things an individual does that he is not required to do," states Dr. R. L. Ropp, acting president, Louisiana Tech in stating his favorite bit of philosophy to a group of seventy-five members of the Ouachita L. E. A. in regular session in the Calhoun High School.

Dr. Ropp used as his subject for his address, "Public Relations Aspect of a Teacher's Life." This subject he ably discussed from the following points: 1. A teacher should believe in his profession and be happy in it; 2. A teachers' life should be definite proof to all that education is worthwhile; 3. A teacher must love children and know his pupils individually; 4. He should participate in the activities of the school as a whole; 5. He should get acquainted with parents and find out home conditions of pupils; and 6. He should learn to know the community, local, state and national."

Immediately after the meeting was opened with Miss Ola Mae Pennington giving the invocation, the group was asked to stand for a moment in silent prayer in honor of the memory of Mrs. Harry Maxie, Selman School faculty member who died in December.

During the program hour Mrs. Ann Pritchard presided. Preceeding the address by Dr. Ropp, twelve members of the Calhoun Girls' Glee Club, under the direction of Mrs. Harris, rendered the following musical numbers: "Chinese Lullaby," "Snowstorm," "Mother Goose Medley" and "The Woman in a Shoe."

The business session was conducted by Mrs. Sara Hollingsworth, president. Of great interest to all was the announcement that Calhoun High School has recently been placed on the accredited list. An amendment was adopted changing the meeting time from Tuesday to Monday night of the fourth week of each unit. Miss Betty Oxford, Mrs. W. D. Clark and Miss Wilma Smith were appointed to revise the present constitution. At the request of Mrs. H. P. Smith, chairman of the professional growth committee, the unit voted to pay the expenses of any speaker the committee might ask to address the group.

At the close of the meeting a social hour was held in the library where the hospitality committee served punch, cake and sandwiches to all present.

Jail Man Charged With $120 Theft

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 14.—(Special)—Sheriff J. Hartwell Love said that Frank Eads, 23, has been placed in the parish prison at Vidalia charged with the theft of $120 in cash from Martin's Fish Market in Ferriday.

The sheriff said that Eads was a former employe of the fish market and recently he disappeared, left here and is said to have gone to Arkansas, where he tried to join the army.

Refused there, he returned to Ferriday and gave himself up to Marshal Carlos Rials, who turned him over to Deputy Jimmie Harp and he was lodged in the parish prison. He told officers, according to Sheriff Love that he had "borrowed the money."

WOULD PROTECT CONCORDIA GAME

Police Jury Will Ask For Closed Deer Season Next Year

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 14.—(Special)—The Concordia parish police jury has begun a campaign for a possible closed season on deer next year. The jurors also went to the aid of the parish health unit by voting a raise in the salary of the parish health nurse to cover an emergency caused by the recent resignation of Mrs. Lelia H. Mulvihill.

The jurors also invited Col. J. Lester White, commissioner of state department of public works to attend a meeting to discuss the $400,000 drainage project proposed in the parish. In other actions at their regular January meeting the jury planned a tentative flood control meeting with Rep. Otto H. Passman, flood control Attorney Fred G. Hudson, of Monroe, a representative of the district U. S. engineers office from Vicksburg, and interested persons from Catahoula and Concordia parishes for Friday January 20 at Vidalia.

They also decided to get to work early on next year's hunting regulations to protect Concordia's game. Stringent regulations during the past season had cut down the deer take to approximately one-third of what it was last year in all parts of the parish except south of Deerpark, H. A. Marton, Ferriday, president of the police jury said.

However, Abner Maxwell, and Fred Russell, jurors from the first and second wards at the southern tip of the parish, said that "it was not a chance for a deer below Deerpark." Many dead does were left lying in the woods, they said.

It was decided to invite Ernest Clements, conservation commissioner to the next meeting to discuss the problem.

Speakers at the meeting included Rep. Mike S. Ohlsen of Vidalia, who explained points on various questions.

S. department of labor, who is in charge of enforcement activities for the divisions in Louisiana, will address a meeting under the sponsorship of the local Chamber of Commerce, to be held at 1:30 p. m. on Tuesday, January 17, in the ballroom of the Virginia Hotel.

Mr. Consoulin will discuss the wage and hour law and the amendments, which provide for a 75-cent minimum wage and other changes brought about by the fair labor standards amendment of 1949, which become effective on January 25, 1950.

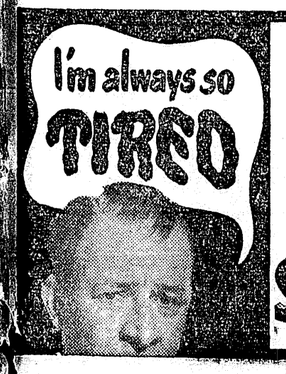

Auto Accident Is Basis Of Suit

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 14.—(Special)—Judge Jesse C. McGee of Seventh district court has taken under advisement the question of whether to grant a jury trial in the case of Mrs. Bessie Taylor and her son, Doyle Jordan, Jr., against Chester J. Shiele, Edward Shiele, Jr., and Mrs. Lucille Siegle, all of Vidalia, and the Fidelity Guaranty Insurance Comany of New York, for $50,000 in alleged damages.

The damages allegedly occurred to young Jordan when his car lights blew out on the highway near Lake St. John and he was struck by a car driven by Chester Shiele.

DR. ROPP GIVES TALK TO L. E. A.

Tells Of Public Relations Aspect Of Teachers' Lives

"Success in life is measured by things an individual does that he is not required to do," states Dr. R. L. Ropp, acting president, Louisiana Tech in stating his favorite bit of philosophy to a group of seventy-five members of the Ouachita L. E. A. in regular session in the Calhoun High School.

Dr. Ropp used as his subject for his address, "Public Relations Aspect of a Teacher's Life." This subject he ably discussed from the following points: 1. A teacher should believe in his profession and be happy in it; 2. A teachers' life should be definite proof to all that education is worthwhile; 3. A teacher must love children and know his pupils individually; 4. He should participate in the activities of the school as a whole; 5. He should get acquainted with parents and find out home conditions of pupils; and 6. He should learn to know the community, local, state and national."

Immediately after the meeting was opened with Miss Ola Mae Pennington giving the invocation, the group was asked to stand for a moment in silent prayer in honor of the memory of Mrs. Harry Maxie, Selman School faculty member who died in December.

During the program hour Mrs. Ann Pritchard presided. Preceeding the address by Dr. Ropp, twelve members of the Calhoun Girls' Glee Club, under the direction of Mrs. Harris, rendered the following musical numbers: "Chinese Lullaby," "Snowstorm," "Mother Goose Medley" and "The Woman in a Shoe."

The business session was conducted by Mrs. Sara Hollingsworth, president. Of great interest to all was the announcement that Calhoun High School has recently been placed on the accredited list. An amendment was adopted changing the meeting time from Tuesday to Monday night of the fourth week of each unit. Miss Betty Oxford, Mrs. W. D. Clark and Miss Wilma Smith were appointed to revise the present constitution. At the request of Mrs. H. P. Smith, chairman of the professional growth committee, the unit voted to pay the expenses of any speaker the committee might ask to address the group.

At the close of the meeting a social hour was held in the library where the hospitality committee served punch, cake and sandwiches to all present.

Jail Man Charged With $120 Theft

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 14.—(Special)—Sheriff J. Hartwell Love said that Frank Eads, 23, has been placed in the parish prison at Vidalia charged with the theft of $120 in cash from Martin's Fish Market in Ferriday.

The sheriff said that Eads was a former employe of the fish market and recently he disappeared, left here and is said to have gone to Arkansas, where he tried to join the army.

Refused there, he returned to Ferriday and gave himself up to Marshal Carlos Rials, who turned him over to Deputy Jimmie Harp and he was lodged in the parish prison. He told officers, according to Sheriff Love that he had "borrowed the money."

WOULD PROTECT CONCORDIA GAME

Police Jury Will Ask For Closed Deer Season Next Year

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 14.—(Special)—The Concordia parish police jury has begun a campaign for a possible closed season on deer next year. The jurors also went to the aid of the parish health unit by voting a raise in the salary of the parish health nurse to cover an emergency caused by the recent resignation of Mrs. Lelia H. Mulvihill.

The jurors also invited Col. J. Lester White, commissioner of state department of public works to attend a meeting to discuss the $400,000 drainage project proposed in the parish. In other actions at their regular January meeting the jury planned a tentative flood control meeting with Rep. Otto H. Passman, flood control Attorney Fred G. Hudson, of Monroe, a representative of the district U. S. engineers office from Vicksburg, and interested persons from Catahoula and Concordia parishes for Friday January 20 at Vidalia.

They also decided to get to work early on next year's hunting regulations to protect Concordia's game. Stringent regulations during the past season had cut down the deer take to approximately one-third of what it was last year in all parts of the parish except south of Deerpark, H. A. Marton, Ferriday, president of the police jury said.

However, Abner Maxwell, and Fred Russell, jurors from the first and second wards at the southern tip of the parish, said that "it was not a chance for a deer below Deerpark." Many dead does were left lying in the woods, they said.

It was decided to invite Ernest Clements, conservation commissioner to the next meeting to discuss the problem.

Wage And Hour Meeting To Be Held On Tuesday

Ray Updegraff of the Chamber of Commerce of Monroe and West Monroe announced today that J. Sidney Consoulin, field office supervisor of the wage and hour and public contracts divisions, U. S. department of labor, who is in charge of enforcement activities for the divisions in Louisiana, will address a meeting under the sponsorship of the local Chamber of Commerce, to be held at 1:30 p. m. on Tuesday, January 17, in the ballroom of the Virginia Hotel.

Mr. Consoulin will discuss the wage and hour law and the amendments, which provide for a 75-cent minimum wage and other changes brought about by the fair labor standards amendment of 1949, which become effective on January 25, 1950.

Auto Accident Is Basis Of Suit

FERRIDAY, La., Jan. 14.—(Special)—Judge Jesse C. McGee of Seventh district court has taken under advisement the question of whether to grant a jury trial in the case of Mrs. Bessie Taylor and her son, Doyle Jordan, Jr., against Chester J. Shiele, Edward Shiele, Jr., and Mrs. Lucille Siegle, all of Vidalia, and the Fidelity Guaranty Insurance Comany of New York, for $50,000 in alleged damages.

The damages allegedly occurred to young Jordan when his car lights blew out on the highway near Lake St. John and he was struck by a car driven by Chester Shiele.

REGISTRATION IN N. J. C. SET

Will Open Thursday Feb. 2 Closing On Following Saturday

Registration for second semester study at Northeast Junior College will open Thursday, February 2 and close Saturday, February 4, announced B. S. Hamner, registrar. This schedule also applies to enrollment for evening classes offered at the college through the general extension division of Louisiana State University. A. S. Huffman is director of extension work here.

For the regular day program students will register alphabetically on the hour, Mr. Hamner said. This procedure has been followed for several semesters to the advantage of students and faculty and staff. The enrollment schedule is to be announced at an early date through the medium of the press in addition to the campus bulletin boards.

Persons planning to enter N. J. C. for the first time are requested to bring their transcripts of credits and veterans are required to have their certificates of eligibility.

Course offerings for the spring term will be large enough to enable a beginning freshman to carry a full program of studies. Whether he is a mid-term high school graduate or any other student who is planning to enter college as a beginner he will be able to register for all basic studies needed in his curriculum, Mr. Hamner explained.

Registration for extension classes, beginning February 2 and extending through February 4, will be open daily from 5 to 8 p. m. and from 9 a. m. until 12 noon on Saturday, February 4. Mr. Huffman announced.

A wide variety of courses will be offered. Listings include: elementary accounting, advanced accounting, poultry, adult art, general chemistry, modern industry, economics-principles and problems, English composition, English literature, human geography, American national government, American history, newspaper reporting, college algebra, plane trigonometry, mathematics of business and measurements, applied music course in voice, piano and organ.

Introduction to psychology, educational psychology, typewriting, shorthand, retail store organization and management, introductory sociology, elementary Spanish, public speaking, introductory zoology, human physiology, general economic entomology. These courses are the regular college offerings, carrying college credit in all cases except adult art, if students meet entrance requirements.

Last semester approximately 200 students took advantage of the opportunity to continue their education while they were working on regular jobs. An even greater number is expected to participate in the program of evening classes this term.

Classes are open to students on a college credit or non-credit basis. In general, persons who desire to earn college credit must be graduates of accredited high schools and must meet necessary course requisites. However, applicants who are not high school graduates, but who are twenty-one years of age or older and qualified to do work in a particular course may be admitted as special students in accordance with the general requirements of Louisiana State University.

Any adult who desires to enroll in a class for his own pleasure, without regard to college credit, may do so regardles of previous training. Groups who are interested in special courses are asked to notify Mr. Huffman prior to registration in order that instructos may be secured.

Additional information may be secured by writing to: General Extension, Northeast Junior College, or by calling 4200.

Negro Woman Is Struck By Train

A Negro woman identified as Icalee Williams, 37, of 807 Calypso street, remained hospitalized with broken ribs Saturday after she was struck the afternoon before by an Illinois Central engine at the Oak street crossing, according to Monroe police.

Taken by a Mulhearn ambulance to the Wright-Bendel Clinic, hospital attendants said she suffered three broken ribs.

A police reporter pointed out that the accident occurred when the Williams woman walked behind a switch engine into the path of oncoming engine 2102. She was reported walking south from Eleventh street toward Oak when struck.

The engineer of the train was John H. Woodall and Oscar Turner was fireman, police said.

REGISTRATION IN N. J. C. SET

Will Open Thursday Feb. 2 Closing On Following Saturday

Registration for second semester study at Northeast Junior College will open Thursday, February 2 and close Saturday, February 4, announced B. S. Hamner, registrar. This schedule also applies to enrollment for evening classes offered at the college through the general extension division of Louisiana State University. A. S. Huffman is director of extension work here.

For the regular day program students will register alphabetically on the hour, Mr. Hamner said. This procedure has been followed for several semesters to the advantage of students and faculty and staff. The enrollment schedule is to be announced at an early date through the medium of the press in addition to the campus bulletin boards.

Persons planning to enter N. J. C. for the first time are requested to bring their transcripts of credits and veterans are required to have their certificates of eligibility.

Course offerings for the spring term will be large enough to enable a beginning freshman to carry a full program of studies. Whether he is a mid-term high school graduate or any other student who is planning to enter college as a beginner he will be able to register for all basic studies needed in his curriculum, Mr. Hamner explained.

Registration for extension classes, beginning February 2 and extending through February 4, will be open daily from 5 to 8 p. m. and from 9 a. m. until 12 noon on Saturday, February 4, Mr. Huffman announced.

A wide variety of courses will be offered. Listings include: elementary accounting, advanced accounting, poultry, adult art, general chemistry, modern industry, economics-principles and problems, English composition, English literature, human geography, American national government, American history, newspaper reporting, college algebra, plane trigonometry, mathematics of business and measurements, applied music course in voice, piano and organ.

Introduction to psychology, educational psychology, typewriting, shorthand, retail store organization and management, introductory sociology, elementary Spanish, public speaking, introductory zoology, human physiology, general economic entomology. These courses are the regular college offerings, carrying college credit in all cases except adult art, if students meet entrance requirements.

Last semester approximately 200 students took advantage of the opportunity to continue their education while they were working on regular jobs. An even greater number is expected to participate in the program of evening classes this term.

Classes are open to students on a college credit or non-credit basis. In general, persons who desire to earn college credit must be graduates of accredited high schools and must meet necessary course requisites. However, applicants who are not high school graduates, but who are twenty-one years of age or older and qualified to do work in a particular course may be admitted as special students in accordance with the general requirements of Louisiana State University.

Any adult who desires to enroll in a class for his own pleasure, without regard to college credit, may do so regardless of previous training. Groups who are interested in special courses are asked to notify Mr. Huffman prior to registration in order that instructos may be secured.

Additional information may be secured by writing to: General Extension, Northeast Junior College, or by calling 4200.

Negro Woman Is Struck By Train

A Negro woman identified as Icalee Williams, 37, of 807 Calypso street, remained hospitalized with broken ribs Saturday after she was struck the afternoon before by an Illinois Central engine at the Oak street crossing, according to Monroe police.

Taken by a Mulhearn ambulance to the Wright-Bendel Clinic, hospital attendants said she suffered three broken ribs.

A police reporter pointed out that the accident occurred when the Williams woman walked behind a switch engine into the path of oncoming engine 2102. She was reported walking south from Eleventh street toward Oak when struck.

The engineer of the train was John H. Woodall and Oscar Turner was fireman, police said.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 14.—(AP)—An urgent signal—not an S. O. S.—from the S. S. Tungping was heard here tonight by globe wireless and R. C. A.'s radiomarine station.

"Number four hold bilge water increasing rapidly," the message said. "Condition serious. Require assistance urgently."

The Tungping is 434.3 feet long. It was built in Chester, Pa., in 1918 and is owned by the China Overseas Line.

The ship gave her position as approximately 100 miles off the east coast of Kyushu, one of the Japanese islands.

Rio de Janeiro, in English, means River of January.

MARCH OF DIMES DANCE PLANNED

Two Mayors Here Issue Proclamation Urging Support Of Hotel Dance

A proclamation issuing from the offices of Mayor John Coon of Monroe and Mayor C. C. Bell, Jr., of West Monroe, this week launched the sale of tickets for the March of Dimes dance, sponsored by the Nomads of Avrudaka, Swami Santha No. 102, to be held on the Frances Hotel roof, Saturday January 28 at 8 p. m.

The mayors of the twin cities called upon all the residents of Ouachita parish to join in supporting workers in behalf of the March of Dimes.

Mrs. Montez Baur, serving as chairman of the dance, stated "I know of no finer way of helping the polio fund than to attend this dance. You will not only be assured of a pleasant evening but you will also have a part in helping a great cause and we all realize the vital need to join hands in the fight against polio. The Nomads of Avrudaka of Swami Santha No. 102 feel very honored to have this opportunity to help in this way for such a worthy cause and all proceeds will go to help benefit some unfortunate victim of polio."

Music for the dance will be furnished by Ben Burton's orchestra and those assisting on the various committees are Dr. H. H. Baur, Rajah; Mrs. Louise Fleet, Rishi; Mrs. Callie Crow, Purochita; P. E. Massey, incoming Rajah, and Mrs. Inez Brown, incoming Rani. Other officers of the organization, all Nomads and Pythian sisters are also assisting with the ticket sales.

Tickets may also be obtained from the following business firms in Monroe, Hewitt-Dew Music Store on DeSiard and Hewitt's on Grammont, Walgreen's Drug, Alvis Hotel Cigar Stand, Earle Hotel Cigar Stand and Standard Office Supply.

The following is the proclamation to the citizens of Ouachita parish signed by the honorable Mayor's John E. Coon and C. C. Bell, Jr.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas, at no time before in the history of the United States has infantile paralysis placed so heavy a burden on community after community, striking down loved ones in family after family, and,

WHEREAS, so severe were the epidemic outbreaks, that the toll for 1949 was upwards of 40,000 cases — most widespread of all time: and,

WHEREAS, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in performing its heroic work of salvaging the stricken, expended $100,00 daily at the eight of the epidemic to pay for aid needed by polio patients, and,

WHEREAS, the bill for polio care for those attacked by this disease—for the year 1949 alone—will approximate $31,000,000, and

WHEREAS, the national foundation's funds are now virtually depleted and the organization is dependent upon the 1950 March of Dimes, Jan. 14-31, for sufficient money to carry on the fight against this enemy of the little ones,

BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED, that each and everyone of us do all in his power to make the 1950 MARCH OF DIMES a founation of financial aid from which the national foundation may draw renewed strength to continue its work of mercy for all whom infantile paralysis may menace,

So THEREFORE I, MAYOR JOHN COON OF MONROE, LOUISIANA AND I, C. C. BELL, JR., OF WEST MONROE, LA., do proclaim and endorse Jan. 14-31 as a time for every citizen of Ouachita parish to contribute to the success of the 1950 March of Dimes, and the health and welfare of our children.

Signed

JOHN E. COON
C. C. BELL, JR.

Two Seek Freedom From Atlanta Prison

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two Chicagoans today asked the supreme court to free them from the Atlanta penitentiary on the basis of paroles issued to them in 1947 but revoked a year later after a congressional committee investigation.

The men, Louis Compagna and Charles Gioe, contended the parole laws had been misconstrued by the U. S. circuit court of New Orleans.

The two were sentenced in U. S. district court in New York to 10 years each for conspiracy to extort money from movie producers. They served a third of their terms in the Atlanta prison, then were paroled Aug. 13, 1947 by the U. S. Parole Board.

An investigation of the two cases and of parole board procedures was made by a house executive expenditures subcommittee, after which the board revoked the paroles. The justice department, in an appeal to the circuit court in New Orleans, contended parole is not a legal right but a matter of grace. The circuit court ruled in favor of the department, causing the two men to appeal to the high tribunal.

ACREAGE INJURED FARMERS' BENEFIT

Arkansas Congressman Explains Proposed Allotment Act Amendment

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Representative Gathings (D.- Ark.) said today that the cotton acreage allotment act amendment approved by the house agriculture committee in no way cuts any allotment made for 1950.

It only provides machinery to add acreage to farmers whose cotton acreages have been deeply cut, he said

"The amendment is intended solely to relieve hardship cases for 1950," said Gathings, a member of the house cotton subcommittee which approved the amendment agreed on yesterday by the full committee.

The amendment, in effect, limits the cut of any individual allotment to 30 per cent.

"The committee in reporting out the bill had in mind aiding those farmers who had been cut drastically and not to reduce acreage allotted to farmers who were satisfied with the allotment given them."

He told a reporter he had received some inquires from farmers who erroneously thought the 40 per cent provision in the act would force them to take cuts in their previously announced allotments.

This proviso is that whenever an allotment is increased under the legislation so that the cut is not more than 30 per cent, the allotment cannot exceed 40 per cent of the tilled area in the farm.

However, Gathings said, "the bill would not in any way affect cotton allotments made to farmers in those counties having a higher cotton factor than 40 per cent of the tilled acres on the farms."

Gathings also said that under the bill "the farmer who voluntarily surrenders his acreage for use in the county would be considered to have planted the acreage and the person to whom the acreage is transferred would get no credit for the particular acreage" in setting up further allotments.

"It was provided, however, that no implied promise on the part of congress was intended should it be determined at a later date that the acreage surrendered may not be counted in setting up allotments for future years," he said.

RETURNS TO DUTY

Cpl. Albert Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Bagwell, West Monroe, has returned to service in California following a visit home. Cpl. Rogers' recent visit here was preceded by one and one-half years foreign duty. He entered the service Jan. 12, 1948 and was dispatched overseas in the following April. Besides his parents, he visited his brother, Dude Rogers, also of West Monroe.

Southwest Arkansas Is In Flood Danger

SHREVEPORT, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Southwestern Arkansas in the vicinity of the Little river is in danger of being flooded by Saturday night, according to officials of the Shreveport Weather Station.

The Sulphur river in east Texas is also expected to rise well above flood stage, the meteorologists said, and water is expected to spill into the bottom lands near Naples, Texas, and spread south for about 75 miles.

However, the flood waters in both instances are expected to be contained in the narrow bottom lands around the river basins. Chief Meteorologist B. P. Hughes, of the Shreveport Weather Station, said the waters probably will not flood over two or three miles in the widest parts of the basins.

"There is no danger of Red river overflowing at this time," Hughes said tonight. "The Red still has lots of capacity yet and is able tot take these flood waters. The only danger is later on when more rain comes. If the Red river is filled near capacity, other heavy rains this month or next May prove to be a serious threat."

The mayors of the twin cities called upon all the residents of Ouachita parish to join in supporting workers in behalf of the March of Dimes.

Mrs. Montez Baur, serving as chairman of the dance, stated "I know of no finer way of helping the polio fund than to attend this dance. You will not only be assured of a pleasant evening but you will also have a part in helping a great cause and we all realize the vital need to join hands in the fight against polio. The Nomads of Avrudaka of Swami Santha No. 102 feel very honored to have this opportunity to help in this way for such a worthy cause and all proceeds will go to help benefit some unfortunate victim of polio."

The following is the proclamation to the citizens of Ouachita parish signed by the honorable Mayor's John E. Coon and C. C. Bell, Jr.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas, at no time before in the history of the United States has infantile paralysis placed so heavy a burden on community after community, striking down loved ones in family after family, and,

WHEREAS, so severe were the epidemic outbreaks, that the toll for 1949 was upwards of 40,000 cases — most widespread of all time: and,

WHEREAS, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in performing its heroic work of salvaging the stricken, expended $100,00 daily at the eight of the epidemic to pay for aid needed by polio patients, and,

WHEREAS, the bill for polio care for those attacked by this disease—for the year 1949 alone—will approximate $31,000,000, and

WHEREAS, the national foundation's funds are now virtually depleted and the organization is dependent upon the 1950 March of Dimes, Jan. 14-31, for sufficient money to carry on the fight against this enemy of the little ones,

BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED, that each and everyone of us do all in his power to make the 1950 MARCH OF DIMES a founation of financial aid from which the national foundation may draw renewed strength to continue its work of mercy for all whom infantile paralysis may menace.

So THEREFORE I, MAYOR JOHN COON OF MONROE, LOUISIANA AND I, C. C. BELL, JR., OF WEST MONROE, LA., do proclaim and endorse Jan. 14-31 as a time for every citizen of Ouachita parish to contribute to the success of the 1950 March of Dimes, and the health and welfare of our children.

Signed

JOHN E. COON
C. C. BELL, JR.

Woman Under Bond After Collision

A 32-year-old West Monroe woman was released under $550 bond following her arrest late Friday by Monroe police for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, causing personal injury and property damage.

She was identified as Doris Jarrell Ingram, 32, of 510 Stella street, West Monroe.

Police said Mrs. Ingram crashed into the rear of a car driven by Donald Blank Caldwell, shortly after 4 p. m. in the 100 block of Louisville avenue. Mrs. J. W. Caldwell, wife of Police Chief Jeff Caldwell of West Monroe, an occupant in the car with her son, was taken to Graves-Snellings Clinic for treatment and later released.

Both vehicles were considerably damaged, according to police reports.

Two Seek Freedom From Atlanta Prison

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Two Chicagoans today asked the supreme court to free them from the Atlanta penitentiary on the basis of paroles issued to them in 1947 but revoked a year later after a congressional committee investigation.

The men, Louis Compagna and Charles Gioe, contended the parole laws had been misconstrued by the U. S. circuit court of New Orleans.

The two were sentenced in U. S. district court in New York to 10 years each for conspiracy to extort money from movie producers. They served a third of their terms in the Atlanta prison, then were paroled Aug. 13, 1947 by the U. S. Parole Board.

An investigation of the two cases and of parole board procedures was made by a house executive expenditures subcommittee, after which the board revoked the paroles. The justice department, in an appeal to the circuit court in New Orleans, contended parole is not a legal right but a matter of grace. The circuit court ruled in favor of the department, causing the two men to appeal to the high tribunal.

ACREAGE INJURED FARMERS' BENEFIT

Arkansas Congressman Explains Proposed Allotment Act Amendment

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Representative Gathings (D.- Ark.) said today that the cotton acreage allotment act amendment approved by the house agriculture committee in no way cuts any allotment made for 1950.

It only provides machinery to add acreage to farmers whose cotton acreages have been deeply cut, he said

"The amendment is intended solely to relieve hardship cases for 1950," said Gathings, a member of the house cotton subcommittee which approved the amendment agreed on yesterday by the full committee.

The amendment, in effect, limits the cut of any individual allotment to 30 per cent.

"The committee in reporting out the bill had in mind aiding those farmers who had been cut drastically and not to reduce acreage allotted to farmers who were satisfied with the allotment given them."

He told a reporter he had received some inquires from farmers who erroneously thought the 40 per cent provision in the act would force them to take cuts in their previously announced allotments.

This proviso is that whenever an allotment is increased under the legislation so that the cut is not more than 30 per cent, the allotment cannot exceed 40 per cent of the tilled area in the farm.

However, Gathings said, "the bill would not in any way affect cotton allotments made to farmers in those counties having a higher cotton factor than 40 per cent of the tilled acres on the farms."

Gathings also said that under the bill "the farmer who voluntarily surrenders his acreage for use in the county would be considered to have planted the acreage and the person to whom the acreage is transferred would get no credit for the particular acreage" in setting up further allotments.

"It was provided, however, that no implied promise on the part of congress was intended should it be determined at a later date that the acreage surrendered may not be counted in setting up allotments for future years," he said.

Besides his parents, he visited his brother, Dude Rogers, also of West Monroe.

Southwest Arkansas Is In Flood Danger

SHREVEPORT, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Southwestern Arkansas in the vicinity of the Little river is in danger of being flooded by Saturday night, according to officials of the Shreveport Weather Station.

The Sulphur river in east Texas is also expected to rise well above flood stage, the meteorologists said, and water is expected to spill into the bottom lands near Naples, Texas, and spread south for about 75 miles.

However, the flood waters in both instances are expected to be contained in the narrow bottom lands around the river basins. Chief Meteorologist B. P. Hughes, of the Shreveport Weather Station, said the waters probably will not flood over two or three miles in the widest parts of the basins.

"There is no danger of Red river overflowing at this time," Hughes said tonight. "The Red still has lots of capacity yet and is able tot take these flood waters. The only danger is later on when more rain comes. If the Red river is filled near capacity, other heavy rains this month or next May prove to be a serious threat."

CAMELLIA SHOW BEING PLANNED

Lafayette Makes Ready For Gorgeous Pageant For 17th Annual Time

LAFAYETTE, La., Jan. 14.—(Special)—The training and talent of at least 15 specialists on the Southwestern Institute faculty are being used in the preparation of the 17th annual Southwestern Camellia pageant.

The glittering costumer show will be presented at 8:15 p. m. Friday, January 20, in the new Blackham coliseum on the Lafayette - Abbeville highway.

The pageant organization for 1950 is again headed by H. K. Riley of the Southwestern College of Agriculture, sponsors of the affair. Professor Riley has been director of the shows since 1947. He succeeded the late Miss Emily Huger, head of the S. L. I. art department, who in 1946 was crowned honorary queen of the camellias in recognition of her long service and effort on behalf of the annual pageants.

Director of the 1950 show is Willis F. Ducrest, head of the S. L. I. music department, whose outstanding singin voice and direction of chorus groups at Southwestern has won him a wide-spread reputation as a soloist and music educator.

The southwestern camellia pageants have established an enviable reputation for color, glamour, glitter, exquisite costuming and state designing as well as for music and dancing. And the 1950 show will hold up this reputation.

Costumes are again being designed and made by home economic students under direction of Miss Marie Caillet, assister by Miss Faenelia Hicks, both assistant professors of the home economics staff.

The stage setting and all stage designing and art work necessary for the show is being done by R. L. Stephan, assistant professor of art, and art students.

Music, as usual, will play as great a part in the extravaganza as will dancing, costuming and elaborate decorations. Director Ducrest will be in general charge of the scores, but he will have as assistant an orchestra director, George Barth, conductor of the S. L. I. symphony orchestra. The symphony will provide all instrumental music for the show and will perform the difficult job of "bridging" and changing the pace of the show as the action swings from one episode to another.

Natchitoches Girl Receives Watermelon On Dr.'s Orders

HOUSTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A 13-year-old Natchitoches, La., girl whose doctor ordered that she eat watermelon in midwinter had the prescription filled yesterday.

Dozens of people volunteered to obtain the melons after reading of the illness of Marguerite Freeman, victim of a kidney infection.

Several melons were flown to Louisiana today.

Troy Beeson, Marguerite's uncle, had asked the Houston Post to publish a story. He said his phone began ringing at 6 a. m. and rang about 500 times during the day.

Saul Taylor, branch manager of a produce company, arranged to have several melons flown in from Mexico City. George Nacol of another produce firm rushed an order to Havana, Cuba.

A few melons came through in a hurry. An air line flew them to Shreveport, where they were picked up by Monroe Beeson and taken to Natchitoches.

Marguerite's mother, Mrs. Myrtle Freeman, tonight talked to the Post by telephone.

She quoted her daughter as saying, when advised that melons were being sent by plane:

"Oh, boy, I believe I will get well now."

"I always thought Texans were all right," Mrs. Freeman said, "but now I know they are wonderful."

Children's Home Choir To Sing

The Louisiana Baptist Children's home choir will render a special music program at Ridge Avenue Church Sunday night.

This fine youth choir has been trained by Mrs. A. C. Faircloth and the Baptist home for orphan children are making good progress in school and later in life as they go out into the world, assures Rev. A. T. Mitchell, pastor of Ridge Avenue Church.

Reverend Mitchell states that there are now 140 children in the home and many others seek admission and can not be taken because of limited facilities. He believes that more such institutions would mean less juvenile crime waves in the nation.

Natchitoches Girl Receives Watermelon On Dr.'s Orders

HOUSTON, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A 13-year-old Natchitoches, La., girl whose doctor ordered that she eat watermelon in midwinter had the prescription filled yesterday.

Dozens of people volunteered to obtain the melons after reading of the illness of Marguerite Freeman, victim of a kidney infection.

Several melons were flown to Louisiana today.

Troy Beeson, Marguerite's uncle, had asked the Houston Post to publish a story. He said his phone began ringing at 6 a. m. and rang about 500 times during the day.

Saul Taylor, branch manager of a produce company, arranged to have several melons flown in from Mexico City. George Nacol of another produce firm rushed an order to Havana, Cuba.

A few melons came through in a hurry. An air line flew them to Shreveport, where they were picked up by Monroe Beeson and taken to Natchitoches.

Marguerite's mother, Mrs. Myrtle Freeman, tonight talked to the Post by telephone.

She quoted her daughter as saying, when advised that melons were being sent by plane:

"Oh, boy, I believe I will get well now."

"I always thought Texans were all right," Mrs. Freeman said, "but now I know they are wonderful."

Children's Home Choir To Sing

The Louisiana Baptist Children's home choir will render a special music program at Ridge Avenue Church Sunday night.

This fine youth choir has been trained by Mrs. A. C. Faircloth and the Baptist home for orphan children are making good progress in school and later in life as they go out into the world, assures Rev. A. T. Mitchell, pastor of Ridge Avenue Church.

Reverend Mitchell states that there are now 140 children in the home and many others seek admission and can not be taken because of limited facilities. He believes that more such institutions would mean less juvenile crime waves in the nation.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES

by GEORGE WUNDER

HMMM...WONDER IF THE DRAGON LADY WAS RIGHT, TERRY. MAYBE WE DID HAVE A YEN TO PUSH BACK AT A SYSTEM THAT COULD PUSH THIS OLD CHINESE AROUND.

POOR OLD GUY! ACTS DAZED. PROBABLY DOESN'T EVEN KNOW HE'S PASSENGER NUMBER ONE ON THE UNDERGROUND'S AIRLINE.

MUST HAVE TAKEN HIS LAST SPARK TO REACH THIS OLD AIRSTRIP, EVEN IF IT IS JUST THIS SIDE OF THE BORDER.

MIGHTY CONVENIENT OF THAT OIL PROSPECTING OUTFIT TO BUILD AND THEN ABANDON IT — SO THE D.L.'S MEN COULD WALK IN.

REAL, FANCY-TYPE OPERATION. THESE BRANCH OFFICE JOES EVEN MANAGE TO KEEP THE RUNWAY CLEAR.

UH, HUH...BETTER MAKE SACK TIME, HOTSHOT. WE'LL TAKE OFF BEFORE THERE'S VISIBILITY ENOUGH TO SPOT US FROM THE OTHER SIDE.

AND WHEN THE FIRST, PALE DAWN BREAKS.

O.K., YOU MEN! HELP HIM ABOARD.

LATER

BETTER CHECK THOSE PAPERS FROM THE D.L.'S DUMMY COVER-UP COMPANY, IN CASE THERE ARE LIFTED EYEBROWS WHEN WE ARRIVE, CHAZZ.

THEY'RE O.K. WE'RE FLYING A CARGO OF VALUABLE NATIVE RUGS CONSIGNED TO "UNUSUAL EXPORTS, INC".

SOON AS WE GET IN, THE UNDERGROUND'S LOCAL MEN OFF-LOAD THE BALES — INCLUDING OUR PASSENGER, NEATLY WRAPPED IN A GEN-U-INE ORIENTAL HALL CARPET!

WHY THE GLAZED STARE, CHUM? NOBODY'LL GIVE US A SECOND GLANCE.

THE PLOT'S O.K., TERRY. THERE'S JUST SOMETHING ABOUT THAT OLD GENT...

MEANWHILE, AT THE PLANE'S DESTINATION...

···SO THAT ALL THE RANGERS AND CREWS WOULD BE AWAY FIGHTING THE FIRES AND WOULDN'T BE AROUND HERE TO INTERFERE WITH THE TREE THIEVES!

JACK

MY SAWMILLS HAVE ENOUGH TIMBER TO KEEP MY CREWS BUSY FOR A FEW DAYS! LET'S FLY TO THE AIR MANEUVERS AT MIAMI, HOT-ROD!

FLYING TOO CLOSE TO FIRES CAN BE MOST DISASTROUS.

THE HEAT CAUSES EXTREME THERMAL UP AND DOWN DRAFTS AND VACUUMS WHICH CAN DISTURB THE LIFT ON THE WINGS!

SUDDENLY, JACK'S PLANE IS THROWN HELPLESSLY OUT OF CONTROL!

JACK MOSLEY 1/15

···FRANTICALLY, JACK WRESTLES WITH THE BLANKED-OUT CONTROLS, BUT IT IS AS FUTILE···
